The house has an evergreen hedge around it and the buildings are in thorough repair. There is a fruit orchard of 300 apple trees, 20 cherry trees and as many pear trees—and a nursery with 1500 young apple trees. From the grape vines on the place fifteen bushels of fruit have been sold in a season, besides abundance retained for home use. Part of the land heavily wooded and there is a great quantity of muck on the estate. In the pasture there is a never-failing spring. The farm is situated midway between depots of Eastern and Concord railroads. For sale at a bargain, if enquired for immediately,—of O. G. ROBINSON, on the premises, or Butler & Leighton, Market Square, or Bailey & Co., Market street. jel

The Word "Canard."

The origin of the word canard (French for duck,) when used to signify some unfounded story, is not generally known. The following are the terms in which M. Guetelet relates, in the Annuaire de l' Academie, the manner in which the word became used in a new sense:

To give a sky lift at the ridiculous pieces of intelligence which the journals are in the habit of publishing every morning. Cornelison stated that an interesting experiment had just been calculated to prove the extraordinary voracity of ducks. Twenty of these animals had been placed together, and one of them having been killed and cut up into the smallest possible pieces, feathers and all, and thrown to the other nineteen, had been gluttonously gobbled up in an exceedingly short time.

Another was taken from the nineteen, and being chopped small like its predecessor, was served up to eighteen, and at once devoured like the other; and so on to the last who was thus placed in the position of having eaten his nineteen companions in a wonderfully short time. All this most pleasantly narrated, obtained a success which the writer was far from anticipating, for the story ran the rounds of all the journals in Europe. It then became almost forgotten for about a score of years, when it came back from America, with amplifications which it did not boast of at the commencement, and with a regular certificate of the autopsy of the body of the surviving animal, whose œsophagus was declared to have been found seriously injured. Every one laughed at the history of the canard thus brought up again, but the word retains its novel significance.

—Waggish propensities are dangerous, even in the canine race. A Texas dog vibrated his tail in welcome at the approach of his master, and in so doing knocked a lamp off the table, and set the house on fire.

—The Marquette Journal says a Chocolay farmer was in that city last spring and purchased all the Limburgher cheese he could find. It now transpires that he planted the whole of it with his potatoes, a small quantity in each hill, and as a consequence his crop has thus far escaped the ravages of the potato bugs. They go as far as the fence, get a scent's worth of the cheese, turn up their noses in disgust, and hie them away to other pastures.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH of the City of Portsmouth call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the City to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER 10.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vendor of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 10. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 20. No person shall use or occupy any building in the compact part of the city for a slaughter-house, or for boiling tallow, or for currying leather, or for the deposit of green pelts or skins, unless under such restrictions and regulations as the health officers may impose.

SEC. 22. Any person or persons who shall violate any rule or regulation, or commit any act forbidden in any section of this ordinance, to which no special penalty is annexed, shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty dollars, to be recovered by complaint before the police court of this city.

SEC. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice to the Health Officers.

SEC. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for such refusal or neglect, forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the Health Officers in the name of the city. m6 d3m

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the system. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon. This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution. Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial. See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD. This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Sillingia and Mandrake with the iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Somnolence and General Debility. With their departure, health returns. PREPARED BY DR. J. C. AYER & CO., LOWELL, MASS., Practical and Analytical Chemists. Sold by all druggists and dealers in medicine. 2 aug12 eod

Ayer's Hair Vigor.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR. Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately, often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus beauty, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and stabilized; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible. As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts. PREPARED BY DR. J. C. AYER & CO., LOWELL, MASS., Practical and Analytical Chemists. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. 4aug3 eod&w

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care. Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong. As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable. Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes." BUCKINGHAM'S DYE, FOR THE WHISKERS. This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. A Ute Scalp Dance.

[Denver (Col.) paper.]

About three o'clock yesterday afternoon, our reporter went over to the Ute camp, situated about four miles from Denver, and about three miles from the Larimer street bridge over the Platte. Already preparations had commenced for the grand scalp glorification, one of the redskins having manufactured a drum by stretching a deer-skin over the rim of a cheese box. Three other drums were soon manufactured; a frying pan, a tin lard can, and a brass kettle being used for the bodies of the drums. Having covered his face with paint, the fellow with the tin drum laid down in his tent and commenced practicing the weird music of the scalp dance. He was soon joined by others, when the scalps taken from the Sioux were brought to the front of the tent, and poles to which they were attached stuck in the ground, while the scalps swayed to and fro in the breeze. One by one the braves gathered around, decorated with their best trappings covered with beads, and painted with red, yellow, green, brown and white. About an hour before sundown and before many chiefs had returned from Denver, the scalp poles were pulled up, and the dusky warriors selected a portion of the prairie remote from any wigwam, where they again fixed the poles about four feet from each other. Then they sat down in a line on the ground with their backs to the setting sun and their faces to the blood-stained swaying scalps, and commenced a strange chant, beating time upon the drums with sticks, which had for heads leaves secured to one end with pliant twigs. About a half hour they thus sat chanting, when the squaws begin to collect, equally as extravagantly attired and painted.

About thirty had gathered around, when the squaw of the brave who had killed one of the Sioux stepped in front, took one of the scalp-poles, and commenced to march in a circle in front of the musicians, adding at the same time the shrillness of her voice to make the din unearthly. One by one the squaws fell in behind the scalp-bearer, until about a dozen were making the magic circle.

Then up comes another squaw and takes another pole and starts a procession, moving in a reverse direction to that taken by the first. Upon the arrival of Washington, one of the chiefs, who seemed to know just how the thing should be done, three of the oldest squaws in the tribe formed a third procession, moving inside the others, and in the same direction as the outside circle. And now drops into line with the outside circle the third scalp-bearer, and her followlowers. Korakantie, seemingly the oldest chief in the collection, advanced in front of the braves—who arose to their feet upon the advent of the women—and proceeds to dance. A crier also advances to the front, and commences to harangue the braves.

On the open prairie, just as the sun is sinking behind the mountains, half a hundred Indian warriors with faces rendered savagely fierce with paint, and garments of flaming colors, are standing in a line which sways to and fro in time to beating of drums and the change in tone of the fiendish music of the scalp chant. In front of these the veteran gray-haired warrior of the tribe dances with strange antics, and the stalwart form of a huge brave is bent in all conceivable shapes, as he in loud and excited words recounts the circumstances of the capture and exhorts the men. In front of all the magic circles the squaws move round, the scalps streaming above their heads, being beaten in the dust with revengeful fury or held in their teeth, when the savage grin is most intense and the chant most uproarious. Their march is of a limping nature, each procession giving way with the same leg, in strange unison to the swaying of the braves. These things together with the weird music only known among savages, when at regular intervals the shrill voices of the women rises above those of the men, and occasionally the startling war-whoop rings loud over all, render the scene one never to be forgotten.

About fifteen hundred persons must have visited the camp and witnessed the scalp dance, which continued for many hours, and to which Washington, in the name of the tribe, welcomed all white folks, "both braves and squaws," as he expressed it.

Too Much Conscience for a Waiter.

A Saratoga correspondent of the New York Evening Post has been interviewing his barber, who says of the negroes who gather at the Springs in the summer:

"Dey a' most all waiters, sah. I was in dat profession myself when I fus come heah." "Do you find it better to be a barber?" I asked. "Wal, sah, it am moah pummanent. Waiters only gets tree months' livin' any way, and I has business all de year roun. Annodder thing. Waitin business is kin' o' undignified. You has to depend on moah dan yer wages; you has to be kin' a' hangin' roun' and puttin' out yer hand to git fees, an' it kin' o' goes agin' a fellah's conscience when he has to fetch all the good things to his boss what pays him, and let de nex poodh fellah starve, cause he haint got no money. So I quit an' went to barberin."

The Great Scandal.

Mr. Shearman, clerk of Plymouth church, says Mr. Moulton has nothing to say prejudicial to Mr. Beecher, but that it is for the interest of Mr. Moulton not to speak. Victoria Woodhull and Tennie C. Claflin called on the investigating committee, Friday evening, to offer their testimony; but it was declined. Mr. Beecher's testimony is completed and is said to be startling. His friends claim that it fully refuets Mr. Tilton's charges. Susan B. Anthony declines to affirm or deny the statements attributed to her by Mrs. Stanton and her brother, D. R. Anthony. She said, "If I did say it, it was very ungracious of them to repeat it. If I did not it is worse of them to make it up." Being asked if she would go before the Plymouth church committee if summoned, she replied decidedly, "No; what I have to say will be said only before a tribunal competent to deal with the matter and able to compel unwilling utterance."

Beecher and Tilton.

The wearying and painful Beecher-Tilton war, after years of preliminary skirmishing and weeks of actual hard fighting, is not yet settled,—in the only way in which a settlement is now possible, either by the branding of Henry Ward Beecher as a base hypocrite and a libertine, or the branding of Theodore Tilton as a liar and slanderer of the most magnificent proportions. The man who from a perusal of the daily papers can decide justly the exact amount of blame due either or all the parties to this lamentable affair, would have been able to understand the famous Schleswig-Holstein question or the Brooks-Baxter war in Arkansas,—apparently reputable witnesses testifying point blank in opposition to each other, persons hitherto supposed to possess common sense speaking and writing twaddle, persons of infamous character nobly endersing people of high reputation, and contradiction and mystery abounding in all directions.

Beecher has stood high; fearless, impulsive, eloquent and outspoken, he has wielded a vast influence, and for good; yet he is charged with having deliberately and persistently made use of his position as a Christian teacher to dishonor his friend, and to have coolly trampled under his feet the laws of morality and of man for the gratification of a guilty passion. A criminal, even though of the vilest reputation, is allowed a fair hearing before he is condemned for any specified crime; and there is no valid reason why a man of previous good reputation should not have as fair a show for the preservation of his good name as a sneak thief or burglar has for his liberty. To adjudge Beecher guilty on the strength of an accusation only, before his side of the question has been heard, is therefore manifestly unfair; and there can be no reasonable cause for complaint because he seems to move slowly in his defence, his assailants having taken all the time they wanted to prepare their assault.

Beecher denies the truth of Tilton's allegations, and Mrs. Tilton does the same; this course would be but natural, even if they are really guilty—much more natural than the incomprehensible course attributed to them by Tilton, of acknowledging their guilt and shame by word and letter to all sorts of people and on many occasions,—a style of doing business not often in favor with unfaithful wives and their paramours, outside the Woodhull "social republic." The published letters of Beecher—if genuine—will stand a great deal of explanation; but they must be explained, and fully and satisfactorily, or Beecher must go down. If Beecher wrote those letters, and repeatedly acknowledged his guilt, as alleged, he of course knew that any investigation must result in his ruin; and admitting a tithe of Tilton's statements to be true, it would seem that Beecher could have been driven to ask an investigation only by the recklessness of absolute despair.

The gossip of sensational newspaper reporters, and the statements of such creatures as the Woodhull will carry weight only with those who would be sorry to have Beecher come out of this trial unscathed; and Mrs. Tilton's unequivocal denial of her husband's charges proves merely that if she ever did publicly confess to Beecher's guilt and her own shame and dishonor, she is not willing to confess anything of the kind now. Tilton's talk about his wife having sinned yet still retained her purity is the veriest bosh, for she is not an idiot by any means, and no evidence to convict her of free-love advocacy has been adduced.

At least one New York paper has suggested that Tilton is insane. Well, if he has suffered but a fraction of what he says he has, for the last few years, the wonder is he has any mind left to be affected; but Tilton's insanity or immorality, if proved, would be no excuse for Beecher's wrongdoing, and those damaging letters are not insane, if Tilton is, or if their writers were when they so idiotically put themselves in the power of those they had so terribly wronged, according to Tilton's statement. Tilton's story about his fruitless attempts to hush up the scandal, for the sake of his wife and children, is very pathetic; but it does not seem to agree very well with his repeated revivals of it just when it seemed entirely dead. And some people wonder, if all charged against Beecher and Mrs. Tilton is true, why conduct which was "blameless purity" in Victoria Woodhull should be infamous in Mrs. Tilton, and why social theories openly advocated as pure by Tilton should seem to him to be so infamous when reduced to practice by Henry Ward Beecher. It is a strange piece of business all through. But however inconsistent Tilton may have been, whatever his motives—whether to save himself or to destroy an enemy—in pursuing Beecher, the latter's defence and explanations must be complete and convincing. Not the ruin of Theodore Tilton, but the proof of Beecher's innocence, is necessary to save the great preacher of Plymouth Church; that such proof can be produced we hope.

Interesting Case.

[Concord Patriot.]

An interesting case was before the Probate Court on Wednesday, it being on a petition of Miss Flora Williams, who is nineteen years of age, for the appointment of a guardian. The story of the matter, which would make excellent material for a novelist, is in brief as follows: Flora Williams has lived with the Shakers at Canterbury, since she was five years old, having been placed there by her father who had boarded there most of the time, till his death, which took place last fall or Winter, but he never joined the Community as a member of the order. Frederick Williams' wife, Flora's mother, died when Flora was very small. Sometime recently her grandmother, Melancy Williams, who lived in Roston, died, leaving a will, one of the provisions of which was th t the income of certain property which she left should be applied for the use of her son Frederick and his daughter Flora, as her two children, Edward G. Williams, who lives in London, and Florentha Williams, might see fit; giving them either the whole, or a portion or none, as they should choose.

By the death of Frederick, all the income goes to Flora, provided Floraotha and Edward choose to give it to her. Flora has relatives in various parts of the country, who are people of wealth, and are desirous that she shall leave the Shakers, and have the advantages and benefits her money would naturally bring her.

Flora made the application for the appointment of a guardian, which her relatives resisted on the ground that the guardian, who was asked for, was in the interest of the Shakers and because they believed that the best interests of the young lady required that she should have the education and advantages, which her ample income will allow her. As stated, the matter was brought before the Probate Court, and the aunt of the young lady desired a private interview with her, to which the Shakers objected on the ground that their regulations forbid any minor having a private interview with anyone not connected with the Society. Subsequently they gave permission to the girl, if she desired to have an interview, but she declined, in the presence of the court and the Shakers. Charles Woodman, of this city, the guardian of her selection, was chosen and there the matter rests.

On Friday, one of the most exciting and successful "corners" in corn was made in Chicago. The price of corn fell from 67 to 62 cents, again rising to 80 cents, the latter price being bid by the prime mover of the plot, Jack Sturgis—and it is understood that 600,000 bushels sold at the latter price have not been delivered. It is said that 7,000,000 bushels are controlled by the combination.

Maverick square, East Boston, has a curiosity, says the Traveller. Thousands of peculiar insects, generally of green color, about the size of the horse-fly, have taken up their abode among the trees in that locality. Their mission seems to be the destruction of flies. They exude a viscid substance which attracts the flies for some distance around, and to such an extent that none are found in the houses in the immediate vicinity. The exudation holds every fly touching it, while the insect quietly inserts a barbed tongue in the body of the fly and completely eviscerates it. The remains of an immense number of flies lie upon the ground beneath the trees where these insects are doing their work.

Mr. McCulloch's Views.

Mr. McCulloch, Secretary of the Treasury in Andrew Johnson's time, has lately returned from Europe to his native Indiana, and has been interviewed by a newspaper reporter who thus catechised him about the new currency bill:

Reporter—What do you think, Mr. McCulloch, of the new financial bill and its effect upon the country?

Mr. McCulloch—My opinion is that the bill will have very little effect upon the business of the country. It is a compromise measure, and certainly not a step toward specie payments, while it accomplishes very little if anything in the opposite direction.

R.—You favor, I believe, the resumption of specie payments as soon as practicable?

McC.—I do; but I believe the country neglected the best opportunity she has had to accomplish resumption.

R.—What was that?

McC.—Directly after the close of the war. It was, I believe, in the winter of 1865-66 that I sent a communication to Congress recommending the adoption of a policy which would lead to early resumption; Congress passed a resolution, I think, in December, 1866, indorsing my views, and I still think it would have been better if the policy then suggested had been carried out.

R.—What policy did you recommend?

McC.—I did not favor the sudden withdrawal of a large amount of currency, or any violent measure which would tend to disarrange the business of the country. I had $1,100,000,000 or $1,200,000,000 of short time paper about to mature, which it would have been difficult to provide for had there been any interruption to the regular business of the country. I then believed, and still believe, there were certain seasons of the year at which the volume of currency could be diminished without affecting general interests. I favored a policy which would gradually, but surely, appreciate the value of the currency and bring things nearer a solid basis. The only class who would have felt this measure to any extent was the debtor class, and, as we owe more now than then, that was the the favorable moment.

R.—What would you recommend as the best policy to pursue at present?

McC.—I do not think much legislation advisable at present. I believe in doing everything to appreciate the value of the currency by encouraging industry, discouraging extravagance and speculation, and inducing a return of business matters to a normal and healthy basis. I believe that our country ought to be the creditor and not the debtor nation. With our magnificent resources, our immense productions, and our almost unlimited possibilities, our exports should exceed our imports. Wise policy will soon bring this about without the intercession of the unjust tariff, and when this state of affairs is brought about bullion will flow into the country, and specie payment will be an easy matter.

—It is said that sun-stroke may be prevented by mixing oatmeal with the drinking water of persons, and cornmeal with the drinking water of horses, and that these very simple remedies have been used with the best effect by all the street railroad companies of New York. Curing versus Cobbling.

There are many medicines that give transient relief in sickness without touching the source and seat of the complaint. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is not one of these. The great tonic and restorative does not cobble the diseased and enfeebled system. It is not a mere palliative, that only temporarily controls a few unpleasant symptoms. No, its invigorating, regulating, restorative principle penetrates to the very source of the difficulty in the fluids and solids of the body, and hence its cures are radical and thorough. In dyspepsia it strengthens the stomach, in liver complaint it regulates the flow of bile, in constipation it promotes a punctual habit of body, in nervous ailments it tones the sentiments and motive fibres, in rheumatism it connecrates pain, and in cases of general debility rehabilitates the emaciated frame.

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Local Matters.

Important Notice.

PER ORDER.

Laconics.

Don't forget the dramatic entertainment at the Temple, to-morrow evening.

The report detaching Commander Eastman, Lieut. Comd'r McCook and Sailmaker Seaman from duty at this naval station is untrue.

The Saturday evening trains brought a thousand or two visitors to Portsmouth and vicinity. The train arriving here at 5.40 had two engines and twenty cars. The Beach houses were all full on Sunday.

The following ward committee for the second ward was chosen at a meeting held at the CHRONICLE office, Saturday evening: John Pehder, James A. Waterhouse, Albert W. Rix, William Livingstone, Willis L. Hidden, Charles A. Wendell, Leonidas F. Rand, Stephen T. Raitt, William Critchley, Jr., Robert King, John H. Locke, John H. Slater, Elbridge G. Peirce, Jr., William C. Ham, Thos. J. Mitchell, James M. Knapp, Alfred M. Lang.

The Sunday train from Boston to this city consisted of seven cars and brought the Herald and a moderate number of passengers, most of those who left Boston or were taken on board at other places getting out at Salisbury or Hampton. The train arrived here shortly before 11 o'clock, and left for Boston at 4:15 P. M. A train will be run for the next three Sundays, leaving Boston at 8:15.

Naval Constructors W. L. Hanscom, Theodore D. Wilson and Samuel M. Pook have been appointed a Board for the examination of persons to be Assistant Naval Constructors, and are to convene at this station next week for that purpose. It is quite complimentary to Constructor Wilson, and conveys a double compliment by placing him on the Board and selecting the station where he has charge as Constructor as the place for the examination. We are glad it is so, from the fact that Mr. Wilson, although here but a short time, has made friends of all with whom he has had dealings, officers and employees speaking in the highest terms of his mechanical abilities as well as genial disposition.

Both the Boston & Maine and Eastern Railroads, by direction of the joint Board of Managers, resume the 3:30 P. M. and 6 P. M. trains from Boston to Portland, and vice versa, to-day.

By request of the executors of the late Mrs. Cutts of this city, who left $20,000 several years ago for the improvement of Richards Avenue, the Board of Aldermen will give them a hearing on Tuesday, August 11.

Both hotels at the Shoals were filled to overflowing, Sunday. Many of the Oceanic guests were quartered in the cottages on Star Island. The hops were largely attended, Saturday evening. The season is now at its height, there being nearly 1100 guests at Appledore and Star islands.

Mr. Payson Tucker has entered the service of the Eastern Railroad as conductor.

The Nashua Telegraph thinks that this city should go unanimously republican at the coming election "as a signal rebuke to the democratic majority in the legislature for its useless and senseless intermeddling." It has already served to make every heretofore lukewarm republican in the city an active and efficient partizan.

"Cash Here."

[N. Y. Com. Advertiser.]

The apparent aim of our merchants is to construct and conduct their shops in a manner to render them perfect in convenience and comfort, thereby relieving customers, in as great measure as is possible, of fatigue and annoyance. This effort is particularly evident in the large retail establishments, where ladies can make the purchases for their households in two hours, which would have required the same number of days to complete in former years, when each store contained but a certain line of goods, and a shopping excursion was a wearisome tramp from one to another. Everything is comprised in the stock of our leading stores from shoes to bonnets, and all of the small wares which come under the head of "thread and needles." Shoppers are treated with tender consideration. Elevators slide them from one department to another; reception and toilet rooms invite them to rest, and renovating fans and ice-water are provided for refreshment.

Notwithstanding all this consideration, shopping has become a vexation and a nuisance from the cash-boy fiend. The din at each counter from the rapping of pencils to signal the big-headed boys, and the confusion of voices in the spasmodic calls of "Cash here" from clerks, who, with frantic gestures, compete with one another in impressing the services of precocious imps, is extremely wearing on purchasers, who must wait for each bundle, however insignificant, to be sent unfathomable distances to be measured and done up. Not to mention the tortures of beholding collars and cuffs that have been selected for whiteness and stiffness, checked and swung off by the ruthless hands, as if they were junior base balls.

Now the largest outlays of women, by which they collapse their pocketbooks, is in the odds and ends they cull from one counter to another. It has become appalling for them to contemplate the vexation to be undergone to get a yard of lace papered and in their pockets. The formula necessary to obtain a tie is dampening to shopping ardor. The temptation to buy the attractive bijous which are displayed in every conspicuous position, is counterbalanced by the ordeal to be endured before it is in hand. Especially at this season, to persons from out of town, whose time is limited, is the detention of waiting for packages and change distressing. To have but a few moments to spare before catching a train, and to be goaded by the yells of clerks and the tardiness of snail-gailed cash-boys, unstrings the nerves and makes shopping to be dreaded.

—A Connecticut woman was devoutly persuing the family Bible when she observed a rat reconnoitering her position. With a good deal of energy she seized a book from the table and threw it at the intruder, but neither this missile nor another of the same kind dislodged him. Then, however, her ammunition gone and the enemy still cool and defiant, she hurled the good book itself, and like a thunderbolt it fell on that impudent rodent and flattened him out.

—A tall, athletic squaw, six feet in height, straight as a line, walking with long furious strides, may be seen about the streets of Virginia City, Nev., almost any day, always alone and shunned by other Indians. This apparent squaw is an Indian man, sentenced by his tribe to wear woman's habiliments during the remainder of his natural life. He will not converse upon the subject of his degradation with a white man, and the Indians give different accounts of the matter. Some say that he was cowardly and showed a woman's heart in battle, and was consigned to death, but as a greater punishment his sentence was altered into the more terrible one of associating with women only, as long as he lives. Certain it is that the male Indians shun him on all occasions. He has been seen to speak to Indian boys, and even they repulsed his friendly advances with contempt and almost ferocity.

—The Corliss pumping engine for the Providence water works is a marvel of automatic self-regulation. The problem of dispensing with a second reservoir or standpipe for high service, the Corliss Company has solved by the constructing of a unique "table engine," capable of pumping 5,000,000 of gallons of water per diem, or more, if needed. That is to say, if every outlet from the supply pipes distributed over the high service of the city were closed so entirely that no water whatever escaped, the pumping apparatus, remains perfectly at rest; but the instant any appreciable outflow occurs, the machinery, with no human eye intervening, proceeds to supply the waste. It has been known to be over five and a half minutes in making a single revolution, moving regularly all this time, however, and capable of increasing this rate almost immediately to more than thirty revolutions a minute—and all that of its own accord.

—Among the guests at one of our well-known summer resorts is a wealthy bachelor, whose bank account is much better than his orthography. A party of guests were playing a game where a ball made of a handkerchief is thrown from one to the other with the salutation of "Here comes a ship laden with"—; each successive receiver being obliged to name a commodity for cargo beginning with the letters of the alphabet in turn. When the kerchief alighted at the letter K in the bachelor's lap, he shouted "Knockery," which excited a smile, and the game hastily proceeded, when it was found that the word was really given in good faith and not as a joke. The roguishness of a young lady, however, caused the flying messenger to alight in his lap a second time at the letter S, whereat the receiver shouted "Sinnamon" so triumphantly that somehow or other there was so much laughing that it was thought best to try another game.

Square Courtship.

One long summer afternoon there came to Mr. Davidson's the most curious specimen of an old bachelor the world ever heard of. He was old, and gray, wrinkled and odd. He hated old women, especially old maids, and wasn't afraid to say so. He and Aunt Patty had it hot whenever chance drew them together; yet still he came, and it was noticed that Aunt Patty took unusual pains with her dress whenever he was expected.

One day the contest waged unusually strong, and Aunt Patty left in disgust and went out into the garden.

"That bear!" she muttered to herself, as she stopped to gather a flower which attracted her attention.

"What did you run for?" said a gruff voice behind her.

"To get rid of you."

"You didn't do it, did you?"

"No; you are worse than a burdock burr."

"You won't get rid of me, either."

"I won't, eh?"

"Only in one way."

"And that?"

"Marry me."

"What! as two fools get married! What would people say?"

"That's nothing to us. Come, say yes or no; I'm in a hurry."

"Well, no, then."

"Very well; good bye, I shan't come again."

"Stop a bit—what a pucker you're in.

"Yes or no!"

"I must consult—"

"All right; I thought you were of age. Good bye."

Jabez Andrews, don't be a fool. Come back, I say. Why, I believe the critter has taken me for earnest. Jabez Andrews, I'll consider."

"I don't want any considering; I'm going. Becky Hastings is waiting for me. I thought I'd give you the first chance, Patty. All right; good bye."

"Jabez! Jabez! That stuck up Beck Hastings shan't have him! Jabez, yes! Do you hear—Y-e-s!"

George A. Marden, editor of the Lowell Courier, has been chosen to deliver the poem before the Phi Beta Kappa Society of Dartmouth College at the next commencement. The orator has not been named, but will probably be Hon. James W. Patterson.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH of the City of Portsmouth call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the City to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER 10.

SEC. 2. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall carry them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Sy rup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an iron tonic, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron, in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the system. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon as iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot do better than to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brassy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are rendered impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft, lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all scrofulous itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it renders the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

A young man named Smith, belonging in St. Louis, was drowned at Biddeford Pool on Friday. He was unmarried, and about 28 years old.

In 1826 a man named John Morgan killed his wife in Portland, prompted thereto by his wife's moral worthlessness. He then dangerously, and it was thought at first fatally, wounded himself. He survived, however, and in the course of two or three weeks made his escape, probably assisted in so doing, as he was supposed to be helpless. From that day nothing was heard of the departed dying man until a few days since, when a letter was received from a lawyer in New York inquiring for heirs of the said John Morgan. It now appears that after the escape he found his way to New York, where he married and accumulated quite a property. It was in relation to this property that the New York letter was written, and the heirs in Portland and vicinity are preparing to get possession of it.

At Martha's Vineyard, for some weeks, there has been a good deal of scandal in connection with a Mr. Vinson, of Edgarton, and S. K. Elliot, from Worcester, who have occupied a cottage in company with two married women belonging to Edgarton. These men have been threatened with a coat of tar and feathers, and Mr. Vinson, fearing trouble, left the island some weeks ago. Saturday night about eleven o'clock a party of men went to the cottage, and, calling out Mr. Elliot, after considerable struggle forced him into a wagon in which was a pot of tar and a bag of feathers. Mr. Elliot drew a revolver and fired twice, the second shot killing Caleb Smith, a brother of the two women. The report of the pistol frightened the horse, which ran away and threw the whole party from the wagon, when Elliot escaped but surrendered himself to the authorities. Intense excitement prevails there.

There is some evidence that the body found in the river near the railroad bridge in East Kingston, on the 23d of June, is that of Mrs. Gage, wife of Charles Gage, who lives at 157 Endicott street, Boston. Mrs. Gage has been missing since October last, and Mr. Gage, on hearing of the discovery of the body, sent to the postmaster at East Kingston a description of her person, to which the body answers almost precisely. The manner of her death is utterly unknown, although there is indirect evidence of foul play. The body when found was fully clothed, and the boots, which were new and unsoiled, showed that the person did not walk to the river. About two miles and a half from the places where the body was found are two houses of ill-repute, and there are suspicions, based, however, only on the bad character of the places, that the woman was an inmate of one of them, and met her death there. The town authorities have neglected to investigate the case, and Coroner Rider is doing it.

The chestnut crop promises to be very heavy this season.

Mrs. Cragin, wife of Senator Cragin, who for some months past has been in a very delicate state of health, is slowly improving and likely to recover.

Mr. C. H. Gerrish, of Lebanon, lost ten hogs last week from some unknown cause. It is thought, however, that they were poisoned in some way. They lived but three or four hours after first showing symptoms of disease. Eight went in one day, and two the next.

The Misses Melcher recently returned to their summer residence in Dover to find that during their absence their house had been broken into, and a carpet nearly new, glass ware, a fine engraving, and other articles had been stolen. The entrance was made by boring about the lock of the back door.

Johnny Toohey, the little son of P. J. and Ellen Toohey, of Groveton, about a week since, swallowed a cent. For the first twenty-four hours after he vomited a good deal and was quite sick otherwise, but is now likely to receive no further harm.

At East Pembroke, on Monday, Mr. John Edes, a youth aged 70, who lives alone in a shop close by the bridge, undertook to blow a woodchuck out of his hole with powder, and came very near blowing his own eyes out instead. The badly burned face he got taught him a lesson about powder that will last him the rest of his "natural born days."

Simon Andrews, 23 years old, committed to the county house at Lisconia from New Hampton, hanged himself, Monday.

Senator Wadleigh.

We indorse the following high compliment for our junior Senator, taken from the "Personal" of Harper's Bazar:

Mrs. Ames writes that since the death of Mr. Sumner the most distinguished looking man upon the floor of the Senate is Mr. Wadleigh, the new Senator from New Hampshire. He is 43 years of age, of large frame and impressive appearance. He has jet black hair, black eyes, clear-cut, strong features, which reflect refinement and fine culture as well as power. He is one of the rare men in the Senate whose election was not insured by a cent of money from himself or his constituents. He was chosen, without his knowledge, because he was a fit man for a high place, and elected for the same reason. He is a lawyer, and because he brings with him into the Senate learning, eloquence, honor, and strong sense, much is expected of him in this day of small things.

Happy Accidents.

The cracking of a picture placed in the sunshine, says Chambers' Journal, set Van Eyck experimenting to produce a varnish that would dry in the shade. He found what he sought, and found besides that by mixing it with his colors they acquired greater force and brilliancy, and required no subsequent varnishing, and so came about the discovery, or re-discovery, of the art of painting in oil. Mezzotinto owed its invention by Prince Rupert to the simple accident of a sentry's gun barrel being rusted by the dew. Henry Schanward, a Nurembergh glass cutter, happened to let some aquafortis fall upon his spectacles, and noticed the glass was corroded and softened where the aquafortis had touched it. Taking the hint, he made the liquid accordingly, drew some figures upon a piece of glass, covered them with varnish, and applied his corroding fluid, cut away the glass around his drawing so that when he removed the varnish the figures appeared raised upon a dark ground; and etching upon glass was added to the ornamental arts. Alois Senefelder, playwright and actor, thinking it possible to etch upon stone in lieu of copper, polished a slab for that purpose. He was disturbed by his brother coming into his small laboratory with a request that he would jot down his list of things for the wash, as the woman was waiting to take the basket away. There being neither paper nor ink at hand, Senefelder scribbled the items on his stone with his etching preparation, that he might copy them at his leisure. Some time afterward, when about to clean the stone, he thought he would see what would be the effect of biting the stone with aquafortis and in a few moments saw the writing standing out in relief. Taking up a pelt ball charged with printing ink, he inked the stone, took off a few impressions upon paper, and he had invented lithography. The pelt ball used by Senefelder was long indispensable in a printing office. A Salopian printer, in a hurry to get on with a job, could not find his ball, and inked his form with a piece of soft glue that had fallen out of the glue pot; with such excellent results that he thenceforth discarded the pelt ball altogether, and by adding treacle to the glue, to keep it from hardening, hit upon the composition of which printers' rollers have ever since been made.

Three very different discoveries are recorded to have resulted from the unintentional application of intense heat. Pliny attributes the discovery of glass to some merchants traveling with nitre, who, stopping on the banks of a river to take a meal, were at a loss for stones to rest their kettles upon. Putting them upon pieces of nitre, they kindled their fires. The nitre, dissolved by heat, mixed with the sand, and the merchants were astonished to see a transparent matter flowing over the ground which was nothing else but glass. Charles Goodyear had for years experimented in vain, hoping to deprive India rubber of its susceptibility to the action of heat and cold. Conversing with a friend on the subject, he emphasized his assertion by flinging a piece of sulphured rubber across the room. It lighted upon the stove, and when he picked it up, a few days afterwards, he found the intense heat to which it had been subjected had conferred upon the India rubber just the quality he had so long striven to impart to it. According to some, he stumbled upon the discovery in a different manner; but at any rate, vulcanized India rubber was the creation of an accident.

A Limerick tobacconist, looking dolefully at his poor neighbors groping among the ruins of his burned out shop, noticed that some of them, after trying the contents of certain canisters, carefully loaded their waistcoat pockets from them. He followed suit, and found the snuff had come out of the fiery ordeal very much improved in pungency and aroma. Like a wise man he said nothing, but took another place, and set up a lot of ovens, and before long Black Yard snuff—otherwise "Irish Blackguard"—was all the rage with lovers of nasal titillation, and in a few years Lundyfoot was a rich man, owing to the accident he thought had ruined him. A would-be alchemist, seeking to discover what mixture of earths would make the strongest crucibles, one day found he had made porcelain. Instead of transmuting metals, as he had fondly hoped to do, Bottger transmuted himself. As if he had been touched with a conjurer's wand, he was on a sudden tranformed from an alchemist into a potter.

A Dog Among Porpoises.

The Cape May *Daily Wave*s tells a story of a Newfoundland dog: While his master was taking a stroll on the beach, the man noticed a large school of fish running in close to the breakers, followed by a great drove of porpoises that were rolling and pouncing through the water in apparent excitement with the grand chase after the frightened finnies. The dog Carlo, noticing the rumpus, and being encouraged by his master to venture out among the seapigs, gave a shrill bark, and started gracefully as a dog of cork floating over the billows. Onward he plunged, and upon reaching the porpoises, he set up a terrible yelping, to the consternation of the seapigs, for dog barking among the sea residents is an unusual thing. Carlo now plunged, first for one porpoise and then for another, and so excited the whole company that a grand charge was made, and Carlo was obliged to beat a retreat, which he did in great haste, followed by scores of the enemy, jumping, snorting, and tumbling about, evidently much delighted at putting the Newfoundland stranger to flight. The dog was chased close in shore, his pursuers only retiring after getting among breakers. Upon an examination of Carlo after his novel venture, Mr. Carson found that he had been severely gashed in the side, and had one ear partly bitten off. This, we believe, is the first instance on record of a dog going out to battle with the hosts of the sea.

—The Hawesville (Ky.) Plaindealer says: "A hen in this county laid an egg seven and a half inches long. She had swallowed a red-flannel string some time previous, and it is thought this egg is several eggs strung; but the owner doesn't want to break the egg to find out."

—The following letter, received from a young lady who had previously addressed one to the same young man, beginning "You concentrated lump of sweetness," caused the latest suicide in San Francisco: "You know as well as I that women are fickle—the best of them—so do not blame me more than the rest. Full well I know, by my own sad experience, that weak human beings as we are, we cannot command our hearts or their affections. I will return you your ring by Wells & Fargo as soon as convenient, and with the exception of rings please consider the golden cord (which I at one time thought bound two loving hearts together) broken. "I awaken to the stern reality that I do not love you. You no longer awaken the spirit of love within my breast, and I think marriage without love a mockery and a sin. Forgive me Ernest, and seek one more worthy of your affections and too sincere love than I. I am not capable of loving. I have no heart, or else, if I have, it is as unfeeling as a pin-cushion."

—A Methodist parson, called to preach at an out-of-the-way town in California, was informed before entering the pulpit that he must be careful, as many of the assembled congregation were "roughs," and would not hesitate to disturb him if his remarks didn't suit. The holy man made no reply, but having reached the desk he took from his pockets two revolvers, and placing one on each side of the Bible gave a sharp glance around the house and said, "Let us pray." A more orderly service was never conducted.

The Last Gift Concert Postponed.

The announcement of the postponement of the last gift concert of the Public Library of Kentucky will not surprise the public. In Governor Bramlette's card, published below, he gives reasons for it which will be accepted without question by every one. The management in this instance, consulting the interests of ticketholders, and those designing to become ticket-holders, have not waited until the last day to make this announcement, but, just as soon as they became satisfied of the necessity of this postponement, have promptly made this announcement. It is unnecessary to review the causes which have necessitated this action, as they are fully recited in Governor Bramlette's card. The promptness and frankness with which the public have been made aware of the intention of the manager will meet with the hearty commendation of every one and excite such a new interest and confidence in the scheme, and the ability of the manager to perform what he promises, that there can be no doubt but on the day specified the last concert will be a full one.

POSTPONEMENT LAST GIFT CONCERT—A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

The announcement of the postponement of the fifth and last concert of the Public Library of Kentucky, to the 30th November, I am satisfied, will surprise few and disappoint none of the friends and patrons of the enterprise. Indeed, any other course would create dissatisfaction. With a precedent of a postponement of each of the four concerts which have already been given, the public have very naturally and reasonably expected that in this, by far the largest scheme of the series, and the largest ever offered to the world, the same course should be followed, and there are thousands all over the country who are waiting for the setting of a certain fixed day for the drawing, before sending in their orders. The sales of tickets to this date have been highly satisfactory, and a large drawing might be had on the 31st July, but, feeling assured that a short postponement would enable me to close out the remainder of the tickets and make the drawing a full one, we have adopted the course which has evidently been anticipated, and which must eventuate most satisfactorily for all.

Now that the day of the drawing is absolutely determined, there remains no further occasion for delay, and I would urge the friends of the enterprise, who intend to purchase tickets, to send in their orders, as it will tax my office to its utmost capacity to accomplish all that is to be done in the short time which remains for the sale of tickets.

Curing versus Cobbling.

There are many medicines that give transient relief in sickness without touching the source and seat of the complaint. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is not one of these. The great tonic and restorative does not cobble the diseased and enfeebled system. It is not a mere palliative, that only temporarily controls a few unpleasant symptoms. No, its invigorating, regulating, restorative principle penetrates to the very source of the difficulty in the fluids and solids of the body, and hence its cures are radical and thorough. In dyspepsia it strengthens the stomach, in liver complaint it regulates the flow of bile, in constipation it promotes a punctual habit of body, in nervous ailments it tones the sentiments and enlivens fibres, in rheumatism it counteracts pain, and in cases of general debility rehabilitates the emaciated frame.

A Grand Exhibition of National Industry.

The American Institute of the City of New York will hold its 43d Exhibition this Fall, opening on the 9th day of September next, and continuing until late in November.

This Exhibition promises to be farmore interesting than any which have preceded it, inasmuch as special effort is being made to have the leading industrial operations carried on upon the premises.

The American Institute is the oldest of all societies now in existence of its kind, and is not in any sense a private corporation, its earnings being devoted by its charter to the encouragement of home industries.

The Coming Election.

The democratic wire-pullers of this city are hard at work preparing for the coming municipal election and will leave nothing undone which may promise to assist them in harvesting all the advantages sought to be attained by the partisan legislation engineered through at the late session by those sterling defenders of fair play, a pure ballot and the right of majorities, Daniel Marcy and Albert R. Hatch. The republicans also are not idle, and the next election promises to be the most lively one held in this city for many years.

The democrats feels that they must carry the city, for a defeat would finish what the disgraceful partisan legislation of the late session so well begun,—the destination of all democratic hope of another accidental State victory. To make a republican city—which even so unscrupulous a partisan as Hatch did not attempt to deny is strongly republican—return democratic representatives and a democratic city government, all pretense of fair dealing and regard for decency was thrown aside; every check list was put into the hands of democratic partisans, some of whom never pay their taxes, and not a few of whom, having no reputation to lose, are fitting tools to do any dirty work required of them by the democratic buglers; the law requiring the polls to be closed at a fixed and reasonable hour was repealed, that rum and ruffianism might have free swing to do democratic work if required, and to give ample time to the counters in democratic wards to make all "arrangements" necessary for overcoming possible adverse majorities; and the ward lines were so altered that the republican majority of this city should all be in two wards, the democrats flattering themselves that they had "a sure thing" in four of the remaining five, with a good chance of carrying the fifth, if the vigorous exclusion from the check lists of the name of every republican concerning whose right to vote a possible question could be raised, and the liberal admission of the name of every democrat whether he had a right to vote or not, with the most able-bodied counting of ballots on election day would manage it. With everything arranged by the democratic legislation in accordance with the demands of the democratic caucus of the city, the local wire-pullers feel that "success is a duty"—and all the more pleasant that it will supply quite a number of official loves and fishes for distribution among the famished members of the party.

The republicans feel that a municipal victory in September, in spite of the democratic gerrymander, (which we referred to, when it was before the legislature, as "the most outrageous piece of political scoundrelism" ever attempted in this State, an opinion we have not yet changed,) would be virtually a State-election victory; but they know that only hard work, untiring vigilance and a full vote will accomplish it. That they will work hard and get out a full vote is assured, the "high-handed outrages" of the democrats having united the republican party as it has not been united for years, and inspired with partisan zeal many who have taken no active part in politics for a long time. Men will vote in September who have not voted since the war, and they will vote against giving the educational interests of the city into the hands of groggery-keepers, and against putting the financial interests of the city in the hands of men who do not pay even their poll-taxes,—and both these classes are represented among the democratic election-officers appointed by the democratic legislature at the bidding of the democratic managers of this city.

The democrats are so hopeful of success that they have got a "slate" made up for the equitable distribution of the city officers among the faithful; the republicans propose to smash that slate, and we are confident that they can and will throw votes enough to do it, the only question with them being as to whether the republican majorities can be made large enough to over-balance the skillful counting of the democrats. The fight will be lively, and we shall not be surprised if more than one democrat who is now looking forward to a nice office under the next city government had to work for his living next winter.

Laconics.

The republicans of the fifth ward have chosen a ward committee as follows: Eben F. Brackett, chairman, Edwin H. Leslie, secretary, John H. Flagg, treasurer; William O. Sides, Stephen L. Marston, Jos. E. Fernald, John E. Giddings, E. Washington Brown, Lewis G. Davis, D. Webster Barnabee, Henry H. Ham, Jr., Robert C. Sides, William G. Joy, William H. Sise, Marcellus Bufford, Aaron Young.

On Sunday, two schooners which carry wood between Hampton and Boston anchored near the mouth of Hampton Rivers waiting for the tide to rise before they could sail up to Hampton. The captains of both schooners, with two sailors, put out in a boat to sound for the channel, when a heavy sea struck the boat and capsized it. A. D. Godfrey of Hampton, one of the sailors, was drowned. Captains J. L. Godfrey and John C. Palmer and the other sailor were saved by clinging to the boat until assistance came from another boat from one of the vessels. Godfrey was about twenty-seven years of age and unmarried.

The New Hampshire Medical Society will have an anniversary festival at the Isles of Shoals, September 1, when the doctors and their wives will spend twenty-four hours in recreation at that health-giving spot.

A small yacht was capsized in Boston harbor, Friday afternoon, and Frank Snow, James H. Blake and Frank Phillips, all young men, were drowned. Dr. S. F. Ham of Boston and Mr. Alberto C. Fernald of this city, were at the time sailing down the harbor bound for Portsmouth in yacht Dollie, built at Kittery a few years ago by Mr. William Dixon, and reached Rockport (where they moored for the night) at half-past eight o'clock, five and and a half hours after starting. They arrived here next day at noon and report Friday's passage as very rough and windy.

A year ago when freight on coal to this port was $2.80 per ton, coal retailed at $8 per ton, but now that freights have fallen to $1.15 per ton, coal retails at $8.50 per ton. Why?

If the lately-invented "patent spark-consumer and arrester" could be put in operation on the streets Sunday evenings, there would be much less crowding and jostling.

Middle street Baptist Society picnic to-day at Dover Point. Train starts at 10 o'clock. Tickets to be had at E. R. R. depot.

Ward One ward committee have organized as follows: John Pender, chairman; John H. Locke, secretary; John H. Slater, treasurer; E. G. Peirce, Jr., Frank W. Hackett and Stephen T. Raitt, finance committee.

Mr. George W. DeRochement, a prominent citizen living on North road, had an attack of apoplexy on returning from church, Sunday afternoon, and died shortly after midnight. Mr. DeRochemont was a member of the Board of Assessors.

As Misses Annie Folsom of this city and May Scott of Boston were driving toward "The Wentworth," at Newcastle, Monday noon, their carriage was overtaken and struck by a runaway team which, previous to its running away, was driven by Mr. James Yeaton of Chelsea, Mass. Both vehicles were smashed and all the occupants thrown out, though fortunately no one of them received any serious hurt. The young ladies had a narrow escape.

Thos. S. Nowell, Esq., has sold his residence on State to Mrs. Mary Salter for $11,500.

The members of the Independent Battalion are notified to meet at their armory this (Tuesday) evening at 7.30.

A house belonging to Mr. Jere. Preble, near Agamenticus, York, was burned Sunday afternoon, with furniture and $275 or more in bills and scrip.

—A young woman of East Liberty, Pa., challenges any man in the State to walk a hundred-mile race with her. If the match is to be walked by moon-light, alone, she will not wait long for an acceptance.

—Jones, of Vermont, said on his dying bed that he had never written a line which he cared to erase. The whole State was proud of him till it was found out that he could not even write his name.

—"A distinction without a difference," was what a Kentucky farmer thought when seven or eight men called him out of bed the other night and compelled him to give them several sides of bacon, saying they must have food but couldn't steal.

Seeing he was taken at a disadvantage, the intruder turned and asked what occasion there was for such an outburst. SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 19. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, imparting strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invaluable testimonials of benefits to be given in a druggist's circular.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Lungs, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and cause of them number to be sized prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often restores the growth, and always restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus lonely, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—a state which conditions disease of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff, and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

Aristocratic Hunting.

[Colorado paper.]

The Earl of Dunraven and party, among whom is Dr. Kingsley, brother of the Canon, have been cutting up high jinks in Estes Park and enjoying all sorts of hair-breadth escapes. A reliable correspondent writes that they have been particularly successful in following the pet pursuit of good old Izaak Walton, and that scores, if not hundreds, of speckled beauties overload their baskets daily. They have also killed any number of "beasties" of various sorts, and the Earl had a pitched battle with a female mountain lion not long ago that came very near causing much weeping and wailing at Dunraven Castle. He was alone, having separated from the rest of the party, when he observed the leonine mountaineer about to spring upon him from an overhanging rock in the vicinity. He had just time to raise his gun to his shoulder and fire when the creature went for him. The ball hit her fairly in the belly, but it did not stop her career. She lit on the nobleman, overturning him, and was just about to spring at his throat as he lay prostrate at her mercy, when a timely shot from Dr. Kingsley brought her down. The Earl arose much flustered at his narrow escape, but otherwise none the worse for it, although he privately told a correspondent that "those mountain lions were blasted nasty things to meet when alone, you know."

A Woman's Duty to be a Lady.

[Gail Hamilton.]

Wildness is a thing which girls cannot afford. Delicacy is a thing which cannot be lost and found. No art can restore to the grape its bloom. Familiarity without love, without confidence, without regard, is destructive to all that makes a woman exalting and ennobling:

"The world is wide, things are small;
They may be nothing, but they are all."

Nothing? It is the first duty of a woman to be a lady. Good breeding is good sense. Bad manners in woman is immorality. Awkwardness may be ineradicable. Badmindness is constitutional. Ignorance of etiquette is the result of circumstances. All can be condoned, and do not banish man or woman from the amenities of their kind. But self-possessed, unshrinking and aggressive coarseness of demeanor may be reckoned as a state prison offense, and certainly merits the mild form of restraint called imprisonment for life. It is a shame for women to be lectured on their manners. It is a bitter shame that they need it. Women are the umpires of society. It is they to whom all mooted points should be referred. To be a lady is more than to be a prince. A lady is always in her right inalienably worthy of respect. To a lady, prince and peasant alike bow. Do not be restrained. Do not have the impulses that need restraint. Do not wish to dance with the prince unsought. Feel differently. Be such that you confer honor. Carry yourself so lofthily that men shall look up to you for reward, not at you for rebuke. The natural sentiment of man towards woman is reverence. He loses a large means of grace, when he is obliged to account her a being to be trained into propriety. A man's ideal is not wounded when a woman fails in worldly wisdom, but if is grace, in fact, in sentiment, in delicacy, in kindness, she should be found wanting, he receives an inward hurt.

Vinnie Ream.

[Baltimore American.]

The fact has just come out that Congress, before its adjournment, allowed a bill to pass which gives to that lobbying nuisance, Vinnie Ream, the making of the statue of Admiral Farragut. It was a disgraceful piece of business, and Senator Tipton seems to have been chiefly responsible for its going through the Senate. Senator Morrill had prepared an excellent speech to make in opposition to the measure, but Mr. Tipton called it up during Mr. Morrill's temporary absence on a conference committee. His speech concluded with the following sensible remark: "The resolution should be amended so as to have such a commission appointed as would be at liberty to make a contract with one of our best artists, and then further amended so as to preclude the payment of double the price generally demanded by artists of the highest rank."

[Washington Capital.]

Poor little Vinnie—what a shame to abuse her in this way. It is not her fault that she can not "sculp." She does the best she can in that line, and as it is a settled thing that the Government has to support her, let us do it gracefully and like gentlemen. "Lobbying nuisance," indeed. That editor does not know what he is writing about. Vinnie is one of the most fascinating little lobbyists we have. If she could "sculp" as well as she lobbies an admiring world would hasten to do her honor with no end of orders. When she grapples a solon, holding his appropriation palm in her two soft hands, and fetches her beautifully winning eyes to bear, shaking all the time her little poodle head of hair, the solon feels himself melting like lard in a skillet. He surrenders without terms. Rushing back to his seat, he votes unlimited appropriations for the fascinating little stone-cutter. Then he quiets his conscience and his constituents by turning out three hundred female clerks to starve upon the streets.

And to abuse our friend Senator Tipton. Poor Tipton, never in all his eventful life did he have a female look at him and languish. He is not of that sort. Nature made him to be a chaste, noble Roman, and to this end created him in such a manner that when a woman looks on him the corners of her mouth go down and her dear little nose goes up, and the Senator has immediately a dissolving view of a superstructure know to the female world as a panier. His figure answers to the definition of a straight line in mathematics. His face is improved by a pair of goggles, while his head has that dry, barren appearance which suggests a top-dressing of guano. It is related of the Senator that once, while walking the streets of Boston, he was arrested by the Board of Health upon the ground that his appearance not only frightened horses, but endangered the well-being of women about to become mothers. And while at Narragansett bathing he was always requested to go into the surf before the rest, so as to scare off sharks.

Nothing daunted, little Vinnie undertook the noble Roman. She seized his bony hands in hers—posed like a Venus—shook back her wealth of chestnut curls and unlimbered the artillery of her heavenly eyes. At the first shot Senator Tipton felt electric shocks running through his lawmaking system. At the second he blushed like a girl and cackled like a hen. At the third his old bones rattled so they could be heard some distance off. But when little Vinnie sighed out, "Dear Senator Tipton, help me," he went down in a sitting position and was lost forever. Vote her the body of Farragut! Why, he would have voted her the body of the "liberal party," himself included. To have Vinnie "sculp" him the Senator is ready to die right here—and we wish he would.

Vinnie "a lobbying nuisance!" She's a miasma, she's epidemic spinal meningitis, or something dreadful. Cleopatra was called "the serpent of old Nile." Vinnie is the serpent of old Goose creek.

The main reservoir which supplies Trenton, N. J., with water gave way Monday afternoon, and sent about 30,000,000 gallons of water over the city and down Pennington avenue with a mighty rush, filling the cellars of most of the houses for a quarter of a mile. The breach is in the south end of the reservoir, and is about 25 feet wide at the top. There was no damage done aside from the filling of the cellars, drowning of chickens and carrying away of fencing. It was caused by a leakage from an old pipe, which was left embedded in the soil when the new reservoir was built. All the damage except that done by the filling of the cellars will not exceed $1000.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 113.

By Uncle Joseph.

The last number gave an account of the great earthquake of 1727. A greater was to come, and it was the greatest that has visited our land in its whole history. It was November 18, 1755, twenty-eight years after the preceding great one; many therefore witnessed them both. But eighteen days before this last, the city of Lisbon, in Europe, with the large population of three hundred and fifty thousand people, received a terrible uplifting.—in fact was thrown into the air, then fell into a pit with an awful crash, and sixty thousand people were dead or dying, many of them to be consumed by one vast funeral pyre, the flames raging nine days, there being no power to check them. The one that followed in our land, now to be noted, it is thought had no connection with that.

It was in the morning. The air was chilly and frosty. The winds were hushed and all was still, as is usual at the time of earthquakes. The time was four o'clock and about fifteen minutes. The larger number of people were in bed and asleep. The roar of the earthquake's approach was heard half a minute before the shake was felt; then came a slight pulsation upward, in close connection trembling, jarring and shaking. Its duration was four and a half minutes.

People ran into the streets, but could scarcely keep their feet. There were loud cries in almost every direction as it was expected dwellings would be demolished, while stone walls were falling, piles of wood tumbling, chimneys shaken and in some cases ruined, and houses rocking like a cradle. Pumps in some localities gave out, and wells lost their water as if literally the bottoms had dropped out.

There is a record that in Newington there was an opening in the ground three or four feet wide and about sixty rods in length. In Pembroke, Mass., the ground opened in several places. In the vicinity of Cape Cod in some places the ground sunk several feet.

This earthquake extended over most of the Colonies, and other parts of our land where there were settlements. At different dates, soon after, there were other shocks, but not specially violent or alarming.

"Squire, Marry Us Quick!"

[St. Louis Republican.]

A Cannelton (Ind.) justice of the peace has lately performed a matrimonial feat which entitles him to the kind regard and business consideration of every pair of closely pursued and hotly pressed lovers in the world. Cannelton is one of Kentucky's convenient Gretna Greens—much the better and safer for being in another State, with the sweet-flowing Ohio between.

A pretty little Kentucky girl was loved by two brothers. She was not able to decide between them, and left the question with them to settle. They met one day on the way to the house of the lady, and commenced the argument of which was the best man in the old Kentucky style of "off with your cost and at it." While they were thus discussing their relative merits, and both getting very tired of the debate, another young fellow who had no fraternal rival, slipped into the house, told of the disgraceful scene in progress between the brothers, and asked the young lady to split the difference and get rid of the ruffians by taking him. The picture he painted her was so bright that she took him at his word and both hastened to get out of the State. They hied them to the river, and on the way engaged a holy man of Hawesville to come over as quick as he could, and bring his ceremonial outfit for their everlasting benefit. He agreed to skin over the river in a short time, and told them to go and be as happy as they could until he came. They crossed over to Cannelton and hastened to procure the necessary wedding document by the law of Indiana made and provided for such ventures. They got it and were walking hand in hand just outside the gates of Eden, waiting for them to swing open with silver music and admit them to still forbidden joys.

There was just enough fear of pursuit to make it lively for their young hearts, and cause them to tremble a little on the brink of blessedness. They came to Castleberry bridge over a rippling stream, which was too wide to jump and too deep to wade. The bridge was undergoing repairs, and a large portion of the floor was torn up. They stopped and looked into the gulf below, through the bare beams. They gazed over to the Kentucky shore and saw a boat full of men rowing across with ready stroke. Pursued! That was the first thought. What was to be done? They would perish rather than be torn asunder. Hand in hand they advanced one step near-er the gulf before taking the fatal plunge through the gaping bridge beams.

A moment more and they would have been safe from pursuit, and locked in each others arms at the pebbly bottom of the stream. They heard a voice cry:—"Hold! rash, impetuous children." They looked up and saw the smiling face of Squire Patterson like a rising sun on the other side of the bridge. They knew him in their calmer, happier days. The young lady was on the most intimate footing with the Squire, and she very naturally took the position of spokesman. She halloed across, "Squire, marry us quick!" At the same time pointing to the boat advancing with now audibly splashing oars. The Squire took in the situation in a twinkling, and shouted, "All right, send on your papers." The young man picked up a handy stone and tying the license to it with his handkerchief, flung it across, while the young woman was crying at the top of her voice, "Here they come! They are ready to land! Do it quick, Squire!" The Squire did it quick, and shouted the marriage ceremony across the water and bridged the yawning chasm with safety for those two willing hearts and young lives so very near the brink. He ended, "I pronounce you man and wife. Go and tell 'em, what God hath joined together let no man burst asunder. Young man, tie a dollar to another dornick and heave it over."

That little matter was all settled nicely, and the young couple breathed again. They were married and proclaimed man and wife so quick that it made their heads swim. They could now dare life, and brave all the world, especially their eager pursuers who had landed from the boat. They turned towards the skiff-passengers with proud defiance, and suddenly came to their sober senses. The boat brought over the holy man of Hawesville, whom they had engaged to marry them, and his party and the young couple felt a slight color of shame in their faces.

Narrow Escape from Drowning.

[Chelsea Public.]

Yesterday a number of gentlemen were bathing in Fort Point Channel, near the New York and New England Railway, accompanied by the large Newfoundland dog whose headquarters are in the railway depot. One of the bathers, Mr. A. A. Wilder, the Boston Journal's representative for Chelsea, remained in the water longer than his companions, and while leisurely swimming a few rods from the sea wall, felt the claws of the dog on his back, and at once was forced under water. The dog was apparently in a mood for a frolic, and sought for it in this manner, or else supposing that Mr. Wilder was in danger of drowning he went to his rescue, and finding no hair to grasp with his teeth did his best to evince his kindly purpose. His intentions may have been charitable, but his conduct was wicked, as Mr. Wilder's back will bear testimony, the claws of the dog having lacerated the flesh severely. The gentleman placed in this unfortunate predicament could not outswim the dog, and was pushed beneath the surface three times before reaching the wall, when his friends pulled him out in a half conscious condition. Had he been a few yards further from shore he would probably have been drowned before assistance reached him. That dog will not go in swimming with the boys again, if they can prevent it.

Curing versus Cobbling.

There are many medicines that give transient relief in sickness without touching the source and seat of the complaint. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is not one of these. The great tonic and restorative does not cobble the diseased and enfeebled system. It is not a mere palliative, that only temporarily coffuots a few unpleasant symptoms. No, its invigorating, regulating, restorative principle penetrates to the very source of the difficulty in the fluids and solids of the body, and hence its cures are radical and thorough. In dyspepsia it strengthens the stomach, in liver complaint it regulates the flow of bile, in constipation it promotes a punctual habit of body, in nervous ailments it tones the sentimental and motive fibres, in rheumatism it counteracts pain, and in cases of general debility rehabilitates the emaciated frame.

—The motto at long Branch is: "Enjoy yourself, be good, and pay your bills." How to reconcile the first and last of these injunctions is the question which puzzles most minds.

—Incongruity is not always so amusing as in the device of a New York gunsmith, who has labelled a large horse-pistol in his show-window, "Good for cats," while to a bright little pocket weapon are attached the words, "Good for boys." He leaves it an open question whether cats should be armed with horse-pistols or boys be cut off prematurely.

Remarkable Wrecking Feat.

[Norfolk (Va.) paper.]

The Messrs. B. & J. Baker & Co., of this city, received a telegram from Key West yesterday morning announcing the safe arrival at that port on Saturday of the British steamship Mississippi.

Our readers will probably remember that this fine steamship, commanded by Captain Wrake, while on her passage from Liverpool to New Orleans, went ashore near Cape Florida on the night of April 12th, 1874. The news spread through the country, and the Coast and New York wrecking companies made several unsuccessful attempts to save her.

On April 27th the Messrs. Baker's wrecking tug Resolute, Capt. Neil McCarty, left here, reaching the wreck May 3d, when he commenced to relieve her of her cargo and made preliminary preparations to pump her out. The Resolute remained until June 1st at which time she was relieved by the wrecking steamer B. & J. Baker, Capt. E. M. Stoddard, and the schooner F. S. Lewis.

Capt. Stoddard took the mammoth undertaking under his personal supervision, which, through his untiring energy and skill, has culminated in the grand success we have chronicled above.

The Mississippi will proceed at once on her voyage to New Orleans. She is a new iron steamship 325 feet long, 42 feet beam, 31 feet depth of hold and is valued at $800,000. She had on board a general cargo all of which has been saved.

The Messrs. Baker are expecting full particulars of her rescue by mail, which we shall endeavor to lay before our readers. On yesterday their tugs in the harbor were handsomely decorated with flags, and one hundred guns were fired from the Nettie and Resolute, in honor of this great achievement.

[Capt. Stoddard is equally efficient whether engaged in sinking the Alabama or raising the Mississippi. He is a son-in-law of Hon. William H. Y. Hackett, of this city.]

Beecheristic.

[Newburyport Visitor.]

The New York papers, from day to day, dole out to us portions of the great scandal. Many persons, men and women, are more or less connected with it, and we may never come to the truth. Nobody doubts that the church committee will decide for Beecher. They would surprise everybody if they did not; and next the courts will take it up. It would have been well—if it had been possible—for the public to have waited till all the evidence was in. But they have not; and the press generally is on the side of Mr. Beecher. We wish that we could so think, for it appears better to have Tilton a liar and a fool, than Beecher falling from his high position and great influence which has been generally used for good. But we don't see it in that light, and clearly it appears to us that he has not yet reached a perfect state, having much of human nature, and unregenerate human nature, subject to like temptations with other men, and liable to evil as are all others. His temptations are greater than most are subject to, and his position makes his fall the more lamentable. It is one more case of warning—that the strongest in themselves are utter weakness, and that there is none good—perfectly good; no, not one.

An Old-Fashioned Mother.

Some time ago Mrs. Buckleby, who lives in Berrien county, Mich., directed her son Samuel, a lad of fourteen years, to take a turn at the churn. Now, as Samuel had set his heart on going fishing at that very time, he "got his back up," and flatly refused to agitate the cream. The curvature was promptly taken out of his spine by a slipper and with "tears in his eyes" he went on duty with the dasher. In about a half hour and during the absence of his mother, his eyes fell upon a plate of fly poison, and a bright, smart thought struck him. Just before Mrs. Buckleby came in, he lifted the fatal platter to his face, and as she entered he put the poison from his lips with the dramatic exclamation: "There, mother, I guess you won't lick me no more!" Now what did this Spartan dame do? Did she shriek for the doctor, and fall into hysterics? Not much. She simply took Samuel by the nape of the neck, lifted him deftly into the pantry, beat the white of six eggs together, and told him to engulf the same instantly; he refusing, she called the hired girl, and in a twinkling Sam found himself outside the albumen. Then Mrs. B. began preparing a mustard emetic. Seeing this, Sam's pluck dissolved, and he commenced begging, crying, "I was only trying to skeer ye." But the stern mother was not to be softened, and Samuel had to swallow the mustard. He was then forced to take a dozen drops of painkiller, and had his back rubbed with "Vigor of Life," and his stomach with the "Oil of Gladness." Then he vomited up everything but his boots and stockings. This being over, he took seven Ayer's pills, a spoonful of salt, and a blue pill. And now, if you want to behold the maddest boy in Michigan, just say "fly poison" to Sam Buckleby.

Hurry and Health.

It is not wholesome to be in a hurry. The men who do things maturely, slowly, deliberately, are the men who oftenest succeed in life. People who are habitually in a hurry generally have to do things twice over. The tortoise beat the hare at last. Slow men seldom knock their brains out against a post. Foot races are injurious to health, as are all forms of competitive exercise; steady labor in the fields is the best gymnasium in the world. Either labor or exercise, carried to exhaustion or prostration, or even great tiredness, expressed by "fagged out," always does more harm than the previous exercise has done good. All running up stairs to catch up with a vehicle or ferry boat is extremely injurious to every age and sex and condition of life. It ought to be the most pressing necessity which should induce a person over fifty to run twenty yards. Those live longest who are deliberate, whose actions are measured, who never embark in any enterprise without "sleeping over it," and who perform all every day acts of life with calmness. Quakers are proverbially calm, quiet people, and Quakers are a thrifty folk the world over.

—When your neighbor's young hopeful pauses in front of your house just after supper, and hails Master Johnny with, "Hy-ah-yua-yua? Comin' out?" you realize the force of Goethe's declaration that the most dreadful wild beast in the world is a boy.

Nobody's Fool.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Saturday afternoon, a sad-eyed boy with dirt on his chin and a tear on his nose, called at one of the police stations and asked the sergeant if he could be sent to the reform school, he being a homeless waif. As he had committed no offence, he was told that he had better go to the workhouse, but he replied that his brother was at the reform school, and he'd rather go there. He didn't want to go out and steal anything, or smash some one's plate glass window, and his anxiety to go touched the heart of a gentleman who had called on business. He consulted with the sergeant and then said to the lad:—"I guess we can fix it. I'm going to leave my wallet on the desk, and the sergeant and I will go up stairs. If you take the wallet it will be stealing, and you will be sent to the reform school." The wallet was left, the men went up stairs for a moment, and when they came down the lad was nowhere in sight. Neither was the wallet, containing six dollars; and to be brief about it, lad and money are still missing.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH of the City of Portsmouth call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the City to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER 10.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any calf skin, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 12. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 20. No person shall use or occupy any building in the compact part of the city for a slaughter-house, or for trying tallow, or for currying leather, or for the deposit of green pelts or skins, unless under such restrictions and regulations as the health officers may impose.

SEC. 22. Any person or persons who shall violate any rule or regulation, or commit any act forbidden in any section of this ordinance, to which no special penalty is annexed, shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty dollars, to be recovered by complaint before the police court of this city.

SEC. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice to the Health Officers.

SEC. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect, forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the Health Officers in the name of the city. m25 d3m

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA. DEBILITY. DROPSY AND DISEASES.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, from the blood, and cures "as the mental life," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by a corresponding reaction, but are permanent, imparting strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake, with the iodides of Potassium and Iron makes the most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Lungs and Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Retention and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a genial sedative and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-starving climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ONCE of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking phlegm in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the doors of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quick medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in posture" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

"Presto, Change!"

It is singular, says Jennie June, writing from Saratoga, with what ease and absoluteness a revolution in fashions is effected; with what military strictness and precision an order which "takes" or which comes from an authoritative source is obeyed. Two years ago the belles of Saratoga were performing all the evolutions of the exaggerated "Grecian bend." Moving about, they looked like a company of giraffes suddenly gone into mourning, they affected curious irregularities of the elbow, walked mincingly and spoke in affected voice. All that has disappeared as if by magic. The girl of the period now shows a slender back perfectly straight, and innocent of the smallest atom of tournure. All the looping up and bunching and patches have gone with the bustles; her dress skirt is often single, her bodice high and plain, and her sash—three yards of comparatively narrow ribbon (bonnet width)—tied at the side in careless loops and long ends. But it is her head and face that exhibits the most marvellous change. Where are the multitudinous puffs and braids and curls? It is a small head now, the hair combed tightly up and disposed of in a single braid, which is laid straight and close to the back of the head. The front hair is combed smooth to the side of the face in little wavelets, not in masses, but as if it had been cut short; and when the eyes are turned up, the look of innocence and simplicity combined which this style imparts is extremely captivating. Transformations like these show genius. It seems too bad that such bright girls should be thrown away upon men, or that their faculties should not be put to some better use.

Seeing The Responsible Editor.

[New Orleans Picayune.]

That very clever story, "The Tyranteler of Calviras," just now going the rounds, recalls an incident which took place in the New Orleans Picayune office many years ago, when George Washington Reeder presided over the police columns. Reeder was very small, not over four feet six inches in height, singularly youthful in appearance, and given to a pompous, overwhelming, elaborate politeness, which, in connection with his diminutive stature and magnificent costume, generally reminded one of a benevolent but highly diplomatic tomtit. Apart from his journalistic pursuits, Reeder had quite a name in the theatrical line, being a dilettante comedian of considerable merit. Everybody liked him, laughed kindly at his little peculiarities, and respected the brave and chivalrous spirit which they had found to be among his characteristics.

To see Reeder in the editorial room receiving an irate party, and particularly one of the rougher species, was a privilege to be eternally grateful for. His microscopic size, his gorgeous toilet, his profuse courtesy, and his grandiloquent address were simply amusing. Callers with well-defined injuries, but limited intellect, went away in the firm conviction that Reeder thought them the purest, loftiest, and most persecuted of mortals. Entering the Picayune office with the rooted purpose of mingling and bruising the chronicler of their complications, they would retire believing that Reeder was too angelic for this world, and that his references to them were only made after a bitter struggle with remorseless duty and at the expense of a bleeding heart.

He was perfectly ready to fight, however, whenever the case demanded it; and thereby hangs a tale.

One day an enormous, rough, ferocious-looking man entered the office and inquired for the editor. Much to his sorrow, Reeder had to say that the editor was absent.

"I'm sorry 'o that," said the big man, sitting down, and depositing a large, mangy carpet-bag near his chair. "I stopped over one day just to see him. I'm from Texas, you know, and I saw something about Texas in this morning's Picayune that sorter riles me. I was going home, but I thought I'd like to see that editor before I went, so as I could tell the boys what passed. I want to see him alone for about two minutes—that's all." And here the visitor's voice grew plaintive, and his fingers played with the hilt of a Colt's army revolver which hung in full view from his belt.

"I regret extremely, sir, that the editor happens to be out just now. I feel sure, from the impression you make on me, that he would esteem it a privilege to meet you. He would like you to take back to Texas his assurances of friendship and admiration. Couldn't you, my dear sir, couldn't you call a little later?"

"Well, I guess I will come again, long as I'm here to-morrow anyhow. You see it would make things easier like if I was to meet that editor."

About six o'clock in the afternoon he returned. Nobody but Reeder happened to be in.

"So sorry, my dear sir, but the editor has not yet appeared. Pray be seated, sir, and permit me to enjoy the accident which has made us acquainted."

"Now, I think this rather a hard case," said the brawny Texan, who was beginning to be impatient. "Here's a paper that pitches into Texas, and, so to speak, bullrags the Texans, and when I call to see about it, there's no one in. Where I live things are different. If a paper makes any unpleasant remarks about a gentleman, we always know what to do. We just walk round to the office, and the editor's there, ready to give it to us any way we want it. But here you have other fashions. You go for Texas like blazes in the morning; and when I call—being the only Texan in town—to chaw up the editor a little and swap bullets with him in a genteel way, I can't find my man. I don't like it. If a paper banters fellows this sort of way, it ought to have a responsible man——"

"Pardon me," says Reeder, stepping daintily into the middle of the room, with one hand thrust into his bosom and a face literally beaming with good nature. "Pardon me, a thousand times. I quite misunderstood you. I supposed you wanted to see the chief editor only. If it is a responsible man you're seeking, that's another thing."

"Certainly. That's all I want; a responsible man—somebody I can rassel about this article. That's what I've been saying all the time."

"Behold him! George Washington Reeder, at your service, sir. I'm the responsible man of this paper, sir."

The astonished giant looked at Reeder and then at his pistol, which was nearly as large as Reeder, and his face became a battle-ground where surprise, disappointment, disgust and amusement struggled for predominance. Then he stuck the pistol back into the case, picked up his carpet-bag, and eyeing Reeder all over with dispraging regard left, a swindled and an injured man.

Daily Chronicle.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 6 1874.

Theodore Comes Forth.

The Brooklyn Argus publishes the following letters:—

BROOKLYN, July 31, 1874.

Theodore Tilton, Esq:

Dear Sir,—I am instructed by the committee to state that the letters and documents referred to in your statement presented to us have not been delivered, notwithstanding your several promises to furnish them. As your statement in the absence of these documents is deprived of its greater force we think you should desire to place them in our possession, and I desire to impress on you the importance of delivering them to us at your earliest convenience. Very truly yours,

H. W. SAGE, Chairman.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 3, 1874.

Mr. Henry W. Sage: My Dear Sir,—I have just received your note of July 31, four days after date. Unless you accidentally misdated it, the communication should have come to me several days ago. This leads me to recall a similar dilatoriness of the delivery of your original note first summoning me to your committee, which I received only four hours before I was to appear, and yet the summons bore date of the day previous. But let these trifles pass. Your note just received surprises me by its contents, for you seem to have forgotten that on the last day of my appearance before your committee, I carried to your meeting not only all the documents which I quoted in my sworn statement (save those in Mr. Moulton's possession) but many more besides, making a double handful of interesting and important papers, vital to my case and destructive to yours. All these papers I proposed to lay before you, but no sooner had I begun to read them aloud in your presence than one of your attorneys stopped me in the reading and proposed that I should save the committee time by referring these papers to one of your members—the Hon. John Winslow. I acquiesced in this question and retired from your committee with the expectation of a speedy conference with Mr. Winslow. Perhaps it was my proper duty to have called on Mr. Winslow. Perhaps it was my proper duty to have called on Mr. Winslow, but, as the whole committee had previously set the example of calling in a body on one of the other parties to this controversy, I took it for granted that Mr. Winslow would repeat the precedent by doing me the honor to call at my house, at which he would have been a welcome guest. But while waiting for his coming I was called upon instead by a policeman, who arrested me and carried me, at thirty minutes' notice, before Justice Riley's police court to answer the charge of libelling the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, against whom I had spoken not a libel, but the truth. Up to the time of this arrest I had employed no lawyer, not needing any, but on finding myself before a police court and not understanding the motive of my arrest, nor the methods of courts, I requested my friend Judge S. D. Morris to answer for me in a technical proceeding in which I knew not how to answer properly for myself. Twice already I have been before this unexpected tribunal and may be called before it a third time on Wednesday next. Meanwhile my counsel, to whom I have just shown your note, instructs me to lay no documents, papers, or remaining testimony before your committee, nor have further communication with you in any form, except to send you this present and final letter containing the reasons for this step. These reasons are the following:—

First. You are a committee of Mr. Beecher's friends, appointed by himself; expected to act in his behalf; assisted by attorneys employed exclusively for his vindication; holding secret sessions inaccessible to the public; having no power to compel witnesses; giving no opportunity for the opposite side to cross-examine such as voluntarily appear, publishing or suppressing their testimony as you see fit, and, so far as my own experience goes, asking no questions save such as were irrelevant to the case and omitting to publish in your imperfect and unjust report of my testimony all that was most pertinent to my own side of the controversy.

Second. The daily papers of Brooklyn and New York have been artfully fed day by day with crumbs of fictitious evidence against my own character, as if not Mr. Beecher, but I alone, were the man on trial, and though I have little right, perhaps, to hold your committee responsible for this daily misrepresentation which may come through the malice of others, yet the result is the same to me as if you had deliberately designed it, and that result is this, namely: I expect no justice either from your tribunal, since you cannot compel witnesses to testify, nor from your reporters, since they do not give impartial reports.

Third. I cannot resist the conviction (though I mean no offence in expressing it) that your committee has come at last to be as little satisfactory to the public as to myself, and that your verdict (if you render one) could not possibly be based upon the full facts, since you have no power to compel witnesses, nor to verify their testimony by oath, nor to sift it by cross-examination.

For these reasons, which ought to have moved me earlier, I have at last instructed my counsel to proceed at once at his discretion to carry my case from your jurisdiction to a court of law, and in view of this instruction from me he has in turn instructed me to hold no further communication with your committee except this present letter of courtesy, in which I have the honor to bid you farewell; in doing which allow me to add that the respect which I am unable to entertain for your committee as a tribunal, I cannot help expressing for you each and all as individuals.

Truly yours,

THEODORE TILTON.

Readables.

Some men achieve fame and some have it thrust on them. Mr. Joseph Howard, that journalist of an inventive turn of mind who found free lodgings in Fort Lafayette during the war, as a consequence of imagining a proclamation by the President, got clapped into quod again for knocking a man down who asserted Mr. Beecher's guilt.

A special despatch from Fort Gibson says that a band of Indians entered Fort Gibson, broke open the jail, and liberated an Indian charged with the murder of a white man in the Indian Territory, and confined by the United States marshal. On leaving they discharged their guns close to the commanding officer's quarters. They threaten if any more Indians are confined they will burn the town. Such a thing may be looked for at any time, there being only six or eight soldiers in the garrison.

The Hamlin men carried the caucuses at Augusta, Tuesday evening.

The fears of a disturbance at the city election at Vicksburg, Miss., Thursday, were not realized. The "white-ticket" was victorious.

The democrats of the third Maine congressional district nominated E. H. O'Brien of Thomaston as candidate for Congress in opposition to Speaker Blaine.

In the Kentucky election Jones, the democratic candidate for clerk of the court of appeals, received a majority of nearly 50,000.

We submit to the New York World, et id omne genus, wasn't it Theodore Tilton's bounden duty after becoming convinced of his wife's guilt, to go out on the highway and commit suicide, that this scandal might not exist and that Mr. Beecher's great fame should not be tarnished and his influence for good diminished?

Mr. Francis D. Moulton has arrived at his home in Brooklyn, and being interviewed, declares that he will not testify until he receives a written request so to do, signed by Tilton and Beecher. He declines to state which side his testimony will aid.

Judge Riley has dismissed the case of Gaynor vs. Tilton.

Frank Carpenter has decided not to appear before the committee, and will write a letter, giving his reasons for his refusal to testify.

Paul Boynton has been hired by a New York inventor to advertise a life-saving dress. Boynton will be carried from New York by an outward-bound steamer, 200 miles from land, where he will be left until picked up by a passing vessel. He will carry in a rubber bag rations for one week, and signal lights and flags, with a sectional staff twelve feet long for raising them.

Remarks the New York Graphic: Mr. F. B. Carpenter showed his good sense in refusing to appear before an investigating committee that was fully prepared to prove according to their morning organ, that he "had spoken falsely in several particulars in his statements concerning the case." It is generally supposed that the business of an investigating committee is to discover facts and obtain information; it would seem that the purpose of this particular committee is to break down witnesses and blacken their character. Mr. Moulton showed himself altogether too wise to be caught in the toils of an ecclesiastical tribunal which treats the accuser as though he were the guilty party, and tries every witness who testifies against the accused as a criminal. Mr. Moulton has evidently too much regard for the proprieties of civilized life and too keen a sense of what is due to a gentleman to consent to have his nose tweaked and his ears boxed and his reputation covered with lampblack for telling disagreeable truths. If Mr. Tilton had been equally wise and refused to appear before the committee at all it would have been far better for him in a worldly point of view. The committee propose to close their arduous labors immediately after some three weeks of unparalleled but ineffectual "beat-hiding."

Mr. Morris, Mr. Tilton's counsel, says he shall at once begin the preliminary proceedings of a suit for damages against Henry Ward Beecher on a charge of criminal conversation with Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tilton. A summons is to be served on Mr. Beecher's counsel immediately, and the suit will be pressed at the first session of the Supreme Court. The amount of damages to be claimed has not yet been decided upon. The suits for divorce at first spoken of have been abandoned.

The steamer Pat Rogers was burned on the 5th, one mile below Aurora, Ind. About twenty lives were lost, the victims being principally ladies.

State News.

About one o'clock Tuesday morning, fire was discovered in the Rollins steam mill, so called, at Great Falls. The fire department responded quickly to the alarm, and by the time they reached the scene of action the whole upper part of the building was in flames, but after two hours of hard labor they had the fire under control, saving the main part of the building, which was of brick. The same building was damaged by fire about a year ago. It is owned by Samuel and Stephen Grant, whose loss is estimated at about $3000. It was occupied by Chick & Mitchell and Clark & Prescott, carpenters and builders. The loss of the former is about $700; the latter about $2500. Neither of the above parties was insured. The cause of the fire was spontaneous combustion.

The Exeter and Pittsfield manufacturing companies pass their dividends.

Legislative Reunion.

Says the Traveller: In 1828, Hon. James Wilson of Keene was speaker of the New Hampshire House of Representatives, and Hon. Daniel M. Christie, of Dover, was a member of the House. Hon. David Steele, of Goffstown, was a member of the Senate and Hon. W. H. Y. Hackett, of this city, was secretary of the Senate. In December of that year Mr. Steele invited Mr. Christie (who was his class-mate in college, and who, with Mr. Steele, are the only survivors of their class at Dartmouth College of 1815,) Mr. Wilson, who was his cousin, and Mr. Hackett, who with Mr. Steele are the only survivors of the Senate of 1828, to visit his home in Goffstown. In February last, Mr. Hackett delivered an address in Goffstown, and passed the night with Mr. Steele, and upon Mr. Steele conducting Mr. Hackett to the same chamber which Mr. Hackett had occupied in 1828—the latter remarked, "You and I have changed more than this room since I occupied it before," for in fact neither room nor furniture had been changed in the least during the 46 years. This led to a conversation about the four survivors of the Legislature of 1828, and a reunion was then appointed for this summer, taking place this week.

The surviving members of the legislature of 1828 are believed to be: David M. Christie, of Dover, James Wilson, Jr., Keene, David Steele, Goffstown, Wm. H. Y. Hackett, Portsmouth, Geo. Kent, Concord, Stephen L. Greeley, Gilmanton, Nathaniel Batchelder, North Hampton, Warren Lovell, Meredith, B. W. Jenness, Strafford, Franklin Moore, Manchester, Wm. W. Rollins, Somersworth.

Crabs Eating Oysters.

[Chesapeake Bay Cor. Chicago Tribune.]

At the side of the boat-wharf is a great pair of tongs, like two iron rakes riveted together, so as to open and shut and clasp a peck of oysters in the shell between them. The handles are twice as high as a man. And there, around the tongs as they lie in the water is a large oyster-bed, perfectly beset with crabs, who are feeding on the oysters. Through the transparent water we see the whole performance. The greenish-gray crab, with a shell on his back like a shield indented and sharpened at the ends, swims end-wise with the velocity of a bird, his eyes upon his side, protected by his two-armed and elbowed claws. When he reaches the oyster-bed, he thrusts a claw in the partly-open shell, and drowns the oyster by keeping the shell open. Then putting his eyes and mouth close down to the oyster he forks him out piecemeal with both claws, like a bad boy eating jelly. As he is in the act, we observe on the wharf a piece of pork tied to a string, and an old hand-made net. Dropping the pork, the crab abandons the oyster and seizes it with the avidity of a new desire. Lifted nearly to the surface, the net is poked beneath him, and he is lifted, all furious and kicking, into one of the canoes, where he speedily has the company of about fifty of his brethren. This is great sport for ladies. I remember last year carrying General Sherman's family off to see inlet crabbing, and they seemed to enjoy it more than the original march to the sea.

—These are the nights in which the deserted husband dreams that his wife has come home, and found the heap of unwashed dishes in the dining-room.

—The New York Tribune puts out the following as a feeler: "A jerky bird is the grasshopper. He folds himself up like the jack knife, releases himself like an arrow from a bended bow, propels himself over large spaces, and subsists on the country he covers. He assimilates the people to himself. When he alights upon the field the farmer looks for his crop, and behold, like the grasshopper which has passed, he has antennæ."

—This is what a man gets for being too literal in New York. He was drunk, and wore exceedingly muddy boots. Having paused before a carpet store in the Bowery, about the entrance of which, on the sidewalk, was a tempting array of plain and fancy door-mats, he read the entreaty on one of them, "Please wipe your feet," and then proceeded nonchalantly to comply with the request. An indignant proprietor pushed him into the muddy street; a policeman placed him on his feet, then clubbed him down again in the most approved fashion, and finally carried him to the police station.

Is Your Stomach Uneasy?

Many a dyspeptic Croesus would be willing, it is said, to give half his wealth for an easy stomach. If this is a fact, why do any of our "solid men" continue to endure the pangs of indigestion? Is it not patent to the whole community that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will cure the worst case of chronic dyspepsia in six or eight weeks? No occasion for the expenditure of half a fortune; a few dollars will suffice to accomplish the object. Surely, every man who is not "sand blind" to the great utilitarian facts of the day must know that this celebrated vegetable specific promptly relieves all diseased conditions of the stomach, liver, bowels and nervous system, restores their vigor and imparts regularity to their functions. Is your epigastrium uneasy? Is the vulture, disease, gnawing at your liver? If so, resort at once to the Bitters.

At thirty-five the Average American discovers that he has an "Infernal Stomach," and goes into the hands of the doctors for the remnant of his life. Prevention is better than cure, but DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS will both cure and prevent dyspepsia, diseases of the skin, liver, kidneys, and bladder, and all disorders arising from an "infernal Stomach." jy22 4w are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skilful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take, and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,

Local Matters.

Jottings From The Shoals.

Mr. Lemuel B. Caswell, who has interested himself in having the breakwater between Cedar and Smuttynose Islands rebuilt or repaired, is at last repaid for his labor. Assistant Engineer Stephen Haagerson, of Gen. Thom's staff, has been detailed to make survey preparatory, it is hoped, to rebuilding. Although Mr. Caswell has been burned out and has sold his property at Star Island, he still clings to the old locality and is proprietor of the old hotel on Smuttynose. A few more guests can be accommodated by Mr. Caswell, and his old Portsmouth friends may always expect a warm reception at his hands.

Mr. Henry C. Barnabee gave a concert to the guests of the Appledore House, Monday evening, and was greeted by a large and enthusiastic audience.

Carl Benver rowed from Smuttynose to Star Island in a tub, a day or two since, and had an appreciative crowd of lookers-on to see the sport.

Laconics.

The ward committee of ward four will hold a meeting this (Thursday) evening at half past 7 o'clock. All republicans of the ward are invited to be present.

A consolidated picnic of the Universalist Society and the Daughters of Rebecca, I. O. O. F., is to come off at Stratham hill this day, Thursday. Tickets (25cts.) may be had at Hill & Carr's.

Our correspondent at Rye Beach, referring to the shocking accident at the Sea View House, writes that Mr. Sawyer was reading a paper at the time, and received the charge squarely in the face and head, at a distance of only thirty or forty feet. He was very badly cut up, and it is feared he will lose the use of one or both eyes. The gun was a light double-barrel breech-loader, which was all that saved him from instant death. Both barrels of the gun were loaded and it was by the most culpable negligence left where it would be most likely to be picked up—in the public hall—which is at all hours liable to be filled with people. The injured man was conveyed to his room and at once attended by Dr. Nichols, who was near by when the accident happened. The father of the boy who left the gun in the hall has headed a subscription for young Sawyer with $500.

One gang of longshoremen discharged at the Concord railroad wharf during the month of July, about 4900 tons of coal. They are allowed four cents per ton each, for discharging.

Mr. Channing Folsom, teacher of the Haven school, has tendered to the committee his resignation to take effect September 1st.

The Times speaks of "Ex-Attorney" Rolfe.

Hon. Seth Padelford, Ex-Governor of Rhode Island, is at the Appledore.

Nast and Treasurer Spinner have been guests at the Sea View House, Rye Beach, this season.

Ensigns Perrin Busbee and S. A. Staunton, and Midshipman W. H. Slack, have reported for duty on U. S. R. S. Sabine.

Higgins, who was arrested by the police some time since on suspicion, and upon whom was found some $80 in scrip, has been identified by Deputy Sheriff Libby, of Augusta, as a convict recently discharged from Thomastown State Prison. The scrip found upon him has also been identified as that stolen from two stores in Maine. Higgins was carried to Augusta, by City Marshal Johnson, Wednesday.

"Rock Me To Sleep, Mother."

Mrs. Elizabeth Akers Allen, the reputed author of "Rock Me to Sleep, Mother," writes a lively letter to the New York World contradicting a statement that "the poem was written by her while a factory girl in Maine, upon the sheet of coarse brown wrapping paper in which she had brought her noon-time lunch and while waiting for the hour to recommence labor." She says: "The careful particularity of detail visible in this bit of news gives it a smack of authenticity which is almost irresistibly convincing. In fact, I could almost believe it myself, had I not been previously informed by an equally veracious newspaper correspondent that I wrote the poem by the bedside of my dying little boy, in Boston, when, under the heaviest pressure of misfortune and poverty, I was earning a pinched living for him and myself by doing slop-work without a sewing-machine. I was naturally enough surprised at this, for I never lived in Boston, I never did slop-work without a sewing-machine, I never earned my little boy's living, I never wrote verses at his bedside, my little boy never died, and I never had a little boy.

Still I did not dispute the story, for I consider contradiction suggestive of ill-breeding, and an alternative to be resorted to only in extremities. And it was as well that I did not, for I was presently assured through the same channel that I wrote the poem out of the lowest depths of poverty and despair, caused by the desertion of my husband, with whom I had eloped from boarding-school, and who had repaid my devotion by forsaking me the next day. Notwithstanding the unusual brevity of my matrimonial career and the fact that I had previously been the idol of a happy home, his desertion appears to have left me in utter wretchedness and imminent danger of starvation, under which depressing circumstances I wrote the poem referred to—a remorseful lament for the mother whose heart I had broken. This view was scarcely less unhappy than the former, and would have affected me deeply, excepting that I never was invited to elope from boarding-school, I never eloped from anywhere. I never attended boarding-school. My husband never deserted me, and I never broke my mother's heart.

But I was drawn away from the mournful contemplation of these things by a third statement to the effect that I wrote the poem on my death-bed in Philadelphia, in a wretched hovel where the rain drifted in across the miserable bed whereon I soon afterward breathed my last. This was the best story of the three, because it was conclusive—it put the unfortunate writer out of her misery. But just as I commenced to exult over this consummation, a Jersey gentleman, Mr. Alexander M. W. Ball, found another world to conquer, and published a book to prove that I never wrote the poem at all but had stolen it from him. What was I to believe? I had at different times been informed through the newspapers that a Miss Elizabeth Alger of New York city, another lady out West, a gentleman somewhere else, and a blacksmith in Georgia each wrote the poem, and each had friends to swear to it; and, as though the affair were not already sufficiently bewildering, here comes a voice of conviction from my own State, declaring through The World that I wrote the poem myself when I was a factory-girl in Maine. This is all very well, excepting that I never carried my lunch in "coarse brown-wrapping-paper," very much preferring newspaper when I cannot afford a napkin; that I should scorn to write such verses on brown paper obscured by fragments of custard pie and apple-sauce, and that I never was inside a factory in Maine.

Like the culprit in court, whose case was so pathetically presented to the jury as to touch even himself to tears, I must admit that I did not know I have suffered so much until informed of it by the sympathetic newspaper correspondent. For journals and journalists I have a sincere respect, and even a family affection, but what offence have I ever committed against that ubiquitous person, the newspaper correspondent, that in all his flights of fancy he invariably describes me as in the depths of poverty, distress and disgrace, and incapable of earning a respectable living? Why does he not say, sometimes, by way of variety, that I wrote the poem in a fine residence on Murray Hill, in a palatial mansion on Fifth avenue, in the midst of the regal rectangularity of Philadelphia, or in a vine-clad country seat on the Hudson? Why not, instead of calling me a pauper, a disobedient daughter, a discarded wife, a starving sewing-woman, or a wretched factory operative, with her lunch wrapped in coarse brown paper (that is the unkindest cut of all,) why not allow me sometimes to be a favorite of fortune, a lady of fashion, or—if it be not too much to ask—a newspaper correspondent?

One of two things is proven by these melancholy recitals of my impecuniosity; for with all these—and other—demands in my behalf on the public sympathy I have never yet received the first offer of assistance from philanthropists. Either the advantages of advertising are overstated, or the children of this world do not believe the newspapers. I make this faint protest against the irresponsible newspaper correspondent simply from a lingering instinct of self-defence and not because I expect to convince him against whom I protest.

—As to that paragraph about Esther Shaw, of Davenport, Iowa, who worked thirteen years in a family without asking a cent, it becomes necessary to say that it was a very large family Esther worked in, and they boarded at the State Prison.

—There is probably nothing else on earth that will roll like a hat. A gust of wind gets under your tile and before you realize the extent of the catastrophe you see it striking a bee line for the nearest puddle of water, into which it settles with an indifference that is highly exasperating. No man ever caught his hat until it got ready to stop, which is when it brings up under the fence, or when he drives it into the mud with his foot.

—At a recent meeting of the New York State Cremation Society the president submitted a plan for a cremation house. It was their intention to erect a hall with walls of iron, 60x44 feet, with a rotunda in the centre supported by eight pillars. All light would be admitted from the top. In the centre would be erected an altar for religious ceremonies; and upon a large plate in front of the altar the coffin containing the dead would be deposited by the relatives. On this plate would be an iron coffin, in which the friends might place the body only, or their own coffin, if desired. The coffin would rest upon a car, and be moved by machinery toward the furnace in the rear of the altar. By means of screws the plate and coffin would be raised to the furnace, and the remains submitted to a hot air blast of 1000 degrees Fahrenheit. From 250 to 450 pounds of coal oil would be required to feed the furnace, and complete cremation would be effected in an hour and a half. Connecting with the furnace is another apparatus for condensing the gasses and smoke.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its graceful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH of the City of Portsmouth call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the City to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER 10.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 19. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 20. No person shall use or occupy any building in the compact part of the city for a slaughter-house, or for trying tallow, or for currying leather, or for the deposit of green pelts or skins, unless under such restrictions and regulations as the health officers may impose.

SEC. 22. Any person or persons who shall violate any rule or regulation, or commit any act forbidden in any section of this ordinance, to which no special penalty is annexed, shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty dollars, to be recovered by complaint before the police court of this city.

SEC. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice to the Health Officers.

SEC. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect, forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the Health Officers in the name of the city. m25 d3m

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. Eddy has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they will find it more of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, scarching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure for a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

In the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the course of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's dangers past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

The Lovers' Quarrel.

[Mary Kyle Dallas.]

We had a quarrel, Millicent and I, and it was no slight lover's quarrel to be easily forgotten. We had each said things that could not be unsaid, and done things that could not be undone, and she had given me back the letters I had sent her, and the presents that every man lavishes on the woman he loves. It was all over, and we were free again; and I tried to believe it was better so, but could not.

Poor little Millicent, her face was very sad, and her eyes very heavy when I chanced to meet her; but she had told me that she hated me as much as she once loved me, and so I tried to look merry and unconcerned as I passed her, and I got up a flirtation with red-haired Lucy Martin, and was seen about with her a good deal.

Her father had made a great deal of money by certain shoddy transactions during the war, and she was an heiress, and very much sought after, and all that sort of thing. If I had been the kind of a man who marries for money I might have tried to win the prize, perhaps, for, after a real, honest love affair has come to an untimely end, either man or woman is just ripe for something wrong in that line; and of all the wrongs that are, though many have worse names, there isn't one that is really worse than a loveless or mercenary marriage.

I wasn't bad enough for that, but I was bad enough to flirt abominably with a very decent young woman, who fancied that I meant everything, and was pleasantly frank with me in consequence, and a report even arose that I was engaged to her. I liked it; for I knew that Millicent must hear it.

Of course, when I heard that she was engaged to Tom Brown I was not pleased. You never can be sufficiently off with the old love to hear such good news without a pang. I had not sworn myself to celibacy, but it seemed to me in a measure, Millicent's duty to do so. At least it would be better taste, I thought, remembering how fond she had once seemed of me. Going into a convent, or something of that sort—at least no more love-making—I had supposed would be her course. And here she was at the opera with fan, opera-glass, bouquet and attendant adorer as if nothing had happened.

I sat in the next row with Miss Martin and looked into her eyes, and whispered compliments in a terrible sort of way, considering that I had no intentions whatever. Ah, well! she was a very practical girl, not romantic. I knew she had a budding fancy for me, but I don't think she would ever let "concealment, like a worm i' the bud, feed on the damask of her cheek."

I am sure that she married the retired grocer, who proved to be her fate, with a light heart; and I knew her appetite did not fall her, for I sat opposite her at the table one day not long since, and she took kindly to roast beef and gravy, and must have weighed at least 160 pounds; but if she had been the most spiritualic creature who ever broke her heart, I doubt if I should have remembered anything but my own selfish self that night; and all the while I was thinking, just as we remembered snatches of some familiar song while we were busy with something very different from music, of the pleasant hour my little black-eyed love and I had had together—of the softness of the velvet palm that lay unresistantly in mine as we walked in the moonlight by the river bank the summer before, when twenty of us stopped at the gay hotel at ——; of the kisses she used to let me take, and the blushes they brought to her cheeks—and I wanted to kill Brown. He was a harmless young man, with a lisp and an eye-glass, but I longed to assassinate him.

This sort of thing happened more than once during the season, and I felt glad when it was gone and summer sent "society" flying to the woods and glens and waterfalls. I did not seek the usual resort. I went to a wild out-of-the-way place and fished persistently. I did some shooting too, and I formed a friendship with a certain Mr. Briggs, who was fond of sport, so he said, though I never knew him to catch a fish, or shoot anything whatever.

No one knew where I was. I knew nothing of the whereabouts of any of my acquaintances. There were a few ladies at the hotel, principally invalids, for there were springs thereabout that had a great medicinal reputation; but it was not the sort of place to tempt "our set."

I anticipated no unpleasant meeting with people who would want to know why Milly and I had parted. And fancy my astonishment and horror when, one evening, as I took my seat at the table, I saw straight opposite me a little, pale shadow, which I recognized as all that was left of Millicent Hood. Her portly grandmother was with her, and the way that old lady didn't look at me was more dreadful than the most awful looks could have been.

I made a short meal that day, and I resolved to leave the place by the morning train. Unfortunately, I overslept myself. Wait a minute—was it unfortunate? It seemed so to me for a good while. I missed the stage at all events. There was no other way of reaching the cars, and I went out to spend the whole September day with Briggs and our guns. There was an evening stage also. I intended to go out on that.

Out in the woods, and having purposely lost sight of my companion for a little while, I sat down at the foot of a tree and fell to thinking of Millicent. Poor little girl! how worn she was—did she? But, no—so—she had declared that she hated me. Ah, there was truth in Moore's song—

"There's nothing half so sweet in life and I had awakened from it. I sighed and rested my head against the old tree. In a moment more—crack, crack, crack! A terrible pain through my head. A cry of "Oh, Lord, I thought you were a squirrel;" and I was dimly conscious that Briggs had hit something at last.
As love's young dream!"

He had hit me.

I came to myself after a week's fever and delirium, quite blind. My eyes were untouched, but the nerves had been somehow injured. There was something horrible in the surgeon's vague promises of improvement in time; and all I could say to the penitent Briggs was; "Why didn't you hit a vital part while you were about it?"

It was a horrible time. I don't like to think about it even now. I was not sure how time passed. There was no day to me, and I seemed suddenly to have been launched into a dark eternity.

One day I had a terrible longing for fresh air, and as there could be no reason for keeping me indoors, I ordered my nurse, an old colored man, to set a chair for me in some lonely spot where strangers would not be apt to spy me out. He did so. There was a little nook which I knew well, where no one save some rural fisher came. Here I bade him leave me, and return in an hour. He obeyed.

"Ah," I thought to myself, "were Millicent my wife, I should have one who would love me even now; one on whose truthful bosom I could rest my weary head."

"Millicent!" I whispered softly, "Millicent! Millicent!"

The name brought back sweet recollections. I rested my head upon my hand and indulged in them until, being still weak, I sleep overcame me.

Then I dreamed of her.

We were together in some beautiful spot and my arms were about her and her kisses were on my lips.

How vivid the dream was.

I was awake but I felt the kiss still; another and another. A hand seemed to rest on my shoulder. Involuntarily I strove to clasp it in my own. Then, then I knew it was no dream. A hand was there. It did not resist mine—a little trembling woman's hand, soft, and warm, and sweet-Millicent's own dear hand, I knew it before I drew her to me.

"It's my little one," I said. "Speak to me, I cannot see you."

"I know I ought not to be here," she sobbed, "but I—I could not help it. I am so sorry—so very, very sorry for you."

"Then you've got over hating me, Millicent," I said.

"I never hated you," she said. "I only said so. But there—I—I didn't mean you should know I was here. I thought you were asleep, and I suppose it was very wrong of me; and Miss Martin would be justly angry."

"Miss Martin!" said I. "You don't believe that story. The poor blind fellow you see before you would have little chance with Miss Martin, even if he wanted her, and he don't. But I beg your pardon, Miss Millicent; I ought not to hold your hand so long, Mr. Brown might object."

"Oh, don't, Harry," said she. "I can't be proud any longer now. I hate that Brown. I'm so glad you are not engaged to Miss Martin. Put your arm around me again, darling, and please forgive me."

When black Sam came to me I told him that Miss Millicent had been kind enough to promise to keep me company for a while and he might go.

She told me that the stars were in the sky as she led me up the steps of the old hotel, and I told her that my star had at last risen.

The doctor's predictions of some improvement were fulfilled, I could see as well as ever on my wedding day; but I never shall forget that Millicent came to me in my darkness, not guessing that it would ever be broken again on earth and gave me back the love I should not have dared to ask for. Nor can there ever be a moment more delicious than that in which I felt her lips upon my brow, and knew that Millicent and I had made up our quarrel.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 7 1874.

The Great Scandal.

"Eli Perkins" sends the following from Saratoga: One day last December, while in conversation with Anna Dickinson, the Beecher-Tilton scandal came up. It seems that every one of the strong-minded women have been discussing the question for two years. The week before Miss Dickinson had spent a day with Mrs. Tilton. When I asked her what she thought of Mrs. Tilton, Miss Dickinson said: Mrs. Tilton is a queer woman. I do not know what to make of her. She changes like a kaleidoscope; you cannot depend on her word for twelve hours. She will state a thing one moment and deny it the next. "How?" I asked. "Why, for instance," replied Miss Dickinson, "the other night Mrs. Tilton took me in her room and told me the most woful stories about Theodore's treatment of her. She said her husband 'didn't love her, didn't support her, and was cruel and abusive to her, and she wished she had a divorce,' and the very next morning," continued Miss Dickinson, "I received a letter from Elizabeth contradicting flatly all she had said the night before. This is the letter:—

My Dear Anna:—I am afraid you may have gotten the impression last night from something I said that my love for Theodore has grown cold. If I conveyed the impression to you that Theodore was not the most gentle and loving of husbands I wish to retract it, and ask you not to remember anything I may have said, or not to interpret it that I do not love my husband and he me. We are devoted to each other. Affectionately yours. ELIZABETH."

The following correspondence between Beecher and Moulton, and Moulton and Tilton, explains itself,—which is more than can be said of much of the correspondence concerning this wretched affair:

BROOKLYN, July 28, 1874.

My Dear Friend:—The committee of investigation are waiting mainly for you before closing their labors. I pray earnestly wish that you would come and clear your mind and memory of everything that can bear on my case. I pray you to bring all letters and papers relating to it which will throw any light upon, and bring to a result this protracted case. I trust that Mrs. M. has been reinvigorated and her need of your care will not be so great as to detain you. Yours truly,

H. W. BEECHER.

Under the date of Aug. 4th, Mr. Moulton acknowledges the receipt of Mr. Beecher's letter and replies: "I should be glad to do anything that I may do, consistent with my sense of what is due justice and right to aid you; but if you will, reflect that I hold all the important papers entrusted to me at the desire and request and in the confidence of both parties to this unhappy affair, you will see that I cannot, in honor, give them, or any of them, to either party to aid him as against the other. I have not given or shown to Mr. Tilton any documents or papers relating to your affairs since the renewal of your controversy which had been once adjusted.

I need not tell you how deeply I regret your position as foes each to the other after my long and as you, I have no doubt, fully believe honest and faithful effort to have you otherwise. I will sacredly hold the papers and information I have until both parties shall request me to make them public or to deliver them into the hands of either or both or to lay them before the committee, or I am compelled in court of justice to produce them if I can be so compelled.

My regret that I am compelled to this course is softened by my belief that you will not be substantially injured by it in this regard, for all the facts, of course, are known to you. I am bound to believe and assume that in the statement you are preparing you will set forth the exact facts, and if so, the documents when produced will only confirm and cannot contradict what you may state, so that you will suffer no loss. If on the contrary, which I cannot presume, you desire the possession of the documents in order that you may prove your statements in a manner not to be contravened by the facts set forth in them to the disadvantage of Mrs. Tilton, I should be then aiding you in doing that what I cannot believe the strictest and firmest friendship for you calls upon me to do. With grateful recollections of your kind confidence and trust in me,

I am very truly yours,

F. D. MOULTON.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 4, 1874.

Sir:—Your letter bearing date August 4, 1874, is this moment received. Allow me to express my regret and astonishment that you refuse me permission even to see certain letters and papers in your possession relating to the charges made against me by Theodore Tilton, and at the reason given for the refusal. On your solemn and repeated assurances of personal friendship, and in the unquestioning confidence with which you inspired me of your honor and fidelity, I placed in your hands for safe keeping various letters addressed to me from my brother, my sister, and various other parties; also a memorandum of affairs not immediately connected with Mr. Tilton's matters. I also from time to time addressed you confidential notes relating to my own self, as one friend would write to another. These papers were never placed in your hands to be held for two parties, nor to be used in any way. They were to be held for me. I did not wish them to be subject to the risk of loss or scattering, from my careless habits in the matter of preserving documents. They were to be held for me. In so far as these papers were concerned, you were only a friendly trustee, holding papers subject to my wishes. Mr. Tilton has made a deadly assault upon me, and has used letters or fragments of letters purporting to be copies of these papers. Are these extracts genuine? Are they garbled? What are their dates? What, if anything, has been left out, and what put in? You refuse my demand for these papers on the various pleas.—That if I speak the truth in my statement I do not need them; that if I make a successful use of them it will be an injury to Mr. Tilton; and that you as a friend of both parties are bound not to aid either in any act that shall injure the other. But I do not desire to injure any one, but to repel an injury attempted upon me by the use of papers committed sacredly to your care. These documents have been seen and copied. They have been hawked for sale in New York newspaper offices. What purport to be my confidential notes to you are in the market; but when I demand a sight of the originals of papers of which you are only a trustee, that I may defend myself, you refuse because you are the friend of both parties. Mr. Tilton has access to your depository for materials with which to strike me, but I am not permitted to use them in defending myself. I do not ask you to place before the committee any papers which Mr. Tilton may have given you, but I now demand that you forthwith place before the committee every paper which I have written and deposited with you.

Yours truly, H. W. BEECHER.

My Dear Sir:—In all our acquaintance and friendship I have never received from you a letter of the tone of yours of August 4th. It seems unlike yourself and to have been inspired by the same ill adviser who has so lamentably carried your private affairs before a committee of your church and thence before the public.

In reply let me remind you that during the whole of the past four years all the documents, dates and memoranda which you and Mr. Tilton have entrusted to me have been so entrusted because they had reference to your mutual defence. I hold no papers either of yours or of his except such as bear in this case. You speak of a memorandum of affairs not immediately connected with the Tilton matter. You probably allude here to the memoranda of your difficulties with Mr. Bowen, but these have a direct bearing on your present case with Mr. Tilton and were deposited with me because of their reference to this affair.

You speak also of a letter or two from your sister and I am sure you have not gotten the apprehension we felt lest Mrs. Hooper should effect a design which she foreshadowed to take your pulpit and read to your congregation the confession of your intimacy with Mrs. Tilton. You speak of other papers which I hold subject to your wishes. I hold none such, nor do I hold any subject to Mr. Tilton's wishes. The papers which I hold, both yours and his, were not given to be subject to either of the parties, but the very object of my holding them was and still is to the present, the wish of one party from being injuriously exercised against the other.

You are incorrect in saying that Mr. Tilton has had access to my depository of material. On the contrary I refuse to give him access. During the preparation of his sworn statement, he came to me and said his case would be incomplete unless I gave him access to all documents, but I refused, and all he could rely upon were such notes as he had made from time to time from writings of yours which you had written to me to be read by him, and passages of which he caught from my lips in short hand.

Mr. Tilton has seen only a list of the papers in my possession and would be more surprised to learn the entire facts of the case than you can possibly be. What idle rumors may have existed in newspaper offices I know not, but they have not come from me.

In closing your letter you say: "I do not ask you to place before the committee any papers which Mr. Tilton may have given you, but I do demand that you forthwith place before the committee every paper which I have written or deposited with you." In reply I can only say that I cannot justly place before the committee the papers of one of the parties without doing the same with the papers of the other. I cannot do this honorably, except either by legal process compelling me, or else by consent in writing not only of yourself but Mr. Tilton, with whom I shall confer on the subject as speedily as possible.

You will, I trust, see a greater spirit of justice in this reply than you have infused into your unusual letter of Aug. 4th.

Very res'y, F. D. MOULTON.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 5, 1874.

Theodore Tilton, Esq.—My Dear Sir:—I have received, under date of July 28, a letter from the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, in which he expresses the wish that I would go before the investigating committee and clean my mind and memory of everything that can bear on this case, referring, of course, to the controversy between you and him. I cannot in view of my confidential relations with you make any statement before the investigating committee, unless you release me, as Mr. Beecher has done, explicitly from my obligation to maintain your confidence. If you will express to me clearly a request that I should go before the investigating committee and state any and all the facts within my knowledge concerning your case with Mr. Beecher and exhibit to them any or all documents in my possession relating thereto, I shall, in view of Mr. Beecher's letter, consider myself at liberty to accede to the request of the committee to state such facts and exhibit such documents.

Very respectfully,

FRANCIS D. MOULTON.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 5, 1874.

Francis D. Moulton, Esq.—My Dear Sir: In response to your note of this day mentioning Mr. Beecher's request that you should exhibit to the committee the facts and documents hitherto held in confidence by you touching his differences with me, I hereby give you notice that you have my own consent and request to do the same.

Truly yours,

THEODORE TILTON.

A Puzzle.

[Concord Monitor.]

Among other partisan enactments of the last session of the Legislature was one taking the town of Danbury from Grafton County, and annexing it to the county of Merrimack. The "Boss" candidly vouchsafed the explanation at the time that the change was made wholly in the interests of the democracy. But the law also provides that Danbury shall be made part of such Councillor and Congressional Districts as now embrace the entire county of Merrimack, and as this county under both the old and new apportionment comprised part of two Councillor Districts, and as Danbury joins Hill on one side, which is in the Second District, and Wilmot on the other side, which is in the Third District, both in Merrimack county, it may puzzle its voters to know how to vote at the next election for Councillor. Great is democratic legislation! By the way, is it true that by an oversight in the various gerrymanders, one town has been left out in the cold, and is without a classification in any district?

—"There, John, that's twice you've come home and forgotten that lard." "La, mother, it was so greasy that it slipped my mind."

—"Quite a hail-storm last night," remarked a guest to a California landlord, as he came down stairs the other morning. "No. Only a few of the boys shooting at a Chinaman, and the balls rattled against the house."

THE BRITISH QUARTERLY REVIEW for July, reprinted by the Leonard Scott Publishing Company, New York, contains the following articles: "The Depths of the Sea," an account of recent deep-sea exploration, giving the latest theories about the Gulf Stream and other oceanic currents, and explaining the method of taking soundings and of finding the temperature of the warm and cold depths; "David Friedrich Strauss;" "Lord Kimberley's Indian Administration;" "Science, Philosophy and Religion;" "Far Russia;" "The Primeval Archæology of Rome;" "The Tory Administration and its Whig Admirers;" and a chapter on "Finger Rings."

Local Matters.

Laconics.

The Times gives what it says is "part of the programme" of the republicans relative to raising funds for campaign purposes, "laid down at a recent meeting" of the workers of the party. As the whole matter was placed in the hands of a committee, not a member of which committee has yet been appointed, the enterprise of the Times is something wonderful.

The republicans of the fourth ward chose the following ward committee, Wednesday evening: A. F. Howard, chairman, Amos S. Foster, secretary, Samuel S. Whidden, Chas. A. Gray, Daniel H. Spinney, William Plaisted, Rufus K. Oxford, Chas. Hiram Hayes, Elijah Clough, Jacob Haddock, and William A. Ashe. It was voted to have a plan of the ward drawn and to make a thorough canvass, which was done on Thursday.

Mr. Hugh S. Farron, of Exeter, in our advertising columns challenges Mr. William Morrisey of this city to pull a five mile single-scull race for one hundred dollars or upwards,—best boats, best can.

The beautiful yacht "Scud," with members of the Boston Fire Department on board, made this port Thursday forenoon.

Assistant Engineer Frank Randall, recently appointed from this city, has been ordered to duty on the Revenue Cutter at Key West.

Col. Andrew H. Young and ninety others from Dover arrived here on Thursday and went to the Shoals. Referred to the committee on judiciary.

Secretary Robeson attended the ball on U. S. R. S. Sabine, Thursday evening.

The Marine Band went to South Berwick, Thursday, with the Hibernian Society of Dover.

George F. Bailey, Esq., general passenger agent, has published under the auspices of the Eastern and Maine Central line, an interesting guide book to the seaside resorts, the White Mountains and the maritime provinces. It contains a well-written description of the routes, the points of interest, time-tables, distances, fares, and other valuable information for the tourist, traveller or pleasure seeker. It is well illustrated by a series of maps and cuts, and is published for gratuitous distribution. The very comprehensive scheme of tickets for excursions all over Maine, New Hampshire, the mountains and the provinces, recently issued by the Eastern Railroad, will doubtless stimulate travel, and it will be worth while for all who are contemplating a pleasure trip over the line to obtain one of these little hand-books.

At the annual meeting of the Portsmouth Savings Bank, held August 5th, Henry M. Clark, and Wm. A. Vaughan, Jr., were chosen corporators, and Edward P. Kimball ane Benjamin F. Webster trustees, to fill the vacancies in those Boards made by the death of Messrs. John P. Lyman and John E. Salter.

The hay crop in this vicinity is unprecedentedly large, and by far the largest part of what has been cut has been secured in good order. The standing grass on a farm in the neighborhood was recently sold by auction for a dollar a ton.

State News.

Mrs. Harriet Twiss, an inmate of the New Hampshire Asylum for the Insane, formerly of Amherst, committed suicide in her room Thursday morning, suspending herself by the use of a twisted sheet. The deceased was thirty-nine years of age, and has been an inmate of the asylum about six months.

The man named Foss who was badly injured by jumping from a moving passenger train near Amoskeag a few weeks ago has been taken to the Insane Asylum at Concord. His insanity was caused by the injuries then received.

The annual Methodist camp meetings are held at the Weirs and at Epping. The Weirs camp meeting opens August 17, and continues through the week. This is one of the most beautiful places in the country, bordering Lake Winnipesankee, about 40 miles from Concord, on the B. C. & M. R. R., and in a most beautiful and shaded grove. The camp-meeting at Epping, 20 miles from this city, on the Concord & Portsmouth R. R., commences the 24th and continues until Sunday. Many prominent pastors and an immense number of people are expected to be present, as has been the case in previous years. This month the Spiritualists are holding theirs at Lake Massabesic, four miles from Manchester, continuing twelve days.

Two hundred and eighty-one people ascended Mt. Washington from the Glen House, Thursday week—the largest number yet in one day.

Sunday, a little daughter of L. Chamberlain, of Dover, while climbing up some steps leaning against a woodshed, fell with a poodle dog in her arms, breaking her right arm badly.

Readables.

It is stated that the firm of Sutton & Co. have failed. Liabilities $180,000. They printed the Aldine.

The recent tragedy at St. Albans is apparently no nearer a solution than ever. The story that a man in Montreal had made a confession turns out to be a canard. A man from Holyoke is detained on suspicion, as is also a man by the name of Frederick O. Lapoint. The St. Albans Messenger says: "There is another curious incident which some think may afford a clew. Some three years ago a Frenchman named Roy and his wife assisted a villain to outrage a young girl in their house in Sweetsburg, P. O. Roy fled to this country, but his wife was arrested, and sentenced by Foster to the full extent of the law. Last Wednesday, to the surprise of everybody, Roy voluntarily returned to Sweetsburg, where he had nothing to call him, was arrested, waived his right to a jury, and submitted to trial and sentence by the same judge who had sentenced his wife. This conduct was so strange that it is suspected he may have fled from a worse impending fate on this side the line."

Miss Gottschalk is to edit the life of her brother, the pianist.

Overstrained—Mrs. Mary Strain, of Pittsburg, who married three brothers.

"Unmanned by the loss of her husband" is the new style of indicating a widow's grief.

The girls of an Illinois seminary amuse themselves by spitting at a mark.

Tight lacing is said to be coming into fashion again for the convenience of short-armed lovers.

While picking feathers for her wedding pillow recently, Hattie Saunders of White Pigeon, Michigan, was struck by lightning and killed.

A story is going the rounds of a lady who wears a bustle made of railroad bonds. The husband of such a creature certainly ought to be a pacific male.

"I'm not in mourning," said a young lady frankly to a querist, "but as the widows are getting all the offers now-a-days, we poor girls have to resort to artifice."

Ladies are said to be the biggest thieves on the face of the globe—because they steel their petticoats, bone their stays, crib their babies and hook their dresses.

According to the Detroit Free Press the belle of Dubuque won a silk dress by carrying a bod of brick to the top of a forty-foot ladder while a great crowd stood and cheered at the sight.

Lucy Hooper writes to the Philadelphia Press: Queen Victoria, not content with dressing very plainly herself (and even shabbily at times) and with repressing every tendency to dressiness on the part of the ladies of the Royal family, is in the habit of snubbing those ladies of the court who indulge in what Her Majesty is pleased to consider an overdressiness of style. I wish she would get the English dames and damsels to have their evening dresses made a little higher in the corsage. I am told that the bad taste in the dress of the Duchess of Edinburg is something fearful to contemplate. Her latest innovation in that line consists in appearing at the opera in a large lace cap, plentifully bedizened with bows and flowers. Which novel head-dress causes her royal and imperial highness to look more like a middle-aged dowager than a blooming bride.

—The number of Protestants is increasing at a remarkable rate in Rome and Mexico.

—Somebody observes that when six young ladies sit down to talk about a new dress pattern a small boy with a tin horn is the refuge for the weary.

—One of the greatest humiliations a southern gentlemen of free and unmixed blood has to undergo is the being locked up by colored jailers, who have lately been elected.

—One of the most dreadful results of the western crusade has been the invention of an agonizing word. A Cleveland newspaper has something to say of the "extreme temperancists."

—It is wrong, says the Journal of Health, to get up before you feel like it. True, true; but it would take a boarding-house keeper a hundred years to learn even such a little, simple thing as that.

—A little cock-eyed fellow strolled into a Washington newspaper office the other evening with a piece of manuscript in his hand and a merry twinkle in his eye, saying: "Say, Mister, will you put our game in the paper?" "What game, my son?" "Why, I belongs to the Arrow base ball club, and we had a match game with Gem for forty cents, and after we licked 'em they stole our bats from us, and put a head on the umpire, and took the forty cents." "Well, what do you want to mention that in the paper for?" "Oh, we don't want anything sed about that, but we wants to challenge 'em for a square game." Just here an elderly lady, with an umbrella under her arm, came creeping slowly in the door, and caught the youngster by the left ear and waltzed him off down the steps. The boy said nothing, neither did the old woman, but there appeared to be a perfect understanding between them.

Hay Tea for Calves.

"A young farmer" correspondent of the Boston Journal, thinks he has made a discovery in using hay tea for raising a calf. He says of the calf: "It grows finely, is fat enough, and seems to like its hay tea, and to be just as well satisfied with a full meal of that as it would be if it had taken its full right from the cow. I never tried hay tea before, and never saw it made or fed out. It is not as much trouble to make hay tea as it is to make porridge, and the cost is nothing. I cut my hay, the finest and best I have, about two inches long, and pour boiling water over it. Let it stand until cooled to about the heat of milk from the cow, then take the hay out, and give the hay to the cow, and the tea to the calf. One of my neighbors says I am making the hay worth more for the cow, and sogetting a profit besides raising the calf. At any rate she eats it greedily. The longer the hay steeps before it gets cool the more strength there is in it."

Hay tea has long been used to raise calves on, and, being the nutriment of the hay in solution, must contain just the food needed by the calf. Hay, cut at the right time, is an excellent food to make milk, and as the calf's natural food is milk, the nutritious food of the hay dissolved in water must be the next thing to milk. But the idea that hay loses nothing by steeping it in water, is about like supposing that the grounds of the best Japan tea are stronger than the tea itself. The woody fibre is rendered more digestible by the cooking.

—A Mississippian married a widow for her money, and on the wedding night possessed himself of the treasure and struck out. Unluckily for him his wife's daughter, a strapping girl of twenty, observed the theft and departure. Giving chase she overtook her papa, threw him down, tied him to a tree and corrected him with a hickory stick. Presently the bride appeared and joined her daughter in the castigation. The piteous cries of the unhappy groom soon reached the ears of the police, who hurried to the spot. Tied to the roots of the tree was the husband of only a few hours' creation; the step-daughter, with her night-clothes torn into threads, stick in hand, and rapidly repeating the licks, while the bride was punching him in the ribs with her fist, calling him thief, robber, Ku-Klux, using cuss words, etc., and demanding her money. The case was compromised by the return of the money, but the honeymoon was over.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH of the City of Portsmouth call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the City to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER 10.

SEC. 2. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 10. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 9. No person shall use or occupy any building in the compact part of the city for a slaughter-house, or for trying tallow, or for currying leather, or for the deposit of green pelts or skins, unless under such restrictions and regulations as the health officers may impose.

SEC. 12. Any person or persons who shall violate any rule or regulation, or commit any act forbidden in any section of this ordinance, to which no special penalty is annexed, shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty dollars, to be recovered by complaint before the police court of this city.

SEC. 13. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice to the Health Officers.

SEC. 14. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect, forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the Health Officers in the name of the city. m25 d3m

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent, and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, so easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, enfeeling creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot wisely hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a more effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they disorder, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Alimentation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and sure Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croup, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stages at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

A Stroll with a Candidate.

[St. Louis Republican.]

The campaign is coming on. In fact, it is already here. A campaign is something that makes candidates plenty. It makes drinks cheap, too—for everybody but the candidates. You have all seen a candidate and know how he looks. The fact is, you can't see much else at this season of the year.

But the Americans are a patriotic race. Ninety-nine out of every hundred of them will give up a situation worth $5000 a year to take an office worth $2000, and think he has done a big thing. It is so genteel to be a servant of the State at Jefferson City or in Washington. By the way, let us draw a distinction. There are two great public buildings at Jefferson City, both of which are set apart for the servants of the State. In one case the servants are nominated by a convention and elected by a majority. In the other case they are nominated by a grand and elected by a petit jury. There is a great deal of difference in the service rendered by these two classes of servants of the State, but sometimes there isn't as much difference between the two classes of servants as there ought to be.

But to resume. About every other man you meet now-a-days is a candidate. You can always tell him when you see him, by the benevolent look on his face. Well, one of the intellectual agents (vulgarly called reporters) of the Republican met a candidate yesterday. Walked with him around two squares. It was a terrible ordeal.

Did you ever walk with a candidate at this season of the year, and if so, how did you get home? Probably in a handcart. But may be in a wheelbarrow. If you never did, don't try it. It is not good for the liver.

The intellectual agent first saw the candidate at the corner of Fourth and Chestnut. He was talking with a saloon-keeper in the third ward. The saloon-keeper is a hard case, and his place is a resort for the b'hoys. But the candidate held him affectionately by one hand and was patting him familiarly on the shoulder with the other. The saloon-keeper had the best of it, and he knew it. So he let his hat slide down over his west eye and shrugged up his east shoulder, as much as to say he was a sort of king-pin in the political apple-cart.

Something was said about King's. The candidate said it, of course, for he was doing all the talking. So King's it was. When we had gone about ten steps we met a somewhat dilapidated Irishman.

Candidate rushes up to him and grasps him by both hands. The intellectual agent has known this candidate for a space of four years and this was the first time he ever heard him talk with a brogue. But there it was, as unmistakable as Tipperary.

"Never knew I was an Irishman before! Why, Lord bless you, I've always been an Irishman."

"Av coorse hez an Irishman."

Then there was a brief season of whispered confidence, and the advance upon King's was resumed with reinforcements. By the time we got there we had picked up seven recruits. They were a hard set—all but the candidate and the intellectual. Then we went out and on down the street. Met two more freshmen. They were old friends of our candidate. Had known him sixteen years; knew him in the old country. More drinks—of course. This time it was the Hole-in-the-Walls. Then went out on the sidewalk and met more constituents. The constituent is a thirsty soul, particularly at this season of the year. Still more drinks. Then we started for Olive street. Between Pine and Olive met thirteen constituents. Candidate shook hands with all of them, patted nine of them on the back, took four of them to one side for a confidential talk, and loaned one of them half a dollar. At the corner of Fourth and Olive met three more constituents; shook hands with them, and spoke about going down towards Third; started down, and on the way picked up five recruits. It is amazing how many constituents it takes to make an office-holder. This time it was beer. Then more beer. Finally still more beer. It requires a great deal of beer to create the same amount of patriotic fervor that can be evolved from a small quantity of whiskey. It would never do for a candidate for any important office, with a large constituency, to depend on beer. He would burst before the campaign was half over. Beer is undoubtedly healthier for the constituents than whiskey, but it would be death to the candidate.

Recapitulation: Walked around two blocks; met thirty constituents; treated eight of them to whiskey; had confidential talks with seven; inquired after the families of nine; beered nine; loaned half a dollar to one. And the convention is not even called yet.

—The case of the first alderman ever sunstruck is recorded at east St. Louis.

—The man who keeps on voting for General Washington lives in Jersey. The Hackensack Republican sticks a pitchfork into him thusly: There was one man who lives in the county, and happened in town for the first time for quite a while. He wanted to know what all the bunting was displayed for. He was informed that it was in honor of General Grant's visit. "General Grant? who's he?" "Why, the President, of course." "The President of what?" "The United States." "Oh!"

Readables.

Says the World: The eyes of Mr. Jay Gould are very dry over the death of "Lord" Gordon.

A terrible gale is reported off the coast of Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and it is feared that many fishing boats are lost.

Beecher is very desirous that Frank Moulton shall testify before he does—for how can Henry Ward tell whether he is guilty or not before hearing the evidence?

A soldier named Howard was shot dead at Fort Adams, Newport, R. I., on Thursday, while trying to desert. He deserted two years ago, but was recently caught and returned to the service, and sentenced to the usual punishment. A sentry named Cassidy had charge of Howard and two other prisoners, who were engaged in piling wood, when Howard suddenly knocked Cassidy down with a large club and attempted to take away his gun, and the sentry shot him. Howard belonged in Providence, and was a dangerous and worthless fellow.

Although the up-country summer hotels are not doing so much business as usual, the boarding houses are literally crammed, especially on the route between Plymouth and the mountains.

The North Carolina State election, Thursday, has gone democratic, with seven democratic congressmen out of eight. Disturbances occurred between the blacks and whites, and there was some fighting.

The conservative ticket was successful in the Tennessee State election.

The American base ballists in England played a cricket match with the Prince's cricket club of London — twenty-two against eleven—on Thursday, and won it. A base ball match followed, the Bostons winning by a score of 14 to 11 for the Athletics.

On Friday last, as Mr. Sewall Dow was engaged, with other workmen, in taking the roof from off the dye-house of the Salisbury Mills (Mass.) Company, his foot slipped, and he came near falling into a vat of boiling dye. A rope suspended from one of the beams happened to be within his reach and grasping this he was saved from a terrible death.

State News.

The students from Bates College, Lewiston, Me., and Phillips Academy, Exeter, who are serving as table-waiters at the Glen House, are giving universal satisfaction. A gentleman who stopped at the Glen was so much pleased with their manly bearing that he left with Mr. Milliken $300 to be divided among them, giving to each a little more than seven dollars. Their regular pay is $30 a month. The boys thus employ their vacation to aid in paying bills of term time.

Joseph Mills, a thief who has served two terms in the State Prison, is a supporter of the "third term" principle. He is now in Dover jail for stealing a coat with about $25 in the pockets, from the entry of William H. Lynch's dwelling in that city, on the 30 ult.

In Tuftonborough the grasshoppers have been very destructive on some farms, eating up the beans, potatoes, and trimming up the clover, leaving nothing but the stalks. Since the farmers have mowed their grass the grasshoppers have taken wing and gone on to the forest and apple trees. The consequence is they eat the stems of the apples, and the ground under the trees is covered with fruit.

Rev. William T. Savage, D. D., has resigned his pastorate at Franklin, to take effect September 4, on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his settlement there; the reason assigned for this step is that the promised chapel is not yet built. The church has accepted the resignation.

Reports from various sections represent that the blackberry crop promises to be the largest for many years.

A travelling circus company has sued Great Falls for damages incurred through the unrepaired condition of its roads, whereby several of the troupe got great falls.

The mills of the Amoskeag, Stark, Langdon and Namaska corporations at Manchester are at present operated up to their full capacity. The managers of the Manchester Print Works corporation are steadily increasing its business and making important alterations, and it is expected that all of the mills will within a few months at least, be running.

In the last four years the houses of Whitefield have doubled in number and valuation.

The stallion Hambleton Patchen, owned by A. Churchill, Esq., of Exeter, died at his owner's stable, recently, after a sickness of thirty-six hours. He was valued by his owner at $5,000.

Miss Ann Eliza Brewster of Barnstead, aged 28, drowned herself this morning in Suncook pond. Her father died last week and it is supposed that grief from his loss was the cause of the suicide.

Mr. John F. Hobbs, for more than twenty years a freight conductor on the Concord Railroad, died at Nashua Wednesday evening, aged 52.

The Nashua Telegraph says "a good many mechanics are out of work here, and hard up."

The Canaan Reporter man, after speaking of the Beecher scandal, and the Goose Pond murder, said: "We wait the next excitement." He didn't have to wait long. It came in his own household in the shape of a nine pound boy.

Mr. Oliver W. Osgood of Amesbury, Mass., who has been unwell for some weeks, went into the parlor of his house on Friday afternoon to lie down on a lounge, as had been his custom, and as he seemed to be sleeping longer than usual, an attempt was made by his mother to awaken him at about four o'clock, when it was discovered that he was dead. His disease was dropsy of the heart.

A boy was rescued from drowning at Kingston pond on Tuesday afternoon. He recklessly went swimming after pond-lilies and got his feet entangled in the stems of the lily-pads and was unable to extricate them. His cries brought timely assistance from a party of men near by. He gave the name of Patrick Connlss, and said he lived in Amesbury.

A Year of Plenty.

The United States Economist has an article on the crop prospects of the world the present season which is of more than usual interest:—

It would seem as though the world moved in cycles or periods of years, and that during these cycles all human events and even the very order and character of the seasons and of nature herself partook of one general feature or impression, from which there can be no departure. The nations have experienced long visitations of war and peace, famine and plenty, sickness and salubrity, of which the existence or duration could not be accounted for by any ordinary processes of ratiocination. Thus we read in Scripture of the seven years of plenty in the land of Egypt, followed by seven years of famine.

For several years past all the harvests of the old world have been exceptionably bad, each year being worse than the preceding one. Last year, or rather in the current harvest ending August 1, 1873, the crops in England were so deficient that that country was forced to invoke the aid of every surplus grain-producing country in the world. In ordinary years England only produces food enough for about three-fourths of her population, importing the balance from the United States, Russia, Poland, Hungary, and other countries in Central and Southern Europe. The wheat deficiency usually amounts to 8,000,000 quarters—32,000,000 bushels—but for the harvest year of 1873-74 this was increased to 13,000,000 quarters, or about 114,000,000 bushels. In ordinary seasons this largely increased demand would not have imposed any very great strain on the grain-producing countries. But there were short crops not only in England but in other countries on which England depended for supplies. France, Germany, Poland, Hungary, and all Central and Southern Europe complained of scarcity, and in the place of sellers became buyers for the world's limited surplus of food. Even in Southern Russia, the granary of Europe, a drought destroyed the crops, and so far from obtaining the usual supplies in that quarter, it required all the resources of the Russian people to prevent a famine there. Along the usually fertile banks of the Po, which produces food in abundance for the teeming millions of Austria and Germany, there arose a wail of grief and want. In fine, every country in Europe had a deficient harvest, and if it were not for the reserved stocks in other nations and the abundant yield in the United States, and more particularly in California, famine and famine prices would have been the inevitable results.

But this year seems to open a new cycle or era of plenty to the nations. The harvest accounts from almost every country are all that could be desired. From Austria and Hungary we hear that the 'condition of the harvest is either excellent, or affords prospects of at least an average yield. In most parts of France the harvest had already commenced, and farmers generally express themselves as well satisfied. The vintage, always a matter of extreme importance to the poorer classes in that country, was also very good.' From Russia and Northern Europe generally the accounts of the wheat crop are very good, although oats, which in those countries constitute an important element, are rather deficient. In England the harvest prospects are so good that the food deficiency of the country will be reduced nearly, if not quite, one-half from the average of the last two years, respectively. In other words, England will, next year, probably require from 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 bushels less wheat than usual from the food producing nations.

Turning to our own country it is now definitely known that there is little if anything to be desired in the way of food supplies that have not been granted by an ever bountiful Providence. The wheat harvest of California and the Pacific Coast is now safe, and is overflowing largely, exceeding even the abundant supplies of last year. In the rest of the country and especially in the Northwest, the yield of wheat will be very large, and the harvest above the average. Corn is also doing well, the increased acreage, chiefly in the Southern States, being no less than 2,000,000 acres, according to the now generally accurate Report of the Agricultural Department. Plenty of corn generally means cheap pork and provisions, and good times in the West and South.

The effects of the generally favorable crop reports from all parts of the world on prices remain to be seen. It now seems quite certain that Europe, and particularly England, will require very much less breadstuffs than in former years. But the tendency of England of late years has been to diminish her supplies from Russia and increase them from the United States. Our grain trade with England for a couple of years past shows a very satisfactory increase, and if there is no interruption to this movement in consequence of improved harvests in Russia, or other causes, our markets may show a decided stability, and the Fall export trade may be even larger this year than last.

The assurance of cheap and abundant food carries to all peoples in all lands the welcome assurance of good times and plenty of employment. History establishes nothing more clearly than the fact that the masses prosper only when food is abundant and cheap. All classes seem to feel the genial influences of the times. Capital is unlocked, and flows in new channels, attracted no doubt, by the cheapness of investments and the prospects of large returns. Certainly nature seems to have dealt bountifully with the nations this year. It only remains to hope that man will not impiously abuse these bounties by wars and threats of wars, and by scarcely less injurious laws, which arbitrarily interfere with the free exchange of commodities.

Catching a Tartar.

[St. Louis Republican.]

There were four of them and they were young bloods: young bloods. You have seen a young blood. He is the son of his father and his father is rich. He is called a young blood because he bleeds the old man. The young blood toils not, neither does he spin—but his head spins once in a while. Well, there were four of them. It was Sunday night. They had been out to Rinkle's and were coming home, on the St. Charles rock road. They sat in a two-seated buggy, drawn by a dashing span of bays. Presently they came to the large open common at the intersection of the rock and Kings highway.

Here an episode occurred. You have all seen an episode.

It is something sudden.
And so unexpected.

It seizes you with amazement. Transfixes you with awe. In this instance the episode mashed your nose.

A countryman was driving home in a lowly truck-wagon drawn by an aged and methodical gray horse. The young bloods came dashing up with their prancing bays. The young bloods were beery.

But the countryman had about two drinks of whiskey in him and hence had the advantage.

A gill of whiskey contains the same amount of fight as a gallon of beer, and then it is so much handier and less cumbersome.

The young bloods drew rein and the countryman hollored whoa! The y. b. asked c. if he could tell them where they were going.

The profane c. told them "to hell."

Then one of the y. b. said "you're a blanked liar."

At this the countryman laid down his lipes, and got out of his truck wagon right into the middle of the road, and made a speech as follows: "You roosters has lit on the wrong fence. Just one of you stay in the wagon and hold the horses and the other three git right out here. I ken lay all the dust between here and town with ye. Oh! I'm the feller that can keep the flies off. I'm befter than any muskeeter bar. Just one of you hold them horses—my old mare 'll stand without hitchin—and the balance jist waltz to Joseph right here now. Come on! git out!!" And the irate countryman announced his firm belief in the canine parentage of the young bloods. Then he danced and pranced up and down the road and kicked at the horses' ears and gyrated his long arms and threw his old slouch hat high up in the air, "Oh, I'm a catamount, I am. I like to be stopped in the middle of the road, I do. I'm a four-year-old built pawin' up big clods right off the ground, I am. I'm a whole menagerie of royal Bengal tigers, and a cage full of grizzly bears. I've fit in the ring, I have. Git out, I say, and I'll show you whar you're goin'!"

Then three of the young bloods pulled off their coats and accepted the pressing invitation. The other sat in the buggy and held the horses. He was the lucky one. He could go to see his girl the next night, if he wanted to, and not have to tell her that he had been out to the base-ball match and got hit with the ball. The best place in that vicinity was in the buggy, holding the horses.

Well, the three bounded out. Then the countryman set those long arms going, and the three immediately imagined that the hot spell had brought on a tornado, accompanied by an earthquake and enlivened by rapid strokes of lightning.

That countryman seemed to have about fifteen fits.

"I'll tell ye whar you're goin'," he yelled as the first of the three tried to climb over the fence on his east ear.

"Thar's whar you're goin'!" he shrieked, as the second of the three executed a back somersault in the ditch.

"An' this is the way for you to travel!" he yelled, as the last of three tried to balance himself on his nose in the middle of the road.

He started for the lucky fellow who was in the wagon holding the horses, but the lucky fellow let the horses go and got out of the way.

Then he made another speech, as follows: "Oh, I'm an earthquake, I am. I'm a volcano right from the bowels of the earth. Give me some more nuts to crack! Give me room! Give me some more raw meat to chaw up!"

The three slid off behind the fence, down to where number four sat holding the horses, and then slid softly into that buggy, and the buggy slid quietly into town, and then the three slid furtively into a drug store. They had been out to see the base ball match and got hit with the ball. They knew where they were going during the balance of that trip. At all events they did not inquire of any more countrymen, quietly driving home in their truck wagons.

—Ye Giglampz, a comic paper published in Cincinnati, has a capital sketch of a donkey at a cross roads, where there is a sign-post with "Inflation" pointing one way and "Contraction" another. The donkey, with the label of "Democratic" on his neck, to which is a string, drawing after him a narrow wooden platform designated as "Liberal," stands in doubt which road to take, and the pelting rain does not seem to hasten the decision.

—It was mentioned one day to President Lincoln that two young ladies of his acquaintance had quarrelled and loaded each other with abuse. "Have they called each other ugly?" asked the President. "No, sir." "Very good; then I will undertake to reconcile them."

—"Do you believe there are any people who never heard 'Old Hundred?'" asked a musical young lady at the family table. "Lots of folks never heard it," interrupted the precocious young brother. "Where are they, I should like to know?" "In the deaf and dumb asylums!"

Is Your Stomach Uneasy?

Many a dyspeptic Crœsus would be willing, it is said, to give half his wealth for an easy stomach. If this is a fact, why do any of our "solid men" continue to endure the pangs of indigestion? Is it not patent to the whole community that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will cure the worst case of chronic dyspepsia in six or eight weeks? No occasion for the expenditure of half a fortune; a few dollars will suffice to accomplish the object. Surely, every man who is not "stand blind" to the great utilitarian facts of the day must know that this celebrated vegetable specific promptly relieves all diseased conditions of the stomach, liver, bowels and nervous system, restores their vigor and imparts regularity to their functions. Is your epigastrium uneasy? Is the vulture, disease, gnawing at your liver? if so, resort at once to the Bitters.

Local Matters.

City Council.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, the selectmen of ward two were granted the use of a room in the Hanover street school house for a ward room.

The committee on fire department were authorized to repair the flag-staff on Engine House No. 2.

Fifty dollars was voted to the health officers to defray the expenses of removing a nuisance at No. 18 State street.

Notice of appeal by the Mechanics' Association from the award for damages for widening Fleet street in 1870, was received, and the City Solicitor was instructed to defend the city.

The committee on accounts reported bills approved by them, to the amount of $2128.-47; and those bills and others were ordered to be paid, or were referred.

A resolution was passed to refer the account of the city with J. Horace Kent to a special committee,—Ald. Sise and Lefavour.

Petition of L. L. Harmon and others for a common sewer in Hanover street, between Bridge and Parker streets, was granted,—the petitioners agreeing to enter the same and pay the customary fees.

Proposition of M. Eldridge for widening Cate street near his land was referred to committee on streets and Mayor, with power to act.

Laconics.

The Independent Battalion will camp out for three days in the vicinity of "The Wentworth," at Newcastle—time not yet decided.

The Journal opens the ball in favor of abolishing the steam whistle nuisance.

Mr. John P. Simes, of Stratham, was thrown from his wagon near Ex-Gov. Goodwin's residence, Friday, his horse having been frightened by the cars near the Creek, and run away. Mr. Simes escaped with slight injury, but the wagon was smashed against a tree. The horse was unhurt.

Says the Journal: "Him and her" were in town on Saturday forenoon, and, after wandering about hand-in-hand, looking into shop windows, they invested five cents at one of our stores in a glass of soda, which they sipped alternately until it was all, all gone. "Two beats with but one five-cent scrip," etc.

The State of New Hampshire has only one seaport and eighteen miles of seacoast, but from Hampton river to "Old Strawberry bank" every rod of the coast is full of fine popular seaside attractions, all largely patronized.

The apple crop in this vicinity, and in South Hampton, Kensington, Hampton and Exeter, promises to be abundant. Many trees are overburdened with the weight of the growing fruit. The canker worms did some damage in spots, early in the season, but not enough to appreciably affect the general result. On the Maine side of the river the prospect is as good.

Mrs. Celia Thaxter holds frequent levees at the Appledore, in reception of many of the literati, whom her descriptions and her presence have alike attracted to this resort.

A party from Manchester, of between fifty and sixty in number, arrived at Rye Beach on Monday, on their fifth annual camping out excursion. They occupy about a dozen tents. A clam bake will wind up their season of recreation.

The silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Marston, was observed at Newburyport last week by a large party of friends. A fine supper, pleasant addresses, good music and games extended the festivities far into the midnight hours. Wm. S. F. Pickering of Auburndale, uncle to Mr. Marston, gave a pleasing account of the boyhood and life of him in whose honor the party was held. Mr. Marston is a native of Newington, and was married in Cambridge by Rev. Mr. Newell.

A sensible letter-writer from Hampton Beach says in the New York Mail: "Tell your stay-at-home city belles that we have a house full of rosy-cheeked maidens who find it cheaper and far more enjoyable to spend a month in calico and bathing and fishing, than to sit in the back parlors because they cannot go to Saratoga or Newport."

James P. Emery of East Salisbury, who for a year or more past has been employed as a brakeman on the freight train of the Eastern railroad, received a severe blow in the head in passing under the bridge near Swampscot a week since. He seemed not to have been aware of the extent of his injuries until the day following, as he walked from the depot to his home on the arival of the train at night, and did not call a surgeon until the next day. He is now in a fair way of recovery.

The Pittsfield cotton and shoe factories will stop work to-day to allow the operatives a chance to avail themselves of the advantages of a trip to the Shoals. The Merrimack Cornet Band will accompany the party.

The body of the woman found at East Kingston was brought to this city last evening and an autopsy is to be made to-day by Dr. Dearborn, at the Station House; after which Coroner Rider will decide whether an inquest will be held or not.

A special meeting of the Mayor and Aldermen will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock to appoint persons to represent the city at the annual meeting of the P. & D. Railroad. The hearing on the petition for widening Richards Avenue is appointed for the same time.

The Times of Thursday, not content with exposing the financial "programme laid down" at a republican meeting which had not yet met, gave a circumstantial account of an interview between the postmaster and Secretary Robeson at Rye Beach, with the tenor of their conference, and its results. As no such interview took place, except in the fancy of the newspaper writer, some people wonder if that former editor of the Times whose brilliancy of imagination was such that he was entirely regardless of facts, has got back in his old seat. Secretary Robeson and Postmaster Peirce have not seen each other for months.

A School Master Shot Dead.

(Crescent City (Cal.) Courier.)

On Tuesday, June 30, the school house at Briggs's Ranch, five miles from Waldo, was the scene of a bloody tragedy, which resulted in the loss of the life of the school teacher, one John Delmater. At 10 o'clock that morning, while school was in session, Mrs. G. E. Briggs, accompanied by her son David—the former armed with a huge cudgel, and the latter with a Henry rifle, visited the school house. Mrs. Briggs accused the teacher of seducing her daughter Caroline, a young girl aged about fourteen. Mrs. Briggs told Delmater that she was going to kill him, and commenced beating him with the cudgel. She then told her son David to shoot him. The boy, a lad about 18, fired three shots, but they all missed their mark. In the scuffle which then ensued Delmater managed to get possession of the gun, but receiving a severe blow from the cudgel in the hands of Mrs. Briggs, he was obliged to drop it. He then started to run, when the boy again fired, the shot taking effect, and inflicting a mortal wound, from the effects of which Delmater died fourteen hours afterwards. The school children who had scattered when the melee commenced, gave the alarm. Mrs. Briggs and her son were arrested. Delmater was a young man about 30 years of age, and was universally esteemed by the people of the section where he resided. Previous to his death he made his will, and in his dying deposition before Justice McIlwain denied the alleged criminal intercourse with the young lady. The feeling against Mrs. Briggs and her son is very bitter, and there are threats of lynch law.

—The excuse of a young lady to her minister, who caught her napping, was "Don't you think ladies had better be fast asleep than fast awake?"

—A minister in Salem while reading the Bible at family devotions, asked a little niece the meaning of the term "publicans and sinners." "Why, Uncle Henry," she exclaimed, "the publicans are the republicans and the sinners are the democrats."

—A St. Louis paper says: "The better part of us have large families to support, which we go home to at dinner and get ten minutes to eat." Here is an unblushing confession of cannibalism, which the authorities of that city will do well to investigate.

—A new version of "Griffith Gaunt" has been underlined for production at Niblo's Garden. The resurrection of this deceased dramatic subject is, doubless, due to its having been made an element in the Plymouth Church scandal. It will be remembered that Godwin's novel of "Caleb Williams" was somewhat similarly introduced into the Byron scandal—promulgated by Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe—and that new editions of that fossil were immediately published.

Tall Bonnets.

[Harpers' Bazar.]

An early importation of bonnets from the best Parisian milliners indicates what the fashions of next season will be. The shapes are large, with high, soft, box-pleated crowns, and flaring brims turned up directly in front, and are very compact-looking, without strings or streamers, The Winter colors will be of the darkest possible shades, just off black. Those of which French milliners are most hopeful are mouse color, blue steel, nut brown that is almost black, navy blue, violet, olive, the dark claret shade known as lie de Bordeaux, and invisible green. Sometimes the same shade of two or three materials is seen in one hat; in others are extreme shades of one color, the lightest being associated with the darkest, as flesh color with nut brown. The greatest number of bonnets, however, have different colors oddly blended, and it will be in forming novel and beautiful combinations of color, such as the palest pearl gros grain with cypress-green velvet, that milliners will exercise their taste and ingenuity.

—It didn't rain for some time in a western town, and when the floods did descend the editor said:—"After many days of arid desiccation, the vapory captains marshalled their thundering hosts and poured out upon scorching humanity and the thoroughly incinerated vegetation a few inches of aqua pluvialis." Good gracious.

—The Commercial Advertiser has discovered the reason why the ministers wouldn't take their holidays earlier in the season. This year there are five Sundays in August.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH of the City of Portsmouth call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the City to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER 10.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 19. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 20. No person shall use or occupy any building in the compact part of the city for a slaughter-house, or for trying tallow, or for currying leather, or for the deposit of green pelts or skins, unless under such restrictions and regulations as the health officers may impose.

SEC. 21. Any person or persons who shall violate any rule or regulation, or commit any act forbidden in any section of this ordinance, to which no special penalty is annexed, shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty dollars, to be recovered by complaint before the police court of this city.

SEC. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect, forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the Health Officers in the name of the city. m23 d3m

Seth W. Fowle & Sons,

PROPRIETORS. No. 1 MILTON PLACE, ... BOSTON.

Sold by Druggists Generally.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR. Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews its growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brassy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures baldness, druff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible. As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is prized for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft hair and richness of tone it imparts.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-frying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Cough, Croup, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the source of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. "A stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking paindin the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

Barnum's Hippodrome.

[Boston Herald.]

The amusement sensation of the season has come. The greatest entertainment ever seen in Boston, under canvas, is here. An exhibition untirely novel in character is in our midst. Barnum's Roman Hippodrome has arrived, and it needs no prophet to tell that it will thrive during the three weeks that its proprietor designs to keep it here. Barnum may now say, if he likes, as did that almost equally great strategist of antiquity: "I came, I saw, I conquered;" and with as much truth, too; because the first exhibition was given last night under the immense pavilion down on the Back Bay, near where the late lamented Coliseum once reared its stunning altitude, and an unmistakable verdict of approval was wrested from an audience numbering from three to five thousand persons. It is altogether likely that but few in the assembly knew exactly what they were going to see, and it is absolutely certain that every one saw much they did not expect, and very much that exhilarated and thrilled them. Hence all were surprised and very agreeably so.

To describe this entertainment in detail would be impossible in the limits of a brief article; so we are constrained to deal in generalities. The pavilion has been before described in these columns, and it need here be only said, for the information of late readers, that it covers an oval-shaped piece of ground about a quarter of a mile in circumference, and is so wide even that one could not recognize an acquaintance across it. A forest of immense poles supports an ocean of canvas hanging in graceful curves above, and banners and lights in profusion ornament and illuminate the interior. Around the outside are comfortable and secure seats for ten thousand people and the next inner curve marks the outer boundary of the race course. This is thirty-five feet wide and finely graded. Inside this is an enclosure in which occur the more common arenic sports.

Now be it understood that this is not a circus. It is no more like a circus than the spunkiest kind of soda is like dish water. The one is old, common, stereotyped and tame, and the other fresh, absolutely novel, vigorous, exhilarating and astonishing. Nobody who has partaken of the excitement incidental to this sport will ever want to see another circus. It would be skim-milk after champagne. The great feature here is found in the races, of which there are many and many varieties. Among these may be mentioned the Roman standing races—two men with a pair of horses each; the Roman chariot races—four horses abreast; ditto by ladies with paired horses, and flat and hurdle races by five ladies on English thoroughbred animals. There is no nonsense about these races. The course includes two circuits of the track—about one-third of a mile—and most of the horses are high metdled and trained. They progress at no ordinary trot, as might be supposed, but at the top of their galloping speed, as swiftly as whips vigorously applied and excited yells can make them. There is an earnest competition among the riders, and be every means in their power they infuse their own spirit of rivalry into their animals. The auditors catch the contagion, and cannot repress their enthusiasm, which constantly finds vent in noisy demonstrations. This is the exhilarating element of the exhibition, which also has its humorous phases in pony races with monkeys astride, donkey races, Indian races, elephant and camel and buffalo races, etc., so that one laughs and shouts by turns.

The entertainment begins with what is called "The Congress of Nations," which is a procession of chariots, horses, soldiery, &c. Kings and queens and princes of all nations mingle in the grand pageant, with the military and court costumes, both ancient and modern, peculiar to each, together with their banners and paraphernalia of war. The costumes are for the most part of elegant make, and the living panorama presents a scene of oriental splendor for half an hour. In the course of the exhibition a man who lifts a horse and rider is seen, and a handsome girl rides a velocipede on a single wire 150 feet long suspended twenty feet or more above the ground. There are also various gymnastic performances of the more common order, and the exhibition closes with a representation of "The Lancashire Races," in which about 100 persons take part. This is simply indescribable, but it may be said that it is both exciting and amusing. The horses are splendid animals, and the menagerie is well worth a visit.

To sum up in a few words, the hippodrome is an immense show; everything is given that is promised, and more. Everything is nice, neat, comfortable and orderly, and more is given for the money than in any place under the sun we ever visited. No one can afford to miss this entertainment, for it is worth traveling miles to see.

—Chicago asserts that Milwaukee is assuming metropolitan airs. Her common council recklessly remains in session until after midnight, quarrelling delightfully all the time.

—The "Morning German" is a novelty that has lately been introduced at the West End Hotel, Long Branch. Dancing begins between 10 and 11 o'clock every morning, and is continued for two or three hours.

The republicans of Massachusetts are in a nice mess, all on account of their disrelish for legislative caucuses. The republican legislators refused to go into caucus to nominate a candidate for U. S. Senator. They balloted day after day and made themselves the laughing stock of the country. Finally, the leading candidates went to the wall and Governor Washburn was the chosen man. He resigned the governorship to take the senatorship, and left gubernatorial duties to Lieut. Gov. Talbot. The legislature passed a license bill and Talbot vetoed it. The prohibitionists and the Butler men shouldered Talbot for the gubernatorial candidacy, and his opponents are all at sea. With a caucus held as it should have been, Washburn would not have been in the Senate nor Talbot in the executive chair. Massachusetts republicans need a little party discipline.

The elections in some of the Southern States show that the civil rights bill is unpalateable, yea, nauseating. The democrats gain two Congressmen in North Carolina and have 10,000 majority in the State. The legislature is more largely democratic than before. The republicans may thank their lucky stars that they elected one Congressman.

At Buffalo, N. Y., Friday, Goldsmith Maid, accompanied by a running horse to stimulate her, and pledged in a purse of $2000 to beat her unmatched time (2:16), was trotted out, Budd Doble holding the reins. After a little warming the Maid jogged around the course in the first heat, apparently exercising, and making the quarter in 34, the half in 1:09, the three-quarters in 1:42 3-4, and the mile in 2:18 1-2. On the second heat the Maid trotted out with her running mate in fine condition. The betting in the meantime was heavy that she could not accomplish her object. Starting at the word, she made the quarter in 33 and the half in 1:06. On the home stretch, being captured by her running horse, she skipped, but coming down quickly to her work came in under the wire in 2:15 1-2, amid the applause of thousands of spectators. After the race the Maid was stripped and led in front of the judge's stand, when the immense crowd arose and greeted her with deafening cheers and her driver received a beconing ovation. Her time is the fastest on record.

Details in regard to her construction and discussion as to her fitness for her allotted duty we must leave until another time. She is now at Newport torpedo station, and as the trial of the Ericsson torpedo has been delayed for the completion of this boat, we hope soon to record the exact date of the beginning of experiments to which every one concerned in the development of the moveable torpedo looks forward with the keenest interest.

Hardy on his resuming his course of lectures. He was received with a triple round of applause. The Univers stigmatizes them as "irreverent sawbones."

State News.

The Dover Aldermen have appointed a committee to obtain a legal opinion from competent authority as to whether that part of the city charter authorizing the city councils to change the ward boundaries was repealed by the legislature. If not, the ward boundaries which were altered by the action of the legislature will be changed back to their original status.

The Great Falls Journal says the rush to North Conway is immense.

Simon Ayer, living in the southeast part of Amherst, had his house broken into on Sunday the 26th ult., while the folks were absent at church, and money and other articles to the value of $450 taken.

The last two convicts have escaped from the Lancaster jail.

The remains of a man were found a few days since in the ruins of a shanty at Hart's Location, on the line of the Portland & Ogdensburg Railroad. The shanty was set on fire in a drunken row, and the proprietor left for parts unknown. The matter is being investigated.

The editor of the Manchester Mirror, who is summering at Rye Beach, writes that the waiter boy at the Sea View who fired the gun which inflicted such terrible injuries on young Sawyer, is filled with grief. When not called at work, the little fellow sits brooding over his feelings, with his hands covering his eyes. He saw there were no caps on the gun, and was surprised that it went off when he snapped it.

The act in relation to the Probate Courts in this county fixes the terms as follows: At Exeter, on the Wednesday next following the third Tuesday of February, March and August, on the Wednesday next following the first Tuesday of April, and on the Wednesday next following the second Tuesday of every other month; at Portsmouth, on the third Tuesday of March, and on the second Tuesday of January, May, July, September and November; at Derry on the third Tuesday of February, and on the second Tuesday of June and and October; at Raymond, on the first Tuesday of April, on the third Tuesday of August, and on the second Tuesday of December. Raymond by reason of its railroad facilities, will be a more convenient place than Deerfield, where the court has been held three times a year.

The survivors of the fifth volunteer regiment hold their annual reunion at Claremont, September 17.

Dr. T. C. Renner writes to the Department of Agriculture that, several years ago, he collected some poke-root (Phytolacca decandra) garget, for medicinal purposes, and spread it at several places about the house to dry. Soon after, he observed that many cockroaches were lying dead, and, upon examination, found that they had been partaking freely of the poke-root. Some of the near their haunts, and the result was that it rid the premises of those insects. Others have since tested the remedy with satisfactory results.

Two French boys working in the mills at Nashua, aged twelve and fourteen years, received their pay on Tuesday, and according to the Telegraph of that city they immediately took to building castles in the air. They imagined fame and wealth with Barnum's Hippodrome and consequently went to Boston. When they reached the "Hub" they discovered that the world is larger than their limited vision had pointed: they were lost; they could not make out the crooked way; they were homesick; they were discouraged and penitent. Home as their imagination painted it from the distance was a paradise when compared with the gaudy temples of ancient Tri-Mountain. The more they dwelt upon the last picture, the more they longed for the peaceful villa on the bank of the Nashua. They were so impatient they could not wait for the train and so started on their return on foot. They reached home on Thursday night, footsore, hungry, and certain that they will be good boys hereafter.

A young lady and gentleman, recently married, are at the point of death in Dover, in consequence of the pole of the carriage they were riding in breaking, and the vehicle rolling down a steep grade and falling over an abyss fifty feet deep. Two other young ladies were also fearfully bruised.

Preparations are being made by the executive officers of the New Hampshire Agricultural Society for the next State fair, which will take place at Manchester on the last two days of September and the first two days of October. There will be a baby show, and seven gold medals are offered as premiums.

Biddeford Journal says: Change of firm: The Great Falls Journal is soon to be published by E. Fernald & Son. This is only one (it may be two) of the valuable improvements of that paper.

Recently a party of pleasure seekers who are visiting friends in Hollis were boating on Phillip's fish pond when one of the gentlemen jumped from the boat and upset it. The two ladies fortunately clung to the supports of a bridge near where the accident happened until help came. They were nearly exhausted when rescued. Mr. William Tenney, a gentleman who has never practiced the fine art of swimming, had a narrow chance for his life; when taken from the water he was so far gone that the party resorted to the old method of "rolling" until he was restored. The rescue of the party is due to Mr. Milton Hardy.

Mrs. Phebe Mixer of Westmoreland, a lady eighty-four years of age, made the ascent to the top of Mount Monadnock on Friday last. She is thought to be the oldest lady, if not the oldest person, who has ever been to the summit.

At Manchester, on Thursday, Hugh McCawley was charged with embezzling money obtained by selling books, for which he was sub-agent, and failing to return the sales to James Jordan, his principal. He was ordered to recognize in $600 for appearance at a higher court.

A Heroic Deed.

[St. Paul Pioneer.]

One of those gallant and heroic deeds, the recital of which causes the blood to tingle with admiration, was performed recently on the West Wisconsin road. The train which arrived at St. Paul at 5:30 P. M., left Chicago at the regular hour, and came booming along without incident until it reached a point between Menomonee and Elk Mound, some fifty miles from St. Paul. The train was running at the rate of twenty miles an hour, when on turning a curve in the road, Engineer Morrison saw a short distance ahead of the train a small child, not over three years of age, standing in the middle of the track, looking at the advancing train with the fearless innocence of childhood, unconscious of its fearful peril. The sight was enough to unnerve the stoutest heart; but Engineer Morrison did not lose his presence of mind, but instantly whistled "down brakes." This prompt action, however, would have been unavailing to save the child, which must have crushed to a jelly but for the heroic conduct of Mr. James Bassford, the fireman on the engine. Mr. Bassford saw the child at the same moment with Morrison, and knew at once that the train could not be stopped in time to save its life. As quick as a flash he ran out on the engine and down on the cow-catcher, and had just time to leap, with the intention of catching the child and bounding with it off the track. He was not quick enough, however, to accomplish his intention, but he struck the child, which fell down between a couple of ties, when the train struck Bassford, fortunately throwing him off the track and down an embankment. He escaped with a few bruises. Meantime the air brakes had done their work, and the train was brought to a halt. Conductor Kemp was on the ground in an instant, and a word was enough to put him in possession of the facts. A search disclosed the child lying as it fell, and immediately under the fire-box of the engine, from which perilous position it was rescued by Conductor Kemp in time to place it completely unharmed in the arms of its mother, who had witnessed the danger of the child, and came shrieking toward the train from the house near the track. The joy of the mother when she found her little darling unharmed, and the admiration of the passengers when they learned of the circumstances, for the brave conduct of Mr. Bassford, we leave for our readers to imagine.

Leave My Name Out.

A city editor, having lost his temper because certain fellows who have not pride enough to keep them from committing offences do have pride enough to want the record of their offences kept out of the papers, discourses to them as follows:

One of the bores of newspaperdom is the daily procession of chaps who march into the editorial rooms just after the adjournment of the police court, requesting, "Please leave my name out of your police reports," and accompanying said request with explanations which prove that the fellows are among the most gifted liars in the universe. This thing is becoming rather monotonous. It is useless to tell them that a certain way to prevent the dreaded publication is to behave themselves respectably—in they come right on time the next morning with freshly-blacked eyes and battered hats, and with the same old plaintive petition, or to ask that we falsify the police records as to the character of the offence or penalty inflicted. As before remarked this is becoming monotonous, and unless there is an early change, we shall feel it necessary to adopt the western style of corrections, of which the following paragraphs are samples:—

Correction.—The Mr. Snoozer arrested for being drunk on the streets, is not Snoozer, the fish peddler. The latter gentleman gets drunk in his own house, believing that intoxication, like charity, begins at home.

Not the Man.—The name of Mr. U. No appeared in our police report yesterday, charged with stealing a baby-wagon. This is not Mr. U. No, our well-known bridge tender. He wouldn't stoop to steal a baby-wagon, though it wouldn't be safe to leave a circus chariot or a freight train laying around where he could get his hands on it.

Amende Honorable.—Our local columns yesterday contained an account of the elopement of a gay Lothario of this town, named Stiggins, with the wife of a well-to-do farmer in a neighboring county. And now comes Stiggins, the plasterer, to say it isn't him. Stiggins's wife is sitting in a buggy in front of our office, and after a cursory glance at her we are prepared to say that we wouldn't blame Stiggins if he did run away. She must be a living and constant provocation to skedaddle. All right, Stig. It is another man, this time, but if you can get a chance to elope with a good-looking woman, our advice is to "git."

Give the Devil His Due.—Pluguglie, who runs a saloon on the tow-path, called this morning to say that he is not the Pluguglie who beat and robbed a countryman at a late hour Wednesday night. We are bound to believe him, but at the same time we must say that we wouldn't like to encou[illegible] particular Pluguglie alone at a late [illegible] the night with any valuables abo[illegible] robbery, murder, and sudden dea[illegible] written on his countenance, w[illegible] a cent.

— [illegible] has been driven out of Dubuque by the married ladies of that place. The latter thought she scraped acquaintance too easily.

Is Your Stomach Uneasy?

Many a dyspeptic Crœsus would be willing, it is said, to give half his wealth for an easy stomach. If this is a fact, why do any of our "solid men" continue to endure the pangs of indigestion? Is it not patent to the whole community that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will cure the worst case of chronic dyspepsia in six or eight weeks? No occasion for the expenditure of half a fortune; a few dollars will suffice to accomplish the object. Surely, every man who is not "stand blind" to the great utilitarian facts of the day must know that this celebrated vegetable specific promptly relieves all diseased conditions of the stomach, liver, bowels and nervous system, restores their vigor and imparts regularity to their functions. Is your epigastrium uneasy? Is the vulture, disease, gnawing at your liver? If so, resort at once to the Bitters.

Republican Committee Meeting.

The republican General City Committee are requested to meet at the Common Council Room, Tuesday evening, August 11th, at 7 1-2 o'clock. H. H. HAM, JR., Secretary.

A Successful Vessel.

Doane & Co. not only have a fleet of fine schooners for their fishing business, but smart and "lucky" skippers to command them. The W. H. Y. Hackett has landed excellent fares, and the new schooner Daniel Marcy on her first trip brought in over five hundred barrels of splendid mackerel. But the Gov. Goodwin is "high line," having made four annual trips to the banks, bringing home big fares each time, as follows: on the first trip, 1760 quintals; second, 1850 quintals; third, 2050 quintals; fourth, 1850 quintals; making a grand total for the four trips of 7450 quintals (834,000 lbs.) of fish, a success we believe quite unprecedented. Possibly the honored name the schooner bears may have something to do with her rare good fortune, as it would be a shame indeed for a vessel named after the popular ex-governor not to stand first-class.

Laconics.

The Kearsarge boys never slip up in their arrangements, and therefore execute the details of festivities in the best of style. Right royally do they intend to entertain the Eben Simpsons of Biddeford on the 3d and 4th of September, the first day being devoted to parade, a banquet, a ball at Congress Hall and a supper at the Rockingham, which is to be their headquarters; and the second day to a camp-out on Gerrish's island, the favorite resort of local parties, a fishing party and chowder on steamer Appledore, a hop in the woods, and a moonlight ride home.

It costs $1.25 to go from Great Falls to the Shoals and return, and $1.50 from Portsmouth.

Capt. Thomas P. Hill, the fifteenth commander of the old Columbian Artillery, attached to the 11th regiment of New Hampshire State militia between the years 1803 and 1847, died at Concord on Thursday, aged 55 years. In 1814, the Columbians marched to Portsmouth to help defend the city from an anticipated attack of the British, leaving Concord on Sunday, Sept. 10, under command of Capt. Peter Robinson. After twenty days' service at Forts Constitution and McClary, they returned, no enemy appearing. Only half a dozen of the company survive, the venerable Asa McFarland being the oldest.

Chas. E. Walker & Co. have been awarded the contracts for furnishing the Charlestown and Portsmouth navy yards with coal for bureau of Yards & Docks.

Hon. John H. Bailey, Dr. B. W. Curtis and Mr. Ashela F. Thurston were summoned by Coroner Rider as a jury of inquest on the body of the woman found in the pond at East Kingston.

The Portsmouth correspondent of the Dover Democrat refers to the person who engineered through the county house at its inception as "Mr. 9 per cent."

The Great Falls Journal reports that reductions in the fare to many of the stations on the Conway and Eastern roads have been made within a short time. The fare to Portsmouth is only 50 cents, formerly 75, and to many of the stations above there has been a decrease in the fare which will be acceptable to the public.

Believes in changes—Manager Hatch of the Eastern Railroad.

Just when needed the most—on Saturday, a rainy day—Mr. Plaisted's hourly did not run, and irate would-be passengers had good reason to growl.

The streets, which are in bad condition in many places, were rendered so by the heavy rains of last week, which washed the gravel into the sewers and left the rocks exposed.

The party of six negrophilites which sailed the seas over to Fishing island, Friday, to get some cod for "scrod," returned in high glee with one rock cod, seven inches long, three pollock and two sculpins—and it wasn't a good day for fishing, either!

Referring to the near approach of our municipal election, the Monitor says: The democrats well know that a victory in September is indispensable to their future hopes. If, after all the advantages which the changes in the charter afford them, they are defeated, it will be difficult, if not impossible, for the fuglers to bring their men up to the scratch in any future contest. Moreover, it will throw a damper over democratic prospects in the State at large. To have their nice laid schemes miscarry in Portsmouth, would be held as a precursor of failure all round. Hence no effort will be spared by the leaders all over the State to make a good showing, and, if possible, secure a nominal victory.

Notwithstanding the rain storm, ten carloads of passengers arrived here on the 5:40 train, Saturday evening.

The body of the woman found in the pond at East Kingston did not arrive here on Friday, as expected, so Dr. Dearborn did not make a post mortem on Saturday. The selectmen of East Kingston declined to disinter the body, as directed by Coroner Rider.

Chas. Parkins of Ogunquit, Me., went out to draw his lobster pots on Wednesday, and has not since been seen. His boat was found adrift, with the painter cut and the grapnel gone, and it is supposed that he committed suicide by tying one end of the rope around his neck and the other to the grapnel, and then juming overboard. Insanity from intemperance is supposed to have prompted the act.

A man of thirty-five or forty years of age, dumb and apparently insane, was found by Marshal standing against a freight train near the depot, Saturday. He was barefooted and wet to the skin, and standing with both arms outstretched, against the cars. The marshal took him to the station house. He at first refused the food and drink offered him, paid no attention to conversation in his presence, and did not made a noise of any description. Who he is or where he came from, is not known.

The heavy rain storm of Saturday did not prevent the excursion from Pittsfield to the Isles of Shoals. The train over the Concord road consisted of six well-filled cars. About twenty-five of the excursionists remained in this city, and the remainder embarked on the steamer Major and went to Star Island.

The Mayor and Aldermen on Saturday appointed Ald. Sise and Lefavour to represent the city at the P. & D. Railroad meeting.

Fish is a scarce article at the Shoals consequent upon the large demand from the hotels, which have at various times been unable to procure a full supply.

The report that the pilot commissioners have forbidden the pilots to solicit trade for merchants is untrue. No order was necessary.

When To Cut Grain.

(Cor. N. Y. Tribune.)

The period of ripening of grain is that at which the grain contains the largest portion of nutriment. It is not that at which the grain is hardest or of the brightest color, or parts most readily from the capsule or envelope in which it is contained. Indeed, a considerable part of the ripening process should take place in the shock or the stack. If it is allowed to ripen, or, in other words, dry and harden completely while standing, the grain loses much of its nutritive properties. As in clover, hay, or grass, a large portion of the sugar, starch, and gum is changed into woody fibre by standing after a certain period; so grain is deteriorated by over-ripening. The husk becomes developed at the expense of the kernel, and the yield of flour from over-ripe wheat is less than from that cut in the proper season. My own practice has been to watch the fields closely, especially around the outside or along the fences, because it is there that the grain ripens first. As soon as I find that the grain shells readily, and has taken a fine white straw-color and when crushed between the edges of the nails of the thumb and fore-finger produces a powdery, starchy substance, which is in no way pasty or doughy, I turn in the reaper at once. If the grain is left until it is too hard to be easily crushed in this way, it is too ripe, and its quality is inferior. From my experience in milling, as well as farming, I am satisfied that it is best for the miller as well as the farmer that wheat, rye, oats, or barley should be cut at the precise point here described. When the season is drier than usual I would hasten the period somewhat.

—"I'm not much for sbtump spakin," declared a candidate at Dubuque, "but for honesty and capacity and integrity I bate the divil—so I do."

—The Milwaukee Sentinel is authority for the statement that the grasshoppers on their way south stopped a railroad train, and got copies of the Saint Paul papers. When they read that only a small portion of the crops had been destroyed, they started back to finish up the job.

—A tricolor flag on the summit of Metz Cathedral, which has been a constant eyesore to the Germans, has just been removed, a reward of 100 thalers having been offered for the feat, which was attended with considerable danger, as, after the top of the Gothic tower was reached, two balls had to be scaled to reach the flagstaff. A man named Demange, a house painter at Metz, lately made the attempt, and brought down the obnoxious emblem of French rule. He had provided himself with two planks for scaling the balls, and on surmounting the first he staggered, and everybody expected him to fall, but he recovered himself, reached the flagstaff, lowered the French tricolor, and substituted a German flag of black, white and red. Previously, seven Germans had tried to accomplish the task, but two lost their lives, and the other five failed.

How Mike Saved His Friends.

The Lawrence American says that some men who attend horse races and buy pools are sensible enough to keep quiet when they find they have "got in wrong," as horsemen term it. Others, and they are in the majority, howl, swear and curse the judges or drivers, and while it is somewhat amusing to watch these "squealers," as they are vulgarly yet appropriately termed, it also sets one's wits at work to invent some method by which all pool-buyers could be satisfied. But occasionally you will find a horseman with a tender conscience and rare solicitude for his friends, and such a man is the affable Mike Carroll, who owns many horses and drives them at races. On Wednesday, a large number of persons bought pools on Mike's bay gelding, Essex, and the horse taking the first heat these men bought more pools on Essex, against the field. But Mike lost the next two heats, which were won by Emperor, and the pool-buyers looked sad, and as Mike returned from the stable they gathered around him and complained that their money was on his horse, and he was "throwing" the race. Here was a rare exhibition of Mike's solicitude for his friends, and his generous heart prompted him to say: "Gentlemen, I'm afraid my horse is off, and I don't think I can win this race; I'm sorry, but I tell you that I am not pulling the horse; and I don't want another driver put in; I'd rather lose a good deal of money, and I tell you what I'll do; You're all my friends, and I don't want you to lose any money on me, and I'll take all your pools off your hands rather than have any hard feelings." This was fair, and the crowd began to pass in their cards, which Mike willingly accepted, with smiles of rare benevolence. This little matter having been adjusted, Mr. Carroll mounted his sulky and without effort won the next two heats and the race, pocketing the purse, the large odds which his "friends" would have won, and a handsome gift from a man who had a heavy pool at stake, besides his own pools. Mike played his little game shrewdly, and the greenhorns, though losing nothing, failed to make a dollar. A few were shrewd enough to hold on to their chances when they saw the owner and driver willing to be so very generous to his friends.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 19. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 20. No person shall use or occupy any building in the compact part of the city for a slaughter-house, or for trying tallow, or for carrying leather, or for the deposit of green pelts or skins, unless under such restrictions and regulations as the health officers may impose.

SEC. 22. Any person or persons who shall violate any rule or regulation, or commit any act forbidden in any section of this ordinance, to which no special penalty is annexed, shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty dollars, to be recovered by complaint before the police court of this city.

SEC. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for such refusal or neglect, forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the Health Officers in the name of the city. m25 d2m

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the experience of ever forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

'Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry'

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

NO. 70 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy than Mr. Eddy, capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

A postponement of the Fifth Concert of the Public Library of Kentucky has been so generally anticipated, and is so manifestly in the interest of all concerned, that it ameliorates the apparent evil of all. The day is now absolutely fixed and there will be no variation from the programme now announced. A sufficient number of tickets have been sold to have enabled us to have had a large drawing on the 31st July, but a short postponement was considered preferable to a partial drawing. Our Baby.

[T. Adolphus Smith, in Graphic.]

I write as a son, as a husband, and as a man of family. My subject is one of the utmost importance to the married and child-raising community. I believe in writing to the papers upon subjects of family interest. It is a good thing.

Of course I have no sympathy in common with the silly people who ask for all sorts of information from the "family newspaper." As, for instance, where "a young man just in society" wants to know what he is to do with his napkin when he is invited out to a "swell" dinner party, and the editor tells him that he had better take the "article in question" home and have it washed. That is absurd, of course!

So, too, when a "miss in her teens" confesses that she walks and flirts with a married man every night, and wants to know if there is anything wrong about it. That, of course, is ridiculous!

Or where "one just commenced life" writes to know what business will make him rich in three years, without any investment of capital or expenditure of labor on his part. He must be an ass!

I write upon no such ridiculous matters. But the subject upon which I scratch these few lines reaches every father's heart: and as you answer it, you will carry joy to many a household.

To come at it then; we are married.

By we I mean Iphigenia and I. I call her "Pheegie" for short and as a pet name. But mother doesn't believe in pet names and calls her plain Iphigenia.

Mother lives with us. I think it is quite an advantage. But, somehow, Pheegie don't seem to think so. I am the youngest of seven sons. When father died and I was married, my brothers said that as they were older than I, and had had more of dear mother's care, it would be only fair to me to have mother spend the rest of her life in my family. I thought that it was real affectionate and self-sacrificing on their part. But, somehow, Pheegie don't seem to think so.

Dear mother is very sensitive about being in the way. If she says it once a day she does a dozen times, that if we feel she is trespassing in the little room she occupies, we have only to say so, and she will find a humble cot in some retired spot and there pass her widowed days praying for the welfare of her children. I think this is very touching and sweet on her part. But somehow Pheegie don't think so. She says; "Suppose we take her up, some day—how much cot do you suppose she would retire to?"

I don't like the sentiment. How could I endorse it and have the assurance to look for the length of days promised in the fifth commandment?

But this is not my subject. What I want to ask you about is.

We have got a baby. I mean Pheegie and I. Mother didn't have anything to do about it. And yet, if it had not been for dear mother I don't know how we could have got along. Just as soon as the little thing was a month old mother took it to sleep with her. She declared that never would a wink of sleep come to her eyelids if she left that child for young and inexperienced parents to roll on and smother.

But when she took our little darling in this tender way to her grandmaternal bosom, dear mother said, in just so many words, that if her affection for the infant was misconstructed, or if we grudged her the playful caresses which the child might inadvertently bestow upon her, we had only to say as much, and she would find a humble cot in some retired spot and there pass her widowed days praying for her beloved children and grandchildren.

Pheegie said, "Oh, bother the humble cot!" But I don't think my dear wife understands mother. I thought there was something very touching in this display of grandmamma's devotion. But somehow Pheegie don't seem to think so.

As I said however we have got a boy baby. He is also a very bright child, indeed. For that matter the worthy nurse told Pheegie that she did not know as she ever nursed a brighter young one. Our own baby is six months old now, and is very healthy. Dear mother says that she don't exactly like the way in which it shakes its head every now and then. I think it is queer, too, for its head certainly does shake at times without the slightest occasion for it. But I sometimes feel quite serious about it. But Pheegie don't seem to feel so, and when I said I thought I ought to speak to the doctor about it, she said I might also tell him that the child's toes wiggled peculiarly. I didn't like her saying that, and I noticed that dear mother didn't laugh. I agree with her that God gave us these precious wards to take care of. Pheegie says that she supposes that God also makes the precious ward's head shake. There is something in that. But I wonder if Pheegie really loves the child? Mother often says that she hopes she does.

We keep a nurse. She is a young Irish girl. I confess I don't like her much, and I doubt whether she feels very deeply for the child. Often the little thing cries at night, but never yet has that girl come down to see what the matter was. If she would only do so once in a while at least, it would be showing a little interest in her charge.

Mother don't like the girl. She thinks she is a Jesuit, and believes that she would murder the baby quick if the priest told her to do it. I am inclined to think so, and kind of wish we had a Protestant. But somehow Pheegie don't seem to think so.

But what I want to ask you is this: what is the reason that doctors never think that babies are sick? They never do unless the poor little things are far gone with scarlet fever, cerebro-spinal-meningitis, or some thing dreadfully fatal. Let the child be teething, or have colic, or wind on its little stomach, or anything of that kind, and doctors never seem to feel interested in the patient's case. They say that the little things will "outgrow it," or something of that sort. Now that is absurd.

I put it to you, Mr. Reader, as a man of feeling. Suppose you had a pain in your person and were really suffering a great deal, and a doctor should come and grin at you, chuck you under the chin, pinch your legs, and say that you "would come out all right," or "outgrow it," or something of that kind! Would you like that? Of course you would not. It would not be natural.

Now I don't know why it should, but our baby suffered a great deal from abdominal trouble. Mother thinks he inherits it; she says that all her children were that way. I think this is a very satisfactory explanation. Why shouldn't a child inherit things of that kind, just the same as hair, teeth, and things of that sort? It looks reasonable to mother and me. But somehow Pheegie don't seem to think so.

But upon my word, I have written so much that I have but little space left to tell you about a little matter in our own baby's tender experience, which illustrates how little doctors care for other people's children. Mother says she thinks they get hardened. But one would think they wouldn't. I have been after the doctor a good deal for our own baby, but he never seems to come with alacrity. Mother generally tells me when to go. She thinks that one cannot show too much care for a child—it is such a grave responsibility. I think so too. But somehow Pheegie don't always seem to think so. I wonder if she really does love our baby? I spoke to mother about it, the other night, and she said she hoped so, for it was an awful thing to throw one's own child into the teeth of Providence; and I thought so too.

But now I certainly must tell you what happened the other night. Our own baby was sick, and mother wanted me to go for the doctor. Pheegie didn't think there was any use in going for him, but mother thought there was. However, mother very frankly owned up that the child was Iphigenia's. She said that her solicitude sprang entirely and only from love for the little one, but if that affection was irksome to us we had only to find her a humble cot in some retired spot, where she would pass her widowed days praying for her children and their child, and thanking God that its death did not lie at her door. Pheegie rolled over in bed and said, "Oh! good gracious!" But I went out for the doctor.

It was not a good night to go. It was one of those freezy kind of nights when the rain becomes ice on the pavement. It was real hard work to go for the doctor. It was impossible to run. I tried to walk fast, but I slid and slipped and slipped and slid. And then I would manage to catch hold of a fence, and my legs would slide from under me, and I would find my face in precisely the contrary direction from that in which I wanted to go. I tried the middle of the street, but it was very little better, and when I tried to get back to the pavement I thought I might as well give up going. But then, there was our own baby perhaps at the point of death, and I hastened, slipped up, and hastened again.

It must have taken me a good half hour to reach the doctor's house, and it is only half a mile away from mine. However, I got there at last and rang the bell. I rang several times. Finally somebody opened the window, and a masculine voice wanted to know who the mischief I was; and a feminine voice wanted to know if I was "Horace." I was amazed and bewildered. The tone of the masculine voice was not familiar to my ear, and I could hardly account for the feminine voice, as the doctor is a widower. But I nevertheless asked if the doctor was at home. At that the masculine voice suggested that I had better ring the doctor's door bell and find out. It certainly was very stupid of me to make the mistake, but I was somewhat confused after my difficult walk, and then I was nervous as I thought of our own baby at home.

However, I apologized and explained, but while I was doing it the parties at the window slammed it down. I did not feel called upon to make any further explanation, but sprang up the doctor's step and pulled his bell.

They seemed to be sleeping pretty soundly in that block, for I had to ring four times before I roused the doctor. He opened a second story window at last, and, after suggesting that if I was trying to jerk off his bell-pull I had better say so, he asked who I was. The doctor is getting old and peculiar; and then I don't suppose it is pleasant to be called upon to answer a bell at 2 o'clock in the morning. But then, ain't he paid for it? However, I overlooked the reference to the bell-pull, and said that I was "me."

"Me!" who the mischief's me?" said the doctor.

I supposed that he knew my voice; but he alleged that he did not, and so I said that

"me" was Smith.

"Smith! what Smith?" says the doctor.

Now that was absurd! I know that the name of Smith is reasonably common, but the doctor needn't try to make out that he has nobody but Smiths on his list of patients.

However, I answered that I was "T. Adolphus Smith." And how like a fool I felt! Only think of having to holler out "T. Adolphus Smith!" at two o'clock in the morning. I felt certain that somebody was listening at every window in the block.

But the doctor, satisfied who I was, then said:

"Well, what do you want?"

From the way he said it, one might think that he had been patiently waiting up there, and giving me a chance to tell.

But I didn't answer curtly. On the contrary, I said: "the baby is sick!"

"What baby?" said he. Now, how absurd! As if I would go poking down there at that hour, and through rain and ice, for any baby but our own baby. But I nevertheless replied, with perhaps a touch of vexation in my tone, that the baby under consideration was my own baby.

"What is the matter with it?" said he.

Now I began to wish that he would come down to the door. I didn't want to be hollering out what was the matter with our own baby, so that the whole neighborhood could be informed as to its ailments. And just then a policeman came along, stood in front of the house, and lookeld at me as though he felt sure I contemplated burglary. People are so apt, you know, to stand at the front door and ring the bell, when their designs are burglarious.

As a matter of precautionary explanation, but, perhaps injudiciously, I said to the aforesaid policeman that I was "all-right." And then he said: "What!" and then the doctor said: "What!" And the policeman, who evidently didn't see the doctor, said: "How's that?" And then the doctor, who evidently didn't see the policeman, said: "What the thunder are you talking about?" And then I said to the policeman that "I said I was all right." And then he wanted to know "who said I wasn't?"

It was getting dreadfully mixed up. But just then the doctor, who evidently saw the policeman, halloed: "Go about your business!" The policeman then saw the doctor, and "moved on," after first striking the lamp post a most unnecessary blow with his club.

Don't Go to Congress.

The Boston News editorially favors giving young men a chance in politics, and advises them to go to Congress when they can. Our advice on the subject is similar to that of Punch when advising young people on the subject of matrimony, "Don't." The young man who looks forward to a term in Congress as a desirable event of his future life, has a mistaken view of life's duties. There are cases like that of our own Senator Wadleigh where a man is called to the office. But in ninety-nine other cases, it is by the smallest and most contemptible subterfuges and by the use of most unwarrantable means that a nomination even is obtained. The same amount of villainy and trickery expended in business that is wasted in obtaining a political nomination will result in soon laying the foundation of an ample fortune. Any young man having a small soul can be more successful financially by attending strictly to business than by "aspiring" to a Congressional nomination—and when he gets a few thousand dollars ahead he can purchase an average Congressman. An election to Congress confers honor only when it comes unsolicited. In "tricks that are vain" a Congressional candidate should be thoroughly initiated, and the young man who commences his career by an early insight into the strange ways which operate to produce the present grade of Congressman, has no noble inspiration to guide him and must perforce lose self-respect and endanger his reputation. Young men—keep out of Congress,—until you get there without fugling for the nomination.

Readables.

Of the whole number of new candidates spoken of for republican Congressional nominations in Massachusetts, there is no one who inspires more respect than Ex-Gov. Bullock.

There was a serious riot in Portsmouth, England, on Saturday, owing to the closing of a thoroughfare by the authorities.

Two little sons of John McKean of Fall River found a pistol belonging to an elder brother, on Saturday, and one shot the other dangerously in the face, destroying both eyes.

The Mississippi steamer Henry Ames, from St. Louis for New Orleans, laden with way freight, sank on Friday night, and four passengers were drowned. The fatality by the disaster to the Pat Rogers is stated to be much greater than at first reported.

During the storm of Saturday at Long Branch, all the Indians squatters' tents on the beach were blown away into the sea, and the inmates were compelled to seek shelter in the hotels.

A destructive fire occurred in Montreal, Canada, Sunday. Loss $250,000. One life was lost.

The trouble at Somerville, Tenn., originated in a personal difficulty between Green Hendon, a white man, and Cash Warren, a leading negro politician, which was renewed and led to an attempt to rescue Oscar Burton by Sheriff Reeves and his two brothers, who are leading republicans, and represented as desperate and determined men. Burton shot and killed Paul Reeves, and was in turn shot and killed by Sheriff Reeves, whereupon fire was opened upon Sheriff Reeves and his remaining brother from windows and doors on the street, and they were shot down. The wildest excitement ensued and efforts were made by some parties to organize negroes into armed bodies, but as far as known without success, and quiet was restored.

Paul Pry has been looking up the subject of advertising, and is responsible for the statement that about $9,000,000 are paid to the New York papers for that purpose. Of this sum the Herald receives upward of $2,000,000, or about $6,000 a day; the Staats Zeitung $1,824,000; the Times $1,460,000, and so on down to some of the more obscure sheets, none of which receive less than $100,000. Mr. Pry has also examined the ledgers of several leading firms, and reports that advertising costs A. T. Stewart $500,000 a year; Lord & Taylor $225,000, Arnold & Constable $175,000, Robert Bonner $200,000, Babbitt, the soap man, $225,000, while Barnum pays out every year about $400,000. These are solemn and suggestive facts, which we ask our readers to ponder over in the solitude of their closets.

A Perilous Swing.

A young lady living in the neighborhood of Guthrieville, Pa., had a narrow and singular escape from death. She, in company with a party of ladies and gentlemen, went to spend the day on the summit of the romantic Welsh Mountain, about two miles and a half from Morgansville. During the day, being of a daring disposition, she insisted on being swung as high as could be done, by the aid of the gentlemen, and to gratify her wishes they consented. She sat on the seat-board of the swing and grasped the rope tightly and bade them go ahead. The swing commenced its motion, and gradually rose higher and higher until an altitude of about twenty feet had been reached. She still insisted upon being pushed, and up went the swing higher and higher until fully thirty feet had been reached. She had been cheerful and lively up to this point, but all of a sudden she became quiet, the rest of the ladies were awe-stricken, and when the swing with its precious burden made one swift sweep in the air her head was noticed to drop to one side, her muscles relaxed, her arms to let go their hold and drop, and away the unfortunate girl was hurled through the air, and only saved from a frightful and terrible death by one of the most miraculous interventions ever heard of. The momentum of the swing's motion carried the apparently lifeless form of the girl up fully thirty-five feet from the ground and lodged her safely and securely between two branches at the point where they join the trunk of a tree, which stood about thirty-five feet from the tree to which the rope was attached. Measures were at once taken by the frightened gentlemen to extricate her from her perilous situation; and after considerable difficulty she was lowered to the ground, where she soon regained her strength and composure.

"Very Like a Whale."

[Homeward Mail.]

The following strange story has been communicated to an East Indian paper: We had left Colombo in the steamer Strathowen, had rounded Galle, and were well in the bay, with our course laid for Madras, steaming over a calm and tranquil sea. About an hour before sunset on the 10th of May we saw on our starboard beam and about two miles off a small schooner lying becalmed. There was nothing in her appearance or position to excite remark, but as we came up with her I lazily examined her with my binocular, and then noticed between us, but nearer her, a long, low swelling lying on the sea, which from its color and shape I took to be a bank of seaweed. As I watched, the mass, hitherto at rest on the quiet sea, was set in motion. It struck the schooner, which visibly reeled, and then righted. Immediately afterwards the masts swayed sideways and with my glass I could clearly discern the enormous mass and the hull of the schooner coalescing—I can think of no other term. Judging from their exclamations, the other gazers must have witnessed the same appearance. Almost immediately after the collision and coalscence the schooner's masts swayed towards us, lower and lower: the vessel was on her beam-ends, lay there a few seconds, and disappeared, the masts righting as she sank, and the main exhibiting a reversed ensign struggling towards its peak. A cry of horror rose from the lookers-on, and, as if by instinct, our ship's head was at once turned towards the scene, which was now marked by the forms of those battling for life—the sole survivors of the pretty little schooner which only twenty minutes before floated bravely on the smooth sea. As soon as the poor fellows were able to tell their story they astounded us with the assertion that their vessel had been submerged by a gigantic cuttle-fish or calamary, the animal which, in a smaller form, attracts so much attention in the Brighton aquarium as the octopus. Each narrator had his version of the story, but in the main all the narratives tallied so remarkably as to leave no doubt of the fact. As soon as he was at leisure, I prevailed on the skipper to give me his written account of the disaster, and I have now much pleasure in sending you a copy of his narrative:—

"I was lately the skipper of the Pearl schooner, 150 tons, as tight a little craft as ever sailed the seas, with a crew of six men. We were bound from the Mauritius for Rangoon in ballast, to return with paddy, and had put in at Galle for water. Three days out we fell becalmed in the bay (lat. 8.50 N., long. 84.5 E.). On the 10th of May, about 5 P. M.,—eight bells I know had gone—we sighted a two-masted screw on our port quarter, about five or six miles off. Very soon after, as we lay motionless, a great mass rose slowly out of the sea about half a mile off on our larboard side, and remained spread out, as it were, and stationary; it looked like the back of a huge whale, but it sloped less, and was of a brownish color; even at that distance it seemed much longer than our craft, and it seemed to be basking in the sun.

'What's that?' I sung out to the mate?

'Blest if I knows; barring its size, color and shape, it might be a whale,' replied Tom Scott. 'It ain't the sarpent,' said one of the crew, 'for he's too round for that ere critter.'

I went into the cabin for my rifle, and as I was preparing to fire, Bill Darling, a Newfoundlander, came on deck, and looking at the monster, exclaimed, putting up his hand, 'Have a care, master; that ere is a squid, and will capsize us if you hurt him.'

Smiling at the idea, I let fly and hit him, and with that he shook; there was a great ripple all round him, and he began to move.

'Out with your axes and knives,' shouted Bill, 'and cut at any part of him that comes aboard; look alive, and Lord help us!'

Not aware of the danger, and never having seen or heard of such a monster, I gave no orders, and it was no use touching the helm or ropes to get out of the way. By this time, three of the crew, Bill included, had found axes, and one a rusty cutlass, and all were looking over the ship's side at the advancing monster. We could now see a huge oblong mass moving by jerks just under the surface of the water, and an enormous train following; the oblong body was at least half the size of our vessel in length and just as thick; the wake or train might have been 100 feet long.

In the time that I have taken up to write this the brute struck us, and the ship quivered under the thud; in another moment, monstrous arms like trees seized the vessel and she heeled over; in another second the monster was aboard, squeezed in between the two masts, Bill screaming, 'Slash for your lives;' but all our slashing was of no avail, for the brute, holding on by his arms, slipped his vast body overboard, and pulled the vessel down with him on her beam-ends; we were thrown into the water at once, and just as I went over I caught sight of one of the crew, either Bill or Tom Fielding, squashed up between the mats and one of those awful arms; for a few seconds our ship lay on her beam-ends, then filled and went down; another of the crew must have been sucked down, for you only picked up five; the rest you know. I can't tell who ran up the ensign. JAMES FLOYD,

Late Master Schooner Pearl."

Don't Fool with the Elephant.

The Sacramento Union relates the following incident which occured at Queen's circus and menagerie: At the conclusion of the afternoon performance, while the people in attendance were looking at the menagerie, some boys annoyed the elephant by giving him sticks, tobacco, etc., which made him so angry that he reached out his trunk for the youths nearest to him, and partially encircled three of them. Two managed to get away, but one, aged about 12 years, son of H. Luhrs, of the Sazerac saloon, was caught by the elephant's trunk, turned around two or three times, and then raised to the beast's mouth, the animal seeming to have the intention of biting him. In fact, his head was raised so high and with such force that the boy's felt hat had a hole broken in its top by collision with one of the elephant's tusks. A number of men sprang forward to cause the animal to release his hold upon the boy, which he did, throwing him aside with such violence that his right forearm was broken. The animal was much excited for about ten minutes, and prevented the boy's hat being obtained during that time. The elephant's keeper was not present at the time, and no precautions had been taken to keep children and other persons at a proper distance from him. The boy who was injured had his left arm broken by an accident about a year ago.

How a Western Town Was Named.

A correspondent writes from Colorado about the town of "Fairplay" as follows:

By what combination of circumstances or events Fairplay first obtained its title, is a disputed question among the miners; a question almost as difficult of solution as the birth-place of the immortal Homer. The paragraphists and romancers have had their say about it, and the newspaper-poet has spun his ditty, wherein two rough and stalwart miners were represented as having fallen into a dispute over the possession of a claim, and, appealing to revolvers, one of the antagonists fell mortally wounded. The victor, bending over the corpse, exclaims, "Wal, Jack, they can't say but what you got fair play," and walks off; and the expression is seized upon and fastened to the town. The latest and most approved authorities declare the sponsors in baptism to be a certain doctor, who flourished some years ago in Denver,—the father of a lovely and accomplished daughter,—and a giddy, harum-scarum young Lothario, who fell in love with the daughter aforesaid.

The twain met, there was the usual billing and cooing, and the usual illustration of man's perfidy and woman's weakness,—the girl was ruined. Appalled at the consequence of his indiscretion, and too much of a coward to meet the outraged father, the young man fled to the mountains and sought refuge in the miners' cabins at the Platte River mines. The avenging dispenser of physic followed him; and, late one stormy night, corraled his game in a 7-by-9 cabin, deeply engaged in the beauties of draw-poker. Their eyes met, and the young man knew that a settlement must be had then and there. He requested the doctor to wait until he played his hand out, cashed his checks, and then, facing the old man, exclaimed, "I only want one thing, Doctor, and that is fair play." They fired across the table; two reports rang out on the midnight air; two mortal yells were heard; two bodies fell to the floor with a heavy thud; and the next day two corpses were planted in the river bottom. "Fair play" was the standing salutation for months after, and the town became known by that name. The maiden over whom all this fuss was made took Paris green at first, but was brought to with the aid of a stomach pump, and is now the sole proprietress of a hurdy-gurdy and dance-house at Pueblo. She still speaks tenderly of the fallen lover, and often regrets that he did not "get the drop" upon the old man.

—Since the promulgation of the dog ordinance, 2,600 in New York have been destroyed, and it is thought there are still about eight thousand in the city.

Is Your Stomach Uneasy?

Many a dyspeptic Cræsus would be willing, it is said, to give half his wealth for an easy stomach. If this is a fact, why do any of our "solid men" continue to endure the pange of indigestion? Is it not patent to the whole community that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will cure the worst case of chronic dyspepsia in six or eight weeks? No occasion for the expenditure of half a fortune; a few dollars will suffice to accomplish the object. Surely, every man who is not "stand blind" to the great utilitarian facts of the day must know that this celebrated vegetable specific promptly relieves all diseased conditions of the stomach, liver, bowels and nervous system, restores their vigor and imparts regularity to their functions. Is your epigastrium uneasy? Is the vulture, disease, gnawing at your liver? If so, resort at once to the Bitters.

Lawrence Barnard was arraigned before Judge Page Monday morning, upon a complaint of extreme cruelty to a horse which he hired at Balch's livery stable on Sunday, to go to Hampton beach. While returning from the beach, Barnard whipped the horse in a brutal manner, which he attempted to compromise with the owner by paying $25. The police entered a complaint against Barnard and Judge Page refused to recognize the matter as settled and ordered the payment of a fine and costs amounting to $29.18. $54.18 is a big sum to pay for the privilege of whipping a dumb animal.

During warm days the temptation always is to drink more liquid than is best for us. A good way to obviate this, and at the same time to slake the thirst fully, is to take water, lemonade or iced tea, through a small glass tube—the smaller the better. By this method the liquid seems to reach the palate more directly, and certainly quenches the thirst with half the quantity taken after the ordinary manner. You may test this to your satisfaction by using and dispensing with a tube on alternate days.

Steam yacht Minnehaha, Capt. Norman Wiard, of the Boston Yacht Club, with a party on board including Ben: Perley Poore, Clerk Bartley of the U. S. Gin and Pine.

Ben P. Shillaber has recently visited the Isles of Shoals, and had occasion to investigate the mysteries of gin and pine. In a note to the Boston Transcript he thus explains the results:

I was a guest at the Appledore, and felt considerably under the weather from the great shaking up I endured going thither. A friend of many years whispered in my ear, "Try gin and pine." It was a mysterious proposition, and I looked to him for an explanation. He led me down stairs, and then he demanded of a young man who stood behind a counter, "Gin and pine!" The gin was poured into a glass, and then a dark-looking bottle was taken down—the same, I was told, that Smith discovered—and about a teaspoonful of a dark semi-fluid added. The tumbler was then filled with water and sweetened, and it was given me to take—as a medicine. I drank it with faith, and waited the result. The Atlantic Ocean immediately overflowed its bank. I never saw so much of it before. The main land became invisible; Whale's Back Light was in a state of great commotion; the Appledories were as large as frigates; the verandah on which I walked was at an angle of forty-five degrees, up which I stepped with difficulty; there were two entrances to the house, between which I struck; the castors and goblets on the table were dancing to the accompaniment of knife and fork, and the chowder that a maid handed me was immense—the only thing that seemed natural. But soon the feeling wore off, and health was restored. I thus am prepared to speak of the great Appledore remedy, one dose of which is enough for the worst cases. I would not recommend more than one because further phenomena might ensue, which would react on the reputation one might wish to maintain.

Stories of British Soldiers.

From an exceedingly interesting and gossiping book, entitled "Reminiscences of a Soldier," written by Colonel Stuart, late of the British Eighty-Sixth Regiment, the following good stories are taken: When a subaltern at Gibraltar he was one day on guard with another officer, who unfortunately fell down a precipice 400 feet high and was killed. Now, my non-military readers should understand that in the guard reports there is a small addendum, viz: 'N. B. Nothing extraordinary since guard mounting;' the meaning of which is that in case anything particular should occur the officer commanding the guard is bound to mention it. Our friend, however, said nothing about the accident that had occured to his brother officer; and some hours after the brigade-major came to his quarters, on the part of the officer commanding, with the report in his hand, to demand an explanation. The brigade-major, addressing him, said: "You say, sir, in your report—'N. B. Nothing extraordinary since guard mounting,' when your brother officer on duty with you, has fallen down a precipice 400 feet high and been killed." "Well, sir," replied B——, "I dinna think there's onything extraordinary in it ava; if he'd fann doon a precipice 400 feet high and not been killed I should ha'e thocht it very extraordinary indeed, and wad ha'e put it doon in my report." I fancy the brigade-major's hair must have stood on end while he listened to this cool reply.

A soldier of the Nineteenth Regiment, named Barney O'Ruark, who was sentenced to 300 lashes, while he was being conducted to the place where the regiment was formed, with the colonel in command, to witness the punishment, jumped into a large cesspool, and declined to come out, even although the adjutant himself tried his powers of persuasion. The regiment was in roars of laughter when old H——(the colonel) put spurs to his horse and galloped to the aid of the adjutant and sergeant major; but so ludicrous was the whole affair that the old man burst out laughing himself. There was Barney in an attitude of defiance, both hands full of dirt, the adjutant and sergeant-major on two different sides of the pool, now swearing, now entreating the obdurate fellow to come out; the coporal of the guard also put in his word, for he was in a pretty fright himself about allowing his prisoner to escape. "Arrah, Barney, come out. Shure, I'll be flogged in yer place—out wid ye, Barney, jewel." "The devil a come out," says Barney; "if ye want me, fetch me. I'm mighty comfortable, barring the smell." Colonel H——was so tickled with the comical affair, that he said, "Come out, you scoundrel, and I'll pardon you this time." "Honor, Colonel?" replied Barney. "Honor," said the colonel. "Then bedad, I'll come out," said Barney; "for I couldn't hould out much longer if I got 500."

—Baltimore has supplemented the children's excursions with an excursion for old folks. One was given last week, in which six hundred of the aged poor participated.

—The season of the year approaches when the reflective man will cross his hands under his coat-tails, and wonder how they manage to get a peck of peaches into a six-quart basket.

—The St. Louis Globe, in reference to the exaggerated accounts of journalistic remuneration, says: The worst of such stories is that they allure into the ranks of journalism aspiring but deluded adventurers, whose highest capabilities would be exhausted in guiding the fiery, untamed horse-car mule, and who might find it hard to get work herding grasshoppers on the plains.

--That husband received a lesson which should tell upon him in the future, who called for "crusade" syrup in his soda-water, when his wife was with him. Naturally enough she wanted to try some, too, and had it not been for the never-to-be-equalled presence of mind of the soda-man, who doctored the male glass sufficefntly strong and flavored the soda feminine with ginger, that husband would, ere now, have been a lost man.

Mark Twain and the Comet.

"Then you don't take these things literally, Uncle Jake?"

"No, Boss. We've got for to read Scripter wid glass eyes sometimes; odderwise we're gwine to tumble roun' amongst common sense facts like a rediklus teapot on tin wheels. Now comes dat Mark Twain, an' he encourages de ignance an' de superstition of de keerless an' unedicated by tellin' of dem dat him an' Mr. Barnum is gwine to hire de comick to go a sailin' in. Mr. Twain may fool a good 'sight o' people, but dam ef he kin fool me. I know Mr. Barnum. He's a church member an' a good man. He won't lie. When he puts his name to dat story, all right, says Jake; but tell den I don't take no stock in it. De idee of fittin' up a comick wid staterooms, an' havin' water, an' gas, an' billiards, an' telegraffs aboard is all dam nonsense. Den how's he goin' to git aboard arter it are fitted up, chile? Does de man tink we's all fools?"

A Night in the Country.

About eleven o'clock the dogs take a tongue in. The faithful watch-dogs generally form themselves into Granges, each containing about 700 dogs, for mutual aid and benefit in the illicit distillation of mutton. Every night one hundred dogs steal away silently to kill sheep, while the other six hundred bark furiously, to induce their owners to believe they are, like the Hon. Elijah Program, "active to their trust," and to cover the bloody operations of their fellows. At midnight the cow, whose calf has been reft from her, having reflected on her loss, lifts up her voice and laments. The lament of a sorrowful cow in a barn is something sui generis in the matter of sounds. In the first place, it takes her a long time to become loud, and an equally long time to fill the barn with noise. But when the building is crowded with "moo," and it begins to leak out at the windows and doors in muffled and melancholy thunder, she has a long interval of rest to prepare for another blast ere the first undulation has been exhausted. About two in the morning she is drowned out and silenced by the jackass somewhere in the country, who, having nerved himself for the effort by a silence of twenty-four hours, delivers himself of a bray that makes the sky bright with a responsive shower of shooting stars. There is an awful silence for about twenty minutes, no animal daring to call his voice his own; then the jackass sings again. Just as the country side is congratulating itself that the infliction is over, for another interval of twenty minutes, he discharges a third volley, and then is heard no more. You, however, do not know whether he has broken a blood-vessel or gone to sleep; but, with a dreadful uncertainty as to when the next bray will occur, put your head under the clothes, and your thumbs in your ears, and wait.

CHAPTER 10.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them, or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of building having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and remove the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 19. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 20. No person shall use or occupy any building in the compact part of the city for a slaughter-house, or for trying tallow, or for currying leather, or for the deposit of green pelts or skins, unless under such restrictions and regulations as the health officers may impose.

SEC. 22. Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by sending one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. Eddy has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.
JOHN TAGGART."

LAST CHANCE

FOR

An Easy Fortune!

A postponement of the Fifth Concert of the Public Library of Kentucky has been so generally anticipated, and is so manifestly in the interest of all concerned, that it must meet the approval of all. The day is now absolutely fixed and there will be no variation from the programme now announced. A sufficient number of tickets have been sold to have enabled us to have had a large drawing on the 31st July, but a short postponement was considered preferable to a partial drawing. Let it be borne in mind that

THE FIFTH GIFT CONCERT

IS THE LAST WHICH WILL EVER BE GIVEN UNDER THIS CHARTER AND BY THE PRESENT MANAGEMENT.

That it will positively and unequivocally take place as announced on

that the music will be the best the country affords, and that

20,000 Cash Gifts

Our Baby.

[T. Adolphus Smith, in Graphic.]

But I thought the doctor had addressed his last remark to me, and being pretty well worked up by this time, I said: "Not at all sir! I have told you that our own baby is sick and needs your professional attention?"

"Well," says he, "haven't I been trying to make you tell what was the matter with it?"

I saw I had made a mistake, and so I said:

"Oh," says I, "I thought you were speaking to me."

"Well, for Heaven's sake, ain't I speaking to you!" said, or rather roared the doctor.

"The baby is sick," says I. "Its little stomach sticks out, and mother says she thinks she feels a lump inside."

"His what does what, and who feels which?" roared the doctor.

How stupid! "Its stomach sticks out," says I; and then I heard that confounded policeman laughing.

"Sticks out where?" says the doctor.

Now who would suppose that man was a doctor!

"Why, in front to be sure!" says I; "and when I press it hard the little thing wakes up and cries."

"What the deuce do you press it for, then?" says the doctor.

And then I heard that policeman laugh again. A matter of life or death seemed to amuse him.

But by this time I had lost all patience, and so, with considerable vehemence, I said: "Doctor, our own baby is very ill! Will you be kind enough to come to the door?"

At that he slammed down the window.

I remained some minutes at the door, and then I heard the doctor's heavy tread in the hall. By this time I had recovered my temper and was prepared to meet my own medical friend very pleasantly.

As soon, therefore, as he opened the door I said:

"Ah! how are you doctor?"

If he made any answer at all I did not catch it.

"As I was saying," says I "about our own baby, its little stomach sticks out, and mother thinks—"

While I had been saying this, the doctor, acting as though he was the only individual on the stoop, and apparently without seeing me, and even less hearing me, had slammed the front door and turned to go down the steps.

But unfortunately he had shut his coat flap into the door, whereupon he turned around, glared fiercely at me, said: "There then, you see!" and proceeded to find his night key.

I really could not see the force of his remark. I was not responsible certainly for the trifling inconvenience to which he had been subjected.

The coat tail extricated, the doctor ran down the steps. In my confusion I had forgotten to tell him of the ice-covered pavement, and the next thing I saw was the doctor with legs wide spread apart, sliding towards the gutter. He saved himself from falling by jumping into a snow bank.

Again, he turned from me, and again rid himself of the ridiculous ejaculation, "There then you see!"

How perfectly absurd! There was no sense in it. Suppose I did see. What then? How could I help it?

With my usual forgiving disposition, however, I ventured to offer the doctor my arm. But all he said was something about "a darned sight!" I did not apprehend the whole of the sentence.

We walked along each by himself, as best he could. At last I thought that, inasmuch as I had gotten the doctor out at that unseemly hour, it was only fair that I should make his difficult walk as pleasant as possible, and so I essayed to converse with him. Thinking that he might be willing to discuss topics of national interest, I said:

"What do you think of the Carpenter bill?"

"Whose carpenter bill?" said he.

"Why his, to be sure," said I.

"Very well, who is his? I dil'n't catch the name! I suppose I am not to blame for that young man!" replied my certainly not overgood-natured friend.

"If," continued he, "you or anybody else owed a carpenter's bill, I should advise you to pay it. As for its correctness, how the mischief can I form an opinion?"

I deemed it wise to drop issues of national interest, and ventured to try a new topic.

"What will this woman's movement amount to?" said I.

"Who is the woman? What is the matter with her?" said the doctor.

Now, how very stupid! Could not any intelligent person know that I was alluding to the great temperance crusade?

At this point the doctor fell again, sprawling over the pavement. I picked him up and we tried the middle of the street as somewhat safer.

After giving the doctor time to recover temper, I ventured once more upon conversation. I certainly wanted to break a silence which was very tedious and unpleasant.

"That Bismarck is engaged in a great work," said I. "When man once puts church against state his infinite intelligence can never predict what the end will be."

"Who told you to come after me t. night?" said the doctor by way of reply. I could hardly see what our own baby had to do with the ecclesiastical commotion in Europe. I think that I judged correctly in thinking that the doctor did not care to converse farther on that subject.

"Dear mother sent me," said I, "and I am afraid she regards the case as a critical one."

"Humph!" said the doctor. "How long is that mother of yours going to live in your family?"

This nettled me somewhat. I did not like that "that" saying; "that mother" evidently implied something more than was disclosed.

However, I said, "Of course, sir, my dear mother is welcome to a place by my fireside as long as she wishes it, but she will leave the moment she thinks we wish her to do so. She has often said that when ever we become tired of her we have only to find her a humble cot in some retired spot—"

"Has that baby been sick during the day?" said the doctor, without giving me a chance to finish my sentence.

That baby! Still another offence "that!" But I was patient, and replied:

"No, sir! Our own baby woke up with the peculiar sticking out of the stomach to which I have referred."

Fortunately, at this point we reached my door step.

"Here we are," said I, with a cheerfulness that was somewhat forced. Those "thats" still burned in my memory, and then in a few moments competent medical opinion was to decide whether our own baby was as seriously sick as I feared.

As luck would have it, I had forgotten my night key. I had of course, to ring the bell. I did so, and then again, and then thrice, and even four times. I did not pull hard for fear of exciting or starting our own sick baby.

Suddenly the doctor caught hold of the bell pull, and jerked it as though he was afraid somebody was going to run away with the other end of the wire.

Soon a window was opened and I heard dear mother's voice:

"Who is that?" says she.

"It's me," says I.

"Who is that?" says she.

"It is me, dear mother," says I.

"Is that you, T. Adolphus?" says she.

"Yes, dear mother," says I.

"Where is your night key?" says she.

"In my breeches pocket, dear mother," says I.

"Would you like to be let in?" says she.

"Why, of course! dear mother," says I.

"There are two of you," says she.

"Yes, of course," says I.

"Who is the other?" says she.

"Why, the doctor, dear mother," says I.

"Oh! I had forgotten," says she. "Thank God, there is no present need for his service."

You cannot think how my heart thrilled with joy as dear mother made this announcement.

"Doctor!" said I, grasping his hand, "our dear baby is better!"

All he did was to pull away his hand and make some reference to the infernal regions and future punishment. I really think he was disappointed at not finding our own dear baby in its last gasp.

Just then the door opened, and there stood Pheegie in her beautiful blue wrapper. She always looks sweetly in that wrapper.

I kissed her forehead and whispered, "Our child!"

"Don't be a fool!" said she; "it is too bad to have kept you on the step so long. And doctor, I am sorry, really sorry, that you should have been brought up here this dreadful night."

"But our child," said I.

"It's sleeping sweetly," said she.

"And its little stomach," said I.

"Nonsense!" said she; "there has been nothing the matter with its stomach."

"Ah, indeed! Iphegenia!" said dear mother, from the top of the stairs, "perhaps my intense love for my child's own offspring may have exaggerated the actualities of its abdominal ailments. Perhaps I am a burden here! If so, Titus Adolphus, you have only to find me a humble cot in some retired spot, and there I will pass my days in——"

"Oh! good Heavens!" said Pheegie.

Before dear mother had finished her sentence the doctor had gone out and slammed the door with a tremendous noise. Immediately I heard him falling down the ice covered steps. I sprang to the door, and asked if he was hurt. He picked himself up and walked off without reply.

The next day he sent in his bill.

That was curious, as I thought, for I had paid him in full only eight months before.

Pheegie says that he, of course, intends me to see that he does not want my patronage.

Dear mother very truly says that "the issues of life and death are not for man's will to determine."

I think that a very appropriate remark. But somehow Pheegie don't seem to think so.

But here I come back to my original proposition.

Why is it that doctors are so loath to believe that babies are sick?

Why is it that they show so little alacrity in flying to the infant cradle-side.

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1874.

Eminently Satisfactory.

The failure of Governor Weston and Council at Concord, Monday, to reappoint Judge Charles Doe, who has no superior among the Justices whose terms expire this week by the abolition of the present judiciary system, is hailed with pleasure by the republicans of this Congressional district, who have looked eagerly for the result of democratic counsellings. We venture to say that no act of the democratic leaders of New Hampshire will cement the republican forces more thoroughly than this, the chief and crowning mistake of the accidental officials now controlling this State. It seems that there must be some fell adviser in the democratic camp whose notions tend to party suicide. The gerrymanders of cities and senatorial districts and the abolition of the present judiciary, the passage of the bill disfranchising students, and like outrages of the party temporarily in power, were wanted to unite republicans in one grand endeavor to recover lost ground. The republicans of New Hampshire, surfeited with nearly a score of years of success, needed an excitant to arouse them to action. The republicans of this Congressional district, disgusted with the selection of a defeated back-salary grabber for an associate justice of the Supreme Judicial Court by a republican Governor, and divided by scores of minor issues, needed just such an antidote as a democratic Governor and Council have given.

Judge Charles Doe is to-day the most available man in the district for a republican nomination for Congress. We do not know that his ambition lies that way; we are not aware that he would accept the nomination. But the aroused sentiment among the republicans of the district demands at the hands of the leaders a nominee who shall have the respect and united support of every well meaning member of the party. New Hampshire republicans have now the privilege not frequently enjoyed of profiting by the mistakes of their opponents, and were the convention which is to indicate the choice of republicans for the Congressional candidacy to be holden at this time, Judge Doe's name would be the most formidable brought before it—the most dreaded by the democratic leaders. And among the many reasons why he is so highly esteemed among straight-forward republicans is his sententious reply to a curious-minded democrat who chose to ask him if he would accept an associate justiceship if offered him: "I ask no favors of my political opponents." No clique or political ring could be benefitted by Judge Doe's return to active political life, and we trust he may be found a leader among leaders, ready to deal sturdy blows as of old in favor of the principles he so ably upheld when the republican party was in a minority in the State and nation.

The Remodelled Judiciary.

The Governor and Council, after much travail, selected an entirely new man for Chief Justice on Monday, and as usual the city of Manchester profits by their divisions, Hon. Samuel N. Bell being the chosen head-light of the Superior Court of Judicature. Albert R. Hatch's support was merely nominal, Harry Bingham could not figure two to be a majority of five, and Ira A. Eastman was as figuratively fruitless. The support of Mr. Cushing by the republican member of the Council was futile, notwithstanding Mr. Cushing is a democrat. So the Governor bided his time and saw the divided sentiments of his political friends gradually tending toward a new man, and Manchester, which is ever ready to absorb everything a democratic hand can give, likely to be that man's residence. If there is one thing more than another which is an established fact it is the potency of Manchester in democratic counsels. No matter what person deals, Manchester holds the greatest number of trumps and the winning hand. But the location might have been less a matter of debate and the appointment more objectionable had Littleton or Portsmouth furnished an unscrupulous partizan to fill the time-honored position which Manchester obligingly showed superior qualities for, of heart and brain. Considering that the Chief Justice must be taken from the democratic ranks and that to go farther from home would render the good people of this one of the original thirteen States liable to worse fare, we most cordially congratulate Governor Weston that the democratic party and the city of Manchester had such good material from which to construct a Chief Justice. Aside from the feeling that no man who sympathized with rebellion should ever be honored by elevation to such a distinguished position, we are well pleased as any republican can be that democratic necessities have imposed no worse contingency on an expectant public.

In selecting Associate Justices, it was quite proper that Judge William S. Ladd of Lancaster should be retained and eminently just that a republican should be named. The appointment of Hon. Francis A. Faulkner of Keene shows that merit as well as policy dictated the action of the appointing powers—for a superior court with every justice democratic would have been too excessively thin to ensure permanency.

Again are the Governor and Council happy in selecting for Chief Justice of the Circuit Court, Hon. William L. Foster of Concord, who could hardly have expected, however deserving, such a compliment at the hands of political opponents. We expressed our convictions many months ago of the peculiar qualifications of Hon. John S. H. Frink of Greenland for a judgeship. Those convictions we have never seen cause to disavow. Mr. Frink has no superior at the Rockingham bar, possesses the esteem and respect of political friends and foes alike, and should he accept the position tendered him will confer honor upon it. No man in this section of the State promises more distinguished service than he, and it is with unfeigned pleasure we read of his appointment. The young democracy in this State has few such able attorneys as Mr. Frink in its ranks.

Having done so well when much worse was expected, the Governor and Council should have finished the matter creditably and redeemed the mutual pledges exchanged before and after election by the money-changers and virtuous patriots of the party who so firmly convinced themselves of the vast influence they wielded. The original appointment of Hon. Ellery A. Hibbard as Associate Justice by a republican Governor was astonishing to both parties, and the democrats, under their breath, assured themselves that they would legislate Justice Hibbard out of office so quick that he would hardly realize he ever delivered an opinion. Well—they did; and now Governor Weston et als reappoint him. He is the same old salary-grabber, the same democratic leader who while in Congress grappled with the deadly greenback and not only took extra back pay for which he gave no extra services, but voted yea when the question of plundering the treasury was called. This may not prevent his being a just and able judge, but it turns to sauer kraut the dessert so daintily looked forward to by our extremely virtuous democrats hereabouts, who promised themselves so much satisfaction and obtained so little. It also puts the wrong kind of a bob on the judicial kite so marvellously constructed, and teaches common people that even Governors and Councillors under democratic teachings are liable to ruin an otherwise nice loaf by introducing the wrong kind of leaven.

There is great excitement in Paris city consequent upon the receipt of intelligence that Marshal Bazaine had escaped from the Island of St. Marguerite some time during Sunday night. The details of the manner in which he succeeded in getting away are unknown, except that he effected it with a rope ladder and got on a vessel bound for Italy. The night was dark and stormy.

The authorities are still hard at work on the mystery of the murder of Miss Ball at St. Albans, and think they see a little light. Charles Baraboo, a Frenchman, about thirty years old, is one of the many persons arrested, and there is considerable evidence against him. He lived at Vergennes up to the Saturday before the murder, when he went to St. Albans. He has failed to tell a straight story in regard to his whereabouts on the day of the murder, and though he has very little employment he has not turned out with the rest of the people to hunt for the murderer. His mother once testified that the mask that the murderer wore was one of her own make, but afterward when one of her sons had suggested to her that she might get somebody into trouble, she denied that it was her work.

The Banner of Light, the able organ of the Spiritualist brethren, is of opinion that the Pomeroy boy is the reincarnation of some murderer, whose life was probably squeezed out of him upon the gallows. It intimates that all spirits thus homicidally freed from their earthly clay will return in the shape of the Pomeroy boy or somebody else, to confound the advocates of capital punishment and unsettle all our preconceived notions as to human responsibility. It is claimed that the venerable editor of the Banner, who holds to the doctrine of reincarnation, is now occupying his seventh or eighth vestment of clay, and he ought to know how it is himself.

State News.

George W. Lucy, of Nottingham, was drowned in Pawtuckaway pond on Sunday last. He was in a boat with two other men, John and Thomas Prescott. Mr. Edwin C. Shirley of Goffstown has been appointed chief marshal of the State fair.

Of the new judges appointed by Governor Weston and Council, Messrs. Bell, Ladd, Frink and Hibbard are democrats, and Messrs. Foster and Faulkner republicans. The new courts will be in running order on the 17th inst.

Messrs. Fletcher, Hatch and Sanborn, Fish Commissioners, have been removed, and Oliver H. Noyes of Henniker, John S. Wadleigh of Laconia, and Andrew C. Fifield of Enfield, were appointed to fill their places. Andrew S. Edgerly of Haverhill was nominated for Adjutant General in place of John M. Haines, removed. The commission to inquire into the expediency of constructing a new State prison and report to the legislature at the next session as to its necessity and cost, if needed, was filled by the appointment of the following gentlemen: Dr. J. W. Barney of Concord, Dexter Richards of Newport and Dana Sargent of Nashua. Geo. Y. Sawyer of Nashua, Hiram R. Roberts of Rollinsford and Jonas Livingston of Peterboro are a commission to inquire into the expediency of revising the laws on taxation. Capt. At a meeting of the governor and council, Monday, the following pardons to convicts in the State prison were granted: Michael Shea, sentenced from Hillsborough county in October, 1871, to three years, for breaking and entering; David E. Tenny alias Daniel T. Edwards, same county, sentenced October, 1871, for horse stealing, to three years; James D. Squires, sentenced from Hillsborough county, September, 1871, to three years, for stealing; George Gothard, sentenced from Cheshire county in November, 1870, to four years, for breaking and entering; Frank E. Woods, sentenced from Strafford county in September, 1871, for stealing, to four years; Henry C. Miller, from the same county, in November, 1870, to four years for horse stealing.

In March last two men, named Varney and Simons, started to cross Lake Winnipisaukee on the ice in a sleigh and were never seen after leaving the shore. It was supposed that they broke through the ice and were drowned, though a search failed to reveal any trace of them. On Sunday last a man named Emerson discovered the horse and sleigh floating in the water near Wolfeborough. A search for the two bodies is now in progress.

John Morrissey's History.

[Cor. Chic. Tribune.]

Going down to John Morrissey's club house last night, he was found at leisure and communicative. "I went to New York," he said, "a stout lad, determined to fight, and to fight the biggest man that could be found. There was nothing I could think of but to fight, and I had to think of that; for I was kicked ashore almost every day from the boat of Capt. Smith, who is now my father-in-law. I had read of Hyer and Sullivan, and the great pugilists in New York, and one day I took my bundle and came to the city, determined to get a fight out of them. It was at the Empire Club, on Park Row, where I hunted them up. The first I saw was Isaiah Rynders, a famous political leader of them days, and I went up to him, surrounded by his crowd, and said: 'Mr. Rynders, I've come down here from Troy to fight. I've got no money, but I will fight for reputation. I will fight Mr. Hyer, or you, or anybody you can pick up.' They just all set at me at once and gave me a beating that made my head ache for three weeks. After that I laid for them individually. Said I, 'Gentlemen, I will lick your crowd, and make you acknowledge me, if it takes me years.' I was poor as a wharf rat, and could barely pick up my food; but I kept on the wharves unloading steamers, working with 'longshoremen, and getting beaten so often that I was hardly ever right well. As long as I was poor nobody would do me the favor to fight me in the ring, and I finally went to California in the mining times to make a stake. There I fought Thompson and whipped him, and I returned to New York with some reputation. The day I landed I challenged Hyer to fight for $10,000. He came round with Bill Poole to whip me before I got out of bed one morning, and I was so determined about it that they saw I would never leave New York till I had that belt. Finally, I fought Sullivan at Boston Corners—the hardest fight I ever had. He was an artist, and he broke my nose, and cut me all to pieces; but I have always known that I could keep my legs and stand up until any of my opponents were worn out. That was my calculation with Heenan;—endurance against strength. Hyer I never could bring to the scratch. He had lost his moral force, and never would fight me. His friend Poole as you know, set on me with a pack of his friends, and expected to bring me so near my end that I would lose my stomach for a fair contest.

"Unable to get any of them to meet me, I married and went into business. All at once Heenan came from California with a reputation, and they said, 'Here is our man to give Morrissey a flogging at last. I then declined to fight, until I was worried and set upon in and out of print, and finally they whipped my old father and abused my family. Said I to my wife: 'I can't live this way. I shall have to fight that man. My wife said: 'Yes, you must fight him.' I went into training on my father-in-law's farm. Every effort was made to bring the whole sentiment of the United States up against me. You can't tell how many years and how much pain I have had to bear for that perfectly unjust odium of seeking to challenge an American as an Irishman. Mr. Heenan tied the American colors to the ropes, and his coat when he took it off, was actually lined with the American flag. I had to laugh in his face. He broke my nose a second time, and I think he could strike the most powerful blow of any man I ever saw; but I won the battle and closed them out. I followed him to England to see the fight he had with Sayers; for by this time I was angry at years of persecution, and I wanted to see the last man of that old Hyer coterie closed out."

Then, the still powerful gladiator related how he came to play cards by profession. "A prize fighter," he said, "can graduate with no other avocation equal to this start. I have always played cards more or less. My general reputation among Americans, I felt, required me to do something to start my boy, for whose character I live at present in a great degree, and I chased up the seat in Congress, so as to be able to say: 'If your father did begin in the ring he wrote M. C. after his name."

Laconics.

Messrs. Julius Eichburg and William Mason combined their musical talent in a concert at the Appledore House, Isle of Shoals, on Thursday evening, for the benefit of the boatmen, and realized a very handsome sum.

The Times wants us to look out for seventy democratic majority in "old Sevastopal" next month. That is only twelve more than last March, and then that prod sank 350 deep.

The Naval Band gave a serenade concert at Little Boar's Head, complimentary to Mrs. George M. Robeson, Tuesday evening. A large concourse of Beach visitors were present.

The body of the woman found in Kingston pond was disinterred by undertaker Adams of this city and delivered to Coroner Rider on Tuesday. An autopsy of the remains was made by Dr. Brainard Dearborn, but the result has not transpired. Newcastle.

Rev. E. G. Stone is to begin his pastoral duties at the Congregational Church, Sept. 1st. Till then the desk will be filled by Rev. E. C. Ray, who has preached most acceptably to the people, for several successive Sabbaths.

The Grammar School closed on the 31st ult. New studies will be introduced next term. As the vacation is to be short, the pupils remembering that "delays are dangerous" celebrated the first week in various ways. Wednesday a party of thirty-five took a ride to Wallace Sands. The day was cloudless and fully appreciated by the students, who were jubilant over the thought that this was only one of the many pleasant occasions in store for them before they should return to their "hard study." None of those unpleasantries, that are so common where parties of school children are assembled, arose to mar the pleasure of the day. At the picnic the cities of New York, Boston and Portland were represented. A. W.

Something of a Coincidence.

The Honolulu Commercial Advertiser says: Thirty-one years ago last January, the brig Delaware, Captain D. P. Penhallow, arrived at Honolulu from Boston, and among the passengers was Mr. Wm. C. Parke. Last Sunday, the bark Wm. C. Parke, arrived at this port, commanded by a son of the captain of the Delaware. Captain Deblois Penhallow, master of the Wm. C. Parke, spent his boyhood days in Honolulu, and now returns to visit the scenes of his childhood, a bronzed and bearded man and master of a ship. Captain Penhallow left here when quite a lad, and to see him return in charge of a ship seems like a dream. We doubt not he will worthily wear the mantle which has fallen on him.

Senator Jones Points a Moral.

Donn Piatt has been interviewing Senator Jones leisurely as they "expressed" from New York to Washington, and writes in the Washington Capital as follows:

"And now, Senator," I asked, "who did write the famous memorandum?"

"If Grant did not," he replied, shouting in my ear, "I don't know who did. I know I did not. I first saw it one night at dinner. On getting home I said to my friend, 'Here, I have half a mind to write the President and ask him for the mem. he read to us at the table; that has lots of meat in it.' My friend said that would be 'cheeky.' I said, 'Cheeky or not, here goes.' I addressed the President a note, and the next morning brought me the document."

The conversation turning on the inflationists, I called the Senator's attention to the fact that the democrats of Indiana had cut under Morton, and that he had probably lost the State and Senatorship through the very means by which he sought to secure them.

"I cannot understand Morton," said the Senator; "he is unquestionably an able man, and yet he floundered in that quagmire like a cart-horse with his eyes blinded by the mud he flung up."

"I think," I said, "Morton stuck on that word 'doctrinaire;' it had such a dreadful sound to him."

"He reminded me," responded the Senator, "of a queer character we once had in Nevada by the name of Pokebury. He was a lawyer of some promise, but came to nothing through drink. Losing all his clients he went to mining, and joined a rough miner by the name of Spokes. At the end of a week Pokebury appeared in town with a black eye, a swollen nose, and lacerated garments. Of course we were anxious to know all about it. 'Well, you see,' said he, 'Billy and I were partners, and I like Billy, for he's a well-meaning man for an uneducated cuss. But Billy and I dissolved partnership, we settled and struck—leastwise we struck each other and Billy settled. Our first little difference was of an astronomical character. We divided the day different. Billy divided on six A. M. and I divided on ten A. M., and Billy, instead of allowing for astronomical difference, said I was a lazy dog. But I didn't mind that, for Billy was my partner, you see, and had a right to his views. Then we differed on ablution. Billy abluted before breakfast, and said I was a dirty dog, for you see I always abluted after breakfast. But I didn't mind that, for people will differ and so long as the difference don't affect business what's the odds? But the third difference was just a little too much for me. We were sitting down to beans and slapjacks, and Billy blowing about my being a greedy dog, when suddenly the fellow said to me, 'I'd think you foe those molasses.' This was too much—no man can say 'those molasses' to me and live—and I just took him in the countenance with a right-hander that settled him and his insulting bad grammar together. That's the way we dissolved. I'm in town, and I guess Bill will be here in a couple of weeks.'

"And so," continued the Senator, "Morton struck on doctrinaire."

The Grasshopper.

[N. Y. Tribune.]

Comes this way now on lifted wings, with fiery lightnings in his eye and the cereal crops of six counties of Minnesota in his craunching teeth, the wild unbidden grasshopper of the West. A jerky bird is a grasshopper. He folds himself up like the jack-knife, releases himself like an arrow from a bended bow, propels himself over a large space and subsists on the country he covers. He assimilates the people to himself. When he alights upon the field the farmer looks for his crop, and behold, like the grasshopper which has passed, he was antennæ. For sociability and gregariousness there are few wild fowls like the grasshopper. He moves in battalions at company front, and wherever there's one there are a million. Standing on the ground his knees overlook him like a step-ladder, and his tout ensemble is that of an over-loaded wheelbarrow. He has the unbounded stomach of a weekly story paper for cereals, and when he has cleared up the standing crop of a county or a State he skips to the next, picking his teeth as he goes, and, gathering himself in mass convention, he follows the fashion of the time and "points with pride" to the record of the past. The youth of our country call him indifferently the grasshopper and the hoppergrass, and say "Shoo" at him as he goes by. The hardy Utah pioneer gently untangles the legs of him from his hair and whiskers, and covers him with a No. 13 boot; the guests at Townsend's Hotel, in Salt Lake City, hear him through all the silent watches of the night rush into the window, as one who has been sent for from far, and who drops with a thud into the washbowl; and the Digger Indian gathers him in trenches and barbecues him for the noonday meal.

—The further West you go the more interesting the stories become:—"In Gervais, Oregon, during a recent storm, a large tree was struck by lightning, and cut completely off, as with a sharp instrument, about four feet from the ground. In falling, the tree was thrown forward ten feet, raised high in the air, and the butt driven into the ground, the shook shivering the branches, and leaving the trunk standing upright."

—The correct estimate of the fearful power of womanly beauty has been underrated, if we may believe the story from Paris about the surpassingly lovely woman whose dead body was lately displayed at the Morgue. A too susceptible young man saw the corpse, and then committed suicide just in order, as he stated in the usual ante mortem letter, to get on the next slab to her. He was evidently dead in love.

—Brignoli is to travel through the English provinces next fall.

—Stockton, Cal., is suffering from a visitation of poisonous spiders.

—Cheyenne is smitten with dryness, and the trees are dying for want of water.

—A company of Wisconsin divines are recreating at "Camp Heresy," Detil's Lake, in that State.

—Chicago newsboys, out of compliment to the present epidemic of incendiarism, have had their lungs stereotyped, and grind out "All about the great fire," every morning, with a divine confidence.

—A lady in Germantown, who lives near a church, was sitting by the window listening to the crickets, who were chirping loudly, the music from the choir being faintly audible, when a gentleman dropped in who had just passed the church, and had the music full in his mind. "What a noise they are making to-night!" said he. "Yes," replied the lady, "and it is said they do it with their hind legs."

—A man living about sixty miles from Parsons, Kansas, stole a horse. A mob went to his house, as they supposed, at night, and finding that the occupant was in bed, they told his wife that they wanted to see him a minute. So he came out. They hung him to a tree and then shot twenty-two bullets into him and left him. The next morning they found that they had got the wrong man, this one being a hard-working laborer, with three children, and that the right man lived just next door.

—A correspondent, writing from Saratoga, hits off some musical bores at present "performing" at that fashionable resort, as follows: There is a man with a blond wig and the remains of a baritone voice, who sings by ear "Il Balen" and "Involami," and other morceaux suitable for such a voice. He commenced to-day, and measures are taken to suppress him. There is also a young fellow who plays on the piano by ear, but as he never knows the end of anything, and generally commences in the middle, and usually contrives to maltreat a note or two, he is also going to be requested to collapse. There is a still worse bore, the heavy pianist, who bangs the keys about as a Massachusetts school-marm does offending little boys, and who informs you negligently, that he is a pupil of Mill, but that he has formed his style of shading after Rubenstein's. This wretch is not content with making such a hideous row that conversation in the recesses of the windows becomes difficult, but he has the audacity to complain of talkers, and to intimate that he cannot really play unless people are good enough to be silent, and then the young ladies who are grouped around the piano cry out in chorus, "Oh! never mind those barbarians, who have no love for music; please play for us, dear Mr. Semiquaver."

CHAPTER 10.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or into any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the Health officers.

SEC. 8. The Health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 19. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 20. No person shall use or occupy any building in the compact part of the city for a slaughter-house, or for trying tallow, or for currying leather, or for the deposit of green pelts or skins, unless under such restrictions and regulations as the health officers may impose.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

The troubles between the whites and blacks at Austin, Arkansas, still continues, and is represented as serious. Several collisions have occurred, in which the negroes were repulsed, and lost a number of men. The number of whites killed is small. The position of the whites in Austin is represented as being one of danger at present.

Mr. Moulton's statement before the Beecher investigating committee is still withheld from the public, and nothing is learned concerning its nature save that nothing but the documents covered by the previous statements was included in it. Mr. Moulton now declares he will under no circumstances further reveal the secrets entrusted to him by Messrs. Beecher and Tilton, even at the request of those gentlemen.

The Democratic Record.

[Manchester Mirror.]

What is the democratic party of to-day, and what is its position upon the living issues? It has recently held State conventions in all sections of the Union, and in Ohio, Connecticut and New Hampshire has had control of the last State Legislatures. From these conventions and Legislatures we get the party policy: and what is it? Free trade in Maine and high tariff in Pennsylvania, repudiation in Indiana, inflation in Iowa and contraction in the East, anti-railroad in Wisconsin, and abject subserviency to railroad dictation in New Hampshire. Everywhere a mere factious opposition, hungering for office and bidding for votes, and held together only by its hope of a chance to plunder the treasury, and its hatred of the republican party; everywhere loud in its denunciation of existing abuses, and profuse in its promises of reform; whenever, as in New Hampshire and Connecticut, it gets into power, trampling under its feet all its promises, and remembering the evils it has bewailed only to increase them; squandering the public money, gerrymandering States, districts and towns, enacting and repealing laws, pedling out offices to incompetents and thieves, prostrating all public interest at the behests of selfish politicians; this is the democratic party when dealing with living issues.

A Great Engineering Scheme.

[Paris cor. London Times.]

The latest scheme for the improvement of French Africa is the creation of an inland sea of 160 leagues long by 20 in width. A staff officer deputed by the minister of war to study the subject reports that this is very feasible, and M. Lesseps is said to have expressed his opinion that it may easily be done at the very trifling expense of half a million sterling. The sea existed in former times, but the formation of banks intercepted its communication with the Mediterranean, the African sun sucked up the water, and the sea became dry land. A cutting eighteen kilometres in length would suffice, it is said, to fill it up again. The superior council of Algeria, presided over by General Chanzy, voted, towards the end of last year, funds for the preliminary studies, and in the National Assembly a credit of 10,000 francs has just been voted to continue them. The proposed new sea would be partly in Tunis and partly in Algeria. Captain Roudoire, a staff officer, employed by the government, lately published an interesting paper on the subject in the Revue des Deux Mondes, and the question has been laid before the Academy of Sciences. The bed of the former sea is composed of a series of vast slimy hollows, which the natives call chotts, and which contain water only at certain times of the year. The following extract gives a good idea of their nature:

"The Chott of Mel Rir covers a surface of 150 square leagues; it communicates to the east with the Chott Sellem, and this one, with a series of other depressions, of which the most important are the Chotts Rharsa and El Djerid, in Tunis. The edge of this last almost touches the sea. It is only 18 kilometres from the Mediterranean. All these hollows are for the most part dry. Their surface is white with salt of magnesia, and they are exactly like immense plains covered with white frost. It is imprudent to venture there without a guide. There are mud pits very difficult to distinguish under the brilliant canopy of magnesian crystals, and the traveller might be swallowed up by them. The natives call them saucepans. The most dangerous chott is El Djerid. It is crossed by the much-frequented road between Nifzaoua and Touzeur, a long narrow line upon which travellers can pass only in single file. At certain times of the year a step to the right or left buries the straggler in the mud. Moula Ahmed relates that a caravan of a thousand camels has traversed this chott. When one of them wandered a little off the road all the others followed and successively disappeared in the slough. He adds that at the period when he passed himself a piece of 100 cubits in extent suddenly sank, swallowing up the men and animals who were upon it. The camels at last entirely disappeared. Trees which the wind had torn up also sank in without leaving a trace. It is clear that below these hollows there are often considerable depths of moving soil."

The Isthmus of Gabes is the obstacle to the return of the sea to its old domain. "Break that," says a writer, "and the basin of the Chotts again becomes a sea—the Baltic of the Mediterranean." The subject is of strong interest. It is estimated that the fertilizing effect of such a body of water of which the evaporation would fall again in rain on the surrounding country would be of the utmost benefit to those regions of northern Africa. The Suez Canal is said to have greatly improved the climate of the country through which it runs and has made the rains more abundant and regular. It is hoped that the filling of the Chotts would, after a time, transform into a vast oasis the 600,000 hectares of land surrounding them. The idea is grandiose and has captivated the imagination of many persons. Whether the advantages its realization is expected to entail would suffice to convert a very unsuccessful colony into a prosperous one must remain doubtful until trial has been made. The engineering part of the affair is, probably, easy, but it has been doubted whether the work, when accomplished, would be durable. The same process which banked up the communication between the sea and the Chotts might, it is thought, be repeated; but the more sanguine maintain that modern science would be at no loss for precautions against so unsatisfactory a result. In former days it was often said that if Algeria was rather an expensive luxury than a profitable colony to France, it at any rate served as an excellent military school where new levies were quickly converted into veterans. In case of a European war the African army was supposed to be a valuable reserve of well-disciplined soldiers, inured to campaigning. Experience has shown the fallacy of this notion. Africa was the worst school the French soldier could have. Conflicts with wild Arab levies, without artillery and wholly unable to stand before European troops, were no training for wars with the great military nations. Easy victories tended to induce carelessness and overconfidence. A great deal was made of African campaigns in the time of Louis Philippe, when Europe was in profound peace, and the young princes of the blood were sent thither as to the only battle-field open upon which to win their spurs. The unequal and long-protracted conflict had an adventurous and picturesque character which appealed to the imagination, and painters covered acres of canvas with fanciful representations of desperate encounters and overwhelming charges. But Algeria was in some respects ruinous to the French soldier. He learnt to beguile his long hours of leisure by hard drinking, he acquired habits of debauchery, and his discipline became relaxed.

—Susie Liberty, of La Crosse, has thirteen lovers, and every one of them exclaims, "Give me Liberty or give me death!" And she's a red-headed girl at that.

—Duluth has lost its daily paper, and the ladies of the Zenith City are compelled to spend half the morning in talking with each other from the second story windows.

—Every fellow who had a horse and wagon at Saratoga during the races, now wears store clothes and a plug hat, and has something left over for Mehitable Jane's Fall fixin's.

—Smuggling is pursued resolutely on the Belgian frontier, but Woystin Woytard was caught at it. He attempted to run the line by driving at full speed, but the custom house soldier brought down the horse with his rifle. There was $500 worth of tobacco in the wagon, and the horse was in armor, and so armed with knives about the bridle that one could not have stopped him without being cut to pieces.

—Post Office clerks are weeping over the perversity of the woman of the period, who will write the addresses of her letters "catticornered."

—Three giraffes just from Abyssinia have reached the Garden of Plants in Paris. This animal threatens to become extinct, and has resisted all efforts to domesticate him as made in Africa, though these efforts are partly successful in European menageries.

—The Western papers will have their jokes. The Detroit Tribune says that a distinguished lady "publicly confesses that she is fifty-five years of age. Those who have charged with being 550 years old have undoubtedly extenuated and set down the 0 in malice."

—An ambitious mamma complained to the music master that her daughter was going back in her music. "Why so, madame?" said the professor. "Because," she replied, "Seraphina tells me that her last piece was in five sharps, and the one she is now learning is only two!"

—A romantic miss in York, Ill., recently went out to Maud Mullerize, and "rake the meadows sweet with hay." She stood over a yellow jacket's nest as she swung her little rake. First jump from the shore, eleven feet. Distance to the house, half a mile. Time, two minutes.

—No doubt Miss Jones, of Norristown, Pa., would have dreamed of seeing her future husband after placing a piece of wedding cake under her pillow the other night, if she hadn't eaten two plates of ice-cream, a pint of strawberries and a couple of large pickles before going to sleep. She prefers remaining single to marrying the man she saw.

—A citizen of a country town, noted for his dishonesty, was lately taken very ill, and becoming alarmed sent for a clergyman, who came to see him, and laid down the divine law to him with great faithfulness and emphasis. The sick man was much affected, and said, "Well, parson, I think you're right, and I've made up my mind that if I get well I shall in the future live principally honest."

Travelers' Testimony.

Thousands of travelers by land and sea have vouched for the efficacy of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a preventative of the physical disturbances which ordinarily arise from change of climate and the changes of diet, water, etc., incident to a wandering life. Upon systems toned, invigorated and regulated by this genial vegetable antidote the external causes of debility and disease seem to produce little or no effect. Forearmed with Hostetter's Bitters, the voyager may bid defiance to sea sickness and encounter the chilling fogs of the British Isles, the coast winds of the Antilles, the icy temperature of northern Alaska, or the burning heat of the tropics, with equal impunity. The effect of this admirable medicated stimulant is greatly to increase the vital energy of the system, thereby enabling it to resist and repel the exciting causes of disease.

Local Matters.

Portsmouth & Dover Railroad.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad was held at Point Cottage Hotel, Dover Point, on Wednesday at 12 o'clock. The report of the Treasurer was read, and showed the present cost of the road to be $745,660. This has been met by the cities of Portsmouth and Dover in the sum of $525,000, and private individuals in the sum of $151,-860, with outstanding notes payable to the amount of $68,800. There are a few cases of land damages and unpaid bills which together make the sum of $20,000. The report was accepted.

A joint committee consisting of Mayor Miller and Ald. Sise and Lefavour of this city, with May or Wyatt and Alderman Purinton of Dover, represented the stock held by the two cities, and in behalf of them Mayor Wyatt moved that the said committee have permission to retire and select a Board of Directors to submit to the approval of the meeting. While the conference of the above named committee was being held, the clerk, J. S. H. Frink, Esq., was requested to read the lease of the P & D. road to the E. R. R., which was accordingly done. It is a lengthy document, and by these initiated in the intricacies of the law it is regarded as a strong compact and a credit to its maker.

The conference committee reported the following named gentlemen as those whom they had selected for the action of the meeting: Frank Jones, Daniel Marcy, Frank W. Miller, William H. Sise, Oliver Wyatt, Andrew H. Young and A. D. Purinton. It was voted that the meeting proceed to the election of a Board of Directors for the ensuing year, and choice was made of the above named gentlemen. At a subsequent meeting of the Board of Directors Frank Jones was chosen President; William H. Hackett was chosen Clerk, in place of J. S. H. Frink, who declined a re-election.

Laconics.

We hear that a democratic lawyer is preparing papers for the purpose of naturalizing foreigners recently arrived and employed at the breweries. These men have not been in the State the requisite twelve months, but it is the intention of the democratic leaders to allow them to vote next month. They are already spotted and we advise the republicans of the first and second wards to follow them up and convict them of the crime of perjury if their designs are carrid out. A term in the State prison is the most convincing argument for such fellows.

Col. Hackett will sell by auction at noon to-day (Thursday), on the premises, the house and lot of land on Islington street formerly the residence of Mrs. Mark Richards. This property will be sold without reserve. At half-past 12 o'clock Col. Hackett will sell, at the North church, pew No. 44 in said church.

Capt. E. M. Stoddard on Wednesday telegraphed to Mrs. Stoddard that he arrived at New Orleans the day before, with the wrecked English steamship Mississippi, three days from Key West.

A friend from Greenland reports that the drag-rope of Barnum's balloon tore down a stone wall and knocked apples from the trees on the Oliver Berry farm and marked its course in the street, about 11 o'clock, Tuesday night. The station agent heard voices in the air and thinks one of the aerial passengers was considerably frightened. It is reported that the balloon descended at Eliot during the night and reascended, the rapping of the rope against a farm-house being the first intimation the family had of the presence of the balloon. The balloon finally landed at Wells, Me., Wednesday at 11:40 A. M.

Entries for the yacht race next Thursday are being made day by day. With a good glass, Jaffrey's Point, Frost's Point, "The Wentworth," Gerrish's Island, Cape Neddick and Appledore island afford excellent opportunities for seeing the grand spectacle. Hundreds of sailing vessels will be on the course at that time.

Mr. Wm. L. Tomlins, of New York city, will give a musical recital on the Mason & Hamlin Orchestral Organ this (Thursday) evening, in Mechanics' Hall, at 8 o'clock. Of these recitals the Boston Journal says: "Altogether, one cannot pass an hour more pleasantly than in listening to Mr. Tomlins' magical interpretations of standard and classical music." Admission free, to organists, teachers and all interested in music, to whom a cordial invitation is extended. For further information apply at Montgomery's music store.

The Times is in error in stating that Judge Doe was defending the fugitive slave law at the time referred to in our editorial of Wednesday. Judge Doe was speaking in denunciation of the Buchanan administration and delt effective blows against the hunkers of that time, whose action recently goes to show how great was the damage he inflicted. Don't go beyond your depth, neighbor, in trying to appear too smart.

The Grangers' clam bake at Dover Point, Wednesday, was attended by about 200 people.

Collecting Sea Moss.

[Foster's Democrat.]

A new branch of industry is being developed in our neighboring town of Kittery, where quite a number of parties are engaged in the collecting and drying of sea moss. There is hut one beach in the vicinity on which this business can be carried on as it must be a flat surface with only elevation enough to carry off the water. The moss is collected in dories in the vicinity of White Island and Whales Back. Two men go in each boat and with rakes made for purpose tear the moss from the rocks at half-tide. It is taken then to the beaches where large beds are constructed by taking up all the large rocks and leaving only a surface of small pebble stones. These beds contain from ten to three hundred barrels. If there is no rain, sea water has to be thrown on the moss and the sun bleaches it from the dark green color, first to a beautiful pink and then to a clear white. It has to be turned occasionally and made the same as hay. After it is thoroughly dried, it is packed in barrels and shipped to Boston, where it finds a ready sale at six cents a pound. Immense quantities are used by brewers in settling ale, and the demand always exceeds the supply. Two vessels are now employed in the carrying trade, and some parties in this city are now negotiating for an extensive business next year.

An Equine-Canine Fight.

About six o'clock on the forenoon of the last day of July, says the San Francisco Chronicle, a fine bay horse attached to a light wagon was being driven along Kearney street by two men. "When near Sutter street a small English bull dog, weighing eighteen or twenty pounds, made a spring from the sidewalk and tried to catch the horse by the nose. Missing him, the dog fell under the horse's feet, and in an instant caught him by the right fore leg, just above the knee, where he held on with the grip of death. The horse reared and plunged and stamped. The men in the wagon, having all they could do to control the animal in that crowded thoroughfare, dared not attempt to get out to fight the dog off. Finally, with a violent stamp and sudden dropping to his knees, the horse shook the vicious brute off his leg, but in an instant he was caught again in the chest. Fastening his teeth in the tough, thick hide, the dog hung on like a leech. The poor horse, unable to shake him off, bolted across a low pile of timber at the corner of Sutter and Kearney streets, where he was caught by a dozen men out of the large crowd which had assembled. Some one at this point raised the cry that the dog was mad. That was enough to keep the crowd back and insure fair play. Not a soul would go near, and the horse was for several minutes left to fight it out alone. Again and again did he shake off the tenacious little animal, kicking and striking at him with all his fierce strength, but in vain. He would not desist. Once in a while a hoof would hit the dog and send him reeling in the dust, but quicker than lightning he would gather himself up again and fasten his vise-like fangs in the horse's flesh. "Get a club here!" shouted some one in the crowd. 'Unfasten that horse's check-rein and he'll soon fix him with his teeth,' shouted another man. 'Keep away from him; don' touch him; don't you see he's mad?' was again yelled out, and the crowd stood back. Once the dog sprang, and, clasping the horse's left foreleg, just as a young bear would climb a pole, fastened his teeth in and held on. The horse snorted with pain and plunged wildly about; he reared, kicked, fell on his knees, and stamped, but still those sharp, white teeth were buried in his flesh, and the cold, sharp eye gleamed with tenacity and vicious hate. Finally some one got a long club and beat the dog vigorously over the head. He would not let go. Then another man got a club and came to the horse's relief. A fierce whack fell on the dog's nose, and then the teeth loosened and the fierce little brute fell under the horse's heels. Again he made a spring, but this time something struck him full in the face. It was an iron-bound hoof, and it came with the force of a trip-hammer. Beaten senseless, with the wind knocked completely out of him, and a leg broken, the dog went rolling into a pile of rubbish, where his owner picked him up and carried him away in his arms. The poor horse was completely unstrung. The sweat poured off him in streams, and he shook and trembled so that he could scarcely stand. His owner got some rum and bathed the animal's legs, which were badly cut and lacerated, and after a few moments he got sufficiently quiet to be driven home. The horse is a valuable one, but unless there is danger of hydrophobia, his injuries are not likely to prove serious. The novel spectacle lasted fully ten minutes, and was witnessed by as many as 500 people. The dog is owned by a man in the employ of the Gas company. He is a regular English bull, and is said to be one of the best fighters on this coast. He is terribly vicious, and is usually kept closely muzzled, but on this occasion he did not have his muzzle on. These dogs are supposed to be valuable, but it is a question whether David Short's tank is not the best place for such a one as this."

The house has an evergreen hedge around it and the buildings are in thorough repair. There is a fruit orchard of apple trees, 20 cherry trees and as many pear trees—and a nursery with 1000 young apple trees. From the grape vines on the place fifteen bushels of fruit have been sold in a season, besides abundance retained for home use. Plenty of the land heavily wooded and there is a great quantity of muck on the premises. In the pasture there is a never-failing spring. The farm is situated midway between depots of Eastern and Concord railroads. For sale at a bargain. Enquire immediately,—of O. G. Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH of the City of Portsmouth call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the City to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER 10.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 19. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 20. No person shall use or occupy any building in the compact part of the city for a slaughter-house, or for trying tallow, or for currying leather, or for the deposit of green pelts or skins, unless under such restrictions and regulations as the health officers may impose.

SEC. 21. Any person or persons who shall violate any rule or regulation, or commit any act forbidden in any section of this ordinance, to which no special penalty is annexed, shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty dollars, to be recovered by complaint before the police court of this city.

SEC. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice to the Health Officers.

SEC. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect, forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the Health Officers in the name of the city.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in south America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

LAST CHANCE

FOR

An Easy Fortune!

A postponement of the Fifth Concert of the Public Library of Kentucky has been so generally anticipated, and is so manifestly in the interest of all concerned, that it must meet the approval of all. The day is now absolutely fixed and there will be no variation from the programme now announced. A sufficient number of tickets have been sold to have enabled us to have had a large drawing on the 31st July, but a short postponement was considered preferable to a partial drawing. Let it be borne in mind that

THE FIFTH GIFT CONCERT

IS THE LAST WHICH WILL EVER BE GIVEN UNDER THIS CHARTER AND BY THE PRESENT MANAGEMENT.

That it will positively and unequivocally take place as announced on

MONDAY, 30TH NOVEMBER, 1874,

that the music will be the best the country affords, and that

A Lively Negro Wedding.

Making my way leisurely through Forsyth Place, Savannah, recently, I was accosted by one of the most prominent business men of the Bay.

"You have come South," said he, "in search of the picturesque, and I have something here that I think will aid you."

Fumbling around through his pockets, he presently drew forth a card, written in a fair hand, of which the following is a transcript:

Compliments,
Miss LETICIA QUINNEY
and
Mr. ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS,
West Broad street. At 9 o'clock.

I ventured to inquire the nature of the document.

"Did you ever attend a negro wedding in Georgia?" asked my friend.

I confessed I had not.

"Well," said he, with a smile in which there was something like triumph, "That is a card of invitation. You might take advantage of it."

"But," said I, "what would people think?"

"People be hanged! I am going. That girl, Leticia, is the daughter of one of my old family servants. She's been running after my wife every day for a week to find out whether I am going to her wedding. She'd be awfully cut up if I didn't go. Say the word and I'll call around at eight and pick you up."

Promptly at eight I stepped into my friend's carriage, and we rode to the church in the southwestern portion of the city, where the ceremony was to take place. We drew up before a modest but substantially-built structure, near which was gathered a crowd of ragged urchins both white and black, as if anticipating something unusual. The inside was very tastefully decorated with evergreens and flowers, and in front of the pulpit a flowery arch had been reared.

We arrived some time before the bridal party, but quite a large audience had already assembled. Instead of laughing and talking, the congregation amused itself by singing hymns. This continued until the bride and groom entered the door. As soon as one song was successfully disposed of, some ambitious brother would launch another upon the air, everybody joining in and carrying it to the very highest point of vigorous and harmonious intonation.

The hymns are peculiar combinations of melody and nonsense. When we entered the audience was singing the last stanza of a very popular song, as follows:

Oh, sisters ain't you happy,
An' don't you wan' to go
Far to leave dis world o sorrow
An' sin down here below?

This ended, there was a short pause. Then a quivering voice raised the song beginning:

De orbs ob hebben am still a shinin'—
A shinin' in de new Jerusalem;
King Jesus come in de cool ob de mornin'—
De mornin ob de new Jerusalem.

And so on. It would be impossible to describe the fervor with which these songs were sung by the singers. Another hymn runs as follows:

O, little chillun, you better git home,
O, little chillun, you better git home,
O, little chillun, you better git home,
Dere's room enough for you.

Dere's a long white robe an' a golden crown,
Dere's a long white robe an' a golden crown,
Dere's a long white robe an' a golden crown,
Awaitin' in de hebben for you.

The chorus of this singular hymn runs thus:

Room enough, room enough,
Room enough in de hebben for you;
Room enough, room enough,
Room enough for you.

This doubtless looks very much like nonsense, but the nonsense does not appear when you hear the negroes sing it. On the contrary, it is one of the most effective hymns I ever heard.

Finally, in the midst of the singing, a rustle was heard at the door, and the preacher, a very large and very black negro, who had been sitting in the pulpit with his eyes closed, stood up at the desk and raised his hands. This was the signal for silence, and in the hush that followed the bridal party swept up the aisle. The bride was an exceedingly comely negro girl, and tastefully dressed. I learned afterward that the finishing touches to her toilet had been made by her old mistress. The groom was also a fine specimen of his race.

There was some awkwardness displayed by the two attendants of the bride, but they were quickly set right by the preacher, who appeared to be on his dignity.

"De ladies will please take dar places on de lef'," said he, in a very uncompromising tone. "De gemmen will stan' on de right."

In executing this evolution one of the attendants of the groom trod on the foot of an old colored brother, who acknowledged the compliment by an "Ugh!" so sepulchral and apparently so gratuitous, that the congregation was first startled and then convulsed.

"Let dar be silence!" said the preacher! "Ef dar is any scoffers in high places, dey will now have de opportunity to retire."

Here the preacher paused, pulled out an immense red handkerchief and proceeded with much apparent unction to wipe his face. The scoffers in high places refused to retire, but it was evident from the silence that fell upon the congregation that they had concluded to scoff no more. The preacher accepted the compromise, and with the bridal party still standing and looking very uncomfortable, he launched into a lecture on matrimony. Much of this lecture was humorously incoherent, but the following will give a fair idea of the substance. As far as it goes it is literal:

"Bruderin and frens: When two young people say to deyselves dat dey have 'rived at dat disposition whar dey can bar wid one anuder's failins an' inequities, dey mos' always take a notion for ter marry. An' when a man muster up spunk enough fer ter go an' buy de license, an' de 'oman hang her head an' say she willin' to stan' up an' let de man claim her in de eyes ob Hebben and de general public, den de marriage happens."

Here an old brother remarked: "Dat's so!" and the remark seemed to encourage the speaker.

"Why does de man lub de 'oman? Caze she pooty. Why does de 'oman lub de man? Caze he strong. Why does de man an' de 'oman bof lub one anudder? Caze de Scrippers has prophesied it from de foundation. But dey don't always marry right along like you tink dey orter. De gals is mighty sly. Dey am like de terrapin. De nigger go long troo de swamp, an' he say to hisself dat he feel mighty hungry. Bimeby he see terrapin on de log in de sun wid he eyes shet. Den de nigger mouth begin fer ter water, an' he hanker arter dat terrapin.

'Cooter,' he say, 'I lub you.'

Terrapin no say nuttin.

Nigger say, 'Cooter, you looks mighty fat.'

Terrapin open he eye.

"Nigger slide up a little closer an' he say 'Cooter, you make good soup,' an' den he reach out he han' fer ter fetch him in. But de terrapin he slide wid de water, an' de nigger he stay hungry.

"De cooter's like de gals. Dey let de boys git mighty close, an' den dey git away. But here, my frens, is a man an' a 'oman what say dey am tired ob foolin' roun', an' dey has come up here dis evenin' fer ter be united in de holy banns ob wedlock. Dey hab dat true lub dat casts out fear. Dey am not ashamed ob deyselves."

Here there was a pause, and some confusion was occasioned by the discovery that a candle had been dripping upon the dress of one of the bridesmaids. The preacher lost the thread of his discourse, and when quiet was restored, the preacher remarked in a very severe tone:

"De couple will please step forward and fine dar right han's."

Then he again paused, smote his brow with his red pocket handkerchief, and proceeded:

"Ef dar is any pusson widin soun' ob my voice dat knows, or tinks he knows, or hab reason to bleebe dat dar is any objection why dese man an' 'oman should not be jined togedder at dis time an' place, let him rise up an' make it known, or f'ever after hold his peace, so help him God."

There was no objection, and the ceremony was performed in the regular orthodox style.

My mercantile friend desired me to go to his house, where the bride and her friends were to have some cake and wine provided for the occasion by her old mistress. I was told afterward that when Leticia returned and found that those who formerly owned her had been thoughtful enough to fix up an elegant collation in the kitchen, she fell into a fit of crying that astonished her guests, and then capped the climax of hysterics by hugging and kissing all the members of the family she could lay hands on. Here's luck to Leticia.

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1874.

The White Man's Party.

Many of the democratic editors of the South have thrown away the spectacles purchased for use during the Greeley campaign, and now look at the freedmen with "white men's" eyes, unobstructed as of old. It is amusing to see how completely the ardent love for the colored man which was developed in the democratic breast by the hope of a partisan victory under Greeley, has evaporated,—been dissipated by the refusal of the black man to accept his former enslaver as his most trusted friend. The democratic party—in the South at least—is making a desperate effort to get back to "ancient democratic principles," and seems to be succeeding very well in the attempt. "White Leagues" are numerous and popular, and the old slogan, "A White Man's Government," rings out cheerily, while the ancient democratic spelling of the word negro—with two g's—has been revived. Opposition to the civil rights bill is said to be the cause of this, which if true only shows how very much in error was Charles Sumner when he urged the delivery of the interests of the freedmen into the hands of their former masters, and did all he could to forward that scheme by advocating the election of Horace Greeley. His error consisted in believing democratic promises, when he of all men should have known that the democratic party makes promises before an election just as easily as it breaks them afterward.

Readables.

Thomas Libby of Portland, twenty-two years of age, having been discended by his lady-love, Miss Hattie Rolfe, on account of his intemperate habits, climbed a tree at midnight of August 10th, and while Miss Rolfe and a lady friend were undressing to go to bed fired a shot into the window without hitting either. He was afterward found in his room at the Commercial House with all the furniture piled against the door. A large vial of belladonna was found in his possession. It is presumed that he intended to kill Miss Rolfe and then himself, but he was too drunk to take the poison. He was arrested.

The Chicago Tribune prints the marital correspondence between Mr. and Mrs. Tilton, extending over a term of four years, up to within three months of Mrs. Tilton's alleged confession. These letters make over four pages of the Tribune. They are extraordinary samples of passionate affection on both sides, and contain frequent allusions to Mr. Beecher and his visits to Mrs. Tilton. They were given to the Tribune correspondent by Judge Morris, Mr. Tilton's counsel, and are undoubtedly genuine.

The case of the State of Maine vs. the European and North American Railroad has been decided in favor of the State.

The Burlington (Iowa) Hawk Eye says that the worst thing it knows about L. G. Palmer, Anti-Monopolist candidate for Congress in the First Iowa District, is that he is a brother of John M. Palmer, of Illinois. There could be but one worse thing, and that would be, to be John M. himself.

The train which left Boston for Montreal at 6 o'clock on the evening of the 12th, was wrecked near Richford, Vt., next morning, and five persons killed.

Henry Ward Beecher made his statement to the investigating committee on Thursday.

State News.

An old gentleman at the Glen House, who went to spend a fortnight with some nephews and nieces, thus defames Boston: The first day they took him up Mount Washington, and he was satisfied, though somewhat sore, and the next day they whirled him off to the Glen Ellis Falls. On the next day, when they were making up a party for the ascent of Wild Cat Mountain, including a probable visit to Tuckerman's Ravine, the old gentleman gave up, and said, solemnly, "Boys, these White Mountains are far too bustling for me, and I think to-day of going back to the quiet retirement of Boston."

The members of the committee authorized by the legislature to investigate the affairs of the National Savings Bank at Concord, of which W. W. Storrs was the defaulting treasurer, report that the trustees "were guilty of gross negligence which does not admit of apology," and furthermore say that "judging from what we have been enabled to learn Storrs was a villain of the first class. He was not simply a thief, but he was also a liar and a hypocrite." Storrs' defalcation, including interest, amounts to $64,835.62. The bank has been reimbursed $28,000 and there are claims of $18,000 yet to be paid, making the total loss about $19,000. The bank is regarded as solvent.

Two young men named Dodge and Coffin had, the former his two fore fingers and the latter his fore finger, cut, within two hours of each other, in machines they were operating at Gregg & Son's sash and blind shop, at Nashua, on the 10th.

Mr. Stephen Dow, of Tuftonborough, who did military service in the war of 1812, and is in his 81st year, mowed, spread and raked up an acre and a half on July 20th. The Wolfeborough News claims the championship for him.

George Libbey caught three of his fingers in the roller at the card shop at Nashua, on the 8th. It was found necessary to amputate one of his fingers and another will probably have to come off.

At Manchester a dog rushed into Fred. Dow's store through the front door, and ran through the store and into an empty shoe box. Not finding this very comfortable he bounded through a back window, fell about twelve feet and ran among some old boxes in the rear. Officer Longa was called and he dispatched the dog with his revolver. Naturally the cry of "mad dog" was raised, but there seems no particular reason to suppose it was anything more than the fits to which dogs are subject in hot weather.

John and Thomas Prescott have been arrested for the murder of George W. Lucy, who was reported drowned in Pawtuckaway pond on Sunday, the 9th. Instead of being drowned he was murdered.

Miss Jessie Peirce, Herbert Folts and George Demond, all of East Boston, were drowned while bathing in the lake at Centre Harbor, on the 12th. Three other young persons had a narrow escape.

The Balloon Voyage.

[Boston Advertiser.]

The good balloon Barnum, Professor W. H. Donaldson, which left the Hippodrome on Tuesday afternoon at 4:47, arrived at Wells, Maine, and landed safely at 11:39 next morning, having been up almost nineteen hours. She landed at Malden at 5:15 for supper, at Lynnfield at 6:45, at Middleton at 7:30 to land a passenger, take in ballast and get some crackers and cheese. Then the balloon started on its all-night voyage. The Merrimack was crossed at 10:20 at Salisbury Point, and the Piscataqua at Newington at 12:30. From this point the balloon began to move much more slowly, and it was two hours before the Eastern Railroad was reached, at a point about midway between Kittery and Eliot station, still advancing in its same course, east by north. By three o'clock a dense fog began to set in, and soon the balloon was so thickly coated with it that the water fell in large drops into the basket. It was decided to make a landing for breakfast, as there seemed to be a good field beneath, and this was effected by pulling in the drag-rope without any loss of gas. After securely anchoring the balloon with stones, the party went up to the house of Mr. Thomas Goodwin, whose farm they had reached, and were there hospitably entertained. Starting again at 7:15, it was found that the current, which had hitherto favored, had apparently changed to the east, toward the water. It was therefore decided to come down and wait for something to turn up. At 7:56 a landing was made, again in the town of Eliot, when it was found that little over a mile had been made since breakfast. The balloon was loaded with stones, and the whole party took a nap.

Soon after nine o'clock the fog began to clear away. The lifting power of the balloon had now visibly increased, and when it shot away at 9:45 it was with an increased amount of ballast. The same current which had carried it northeast was struck again and it proceeded towards South Berwick, still slowly. As the heat of the sun reached the balloon, the gas rapidly expanded, and in a very short time an altitude was reached higher than any attained since the first fifteen minutes after Boston, the first starting place, had been left. There was a very rapid upward motion, and the height of a mile and a half or two miles would probably have been reached had not the easterly current again been met. Mr. Donaldson was forced unwillingly to pull the valve-rope and descend into the lower current. His management proved successful, and the balloon moved northeast over the town of Wells, passing the Boston and Maine Railroad a short distance below the station. It then drifted along over a piece of woodland about four or five miles across. Its lifting power was fast diminishing and by half-past eleven very few of the rocks which had been taken in at the last stopping-place were left. Quite a crowd were seen gathered in an open space ahead and Mr. Donaldson called out to them to drag him down. They did this and it was then decided, rather than drop a passenger, to end the voyage.

Travelers' Testimony.

Thousands of travelers by land and sea have vouched for the efficacy of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a preventative of the physical disturbances which ordinarily arise from change of climate and the changes of diet, water, etc., incident to a wandering life. Upon systems toned, invigorated and regulated by this genial vegetable antidote the external causes of debility and disease seem to produce little or no effect. Forearmed with Hostetter's Bitters, the voyager may bid defiance to sea sickness and encounter the chilling fogs of the British Isles, the coast winds of the Antilles, the icy temperature of northern Alaska, or the burning heat of the tropics, with equal impunity. The effect of this admirable medicated stimulant is greatly to increase the vital energy of the system, thereby enabling it to resist and repel the exciting causes of disease.

A. F. Craig, Esq., has been appointed Coroner for Rockingham county. This makes three coroners for this county, all resident in Portsmouth. The temperance party is satisfied.

A democrat suggests that the Governor appoint Messrs. George E. Hodgdon and Frank W. Rand of Portsmouth to the vacant associate judgeships.

The Richards house and lot on Islington street was sold at auction by Col. Hackett on Thursday to Mr. Nathan Jones, for $3800 cash.

George Laskey, a Reform School graduate, and Peter Butler, who are about sixteen years old, were arrested on Thursday charged with stealing $43 from the coat of Mr. Alonzo Wise. Butler had been at work with Wise and had thus gained knowledge of the whereabouts of the money. Securing the co-operation of Laskey, he abstracted the money from the coat which Mr. Wise had taken off and laid down while at work on Leach's island.

Our P. & D. R. R. reporter elected Hon. Oliver Wyatt to the Dover mayoralty, when His Honor Mayor Horton was the person referred to. Our sister city is fortunate in having two such estimable gentlemen as Messrs. Horton and Wyatt to represent her business interests, and as our reporter holds each in pleasant remembrance he hopes neither will be chagrined at being mistaken for the other.

The latest report from Wagner, the murderer, is that he is in failing health, and softening of the brain is feared. An anxious community is fearful lest he should soften before he hangs, and thus escape the penalty of his horrible crimes.

The sportsmen having in charge the very important matter of a pigeon shoot at which the celebrated Bogardus shall display his skill, have secured about 300 birds, about 700 being necessary to render the success of the affair assured.

Young Sawyer, who had an eye blown out recently at the Sea View House, went to the Beach for his health, and being poor was working in the office for his board.

Our shrewd City Marshal has a keen eye to business and seldom errs in judgment when his suspicions are aroused. Riding through Middle street with a friend on Wednesday, he observed a suspicious looking character on the sidewalk in front of the residence of J. B. Uppam, Esq. "Judge, there's a thief," ejaculated the chief of police and stopped his horse. The stranger, who had been eyeing the Marshal, started off like a deer with the Marshal in pursuit. Mr. Frank Webber headed him off but he disappeared down the alley near Dr. Daniel H. Peirce's residence, and although closely pursued, went over the fence, across the flats to the Universalist church and was last seen propelling his way over Brimstone hill.

The crew of the "Crest" have challenged the Columbias to row a race on Wednesday or Thursday the 19th and 20th of August. They are challenged to row from the second Newcastle bridge to the Portsmouth bridge, this course affording plenty of room. The Columbias are given until the 15th to answer.

Our citizens will do well to keep their doors well fastened so that "tramps" may not be encouraged to take things that do not belong to them.

James Higgins, who was arrested by officers Johnson and Shannon here June 15 on suspicion, has been sentenced at Augusta to four years in the State prison for breaking and entering two grocery stores in Mont Vernon, Me., and stealing $190 or more, over $70 of which were recovered. Knowing that he had a thief, City Marshal Johnson corresponded with officers of various cities and finally placed his man. A citizen of Mont Vernon recognized Higgins as a man who called at his house for cider about the time of the robbery. Higgins had been in the State prison, had been released and was on his way to Boston when he "cracked" the Mont Vernon stores. He pleaded guilty when carried into court.

Schooner Abbott Devereaux, while making a berth at the Concord Railroad wharf, Wednesday evening, ran into schooner Stephen Harding, carrying away the latter's jibboom and foretopmast. The strong tide caused the collision.

M. train from Boston, and will be received by DeWitt Clinton Commandery of this city and escorted to the Rockingham House. In the evening a Levee will be held in Congress Hall. Wednesday morning the Hugh De Payens will visit the Navy Yard and afterward take steamer Major for the Shoals, where they will remain over night, returning on Thursday in season to take the afternoon train for Boston.

On Wednesday, the 26th, Trinity Commandery of Manchester and Mount Horeb Commandery of Concord will arrive in the 10 o'clock A. M. train from Manchester. DeWitt Clinton Commandery will then escort them to Pelr wharf, where they will take steamer Appledore for the Shoals. Returning to this city on the afternoon of the same day, they will quarter for the night at the Rockingham and Kearsarge Houses. On Thursday the Trinitys will take the 7:30 A. M. train for Haverhill, and the Mount Horebs the 10 o'clock train for Dover.

At Rye Beach.

"S. M. B." has an entertaining letter in the Chicago Inter-Ocean of August 10th, in which "he" moralizes, muses and sentimentalizes with true feminine devotion. Of the Farragut House he says:

The most reasonable theory for its preferment is, that it is a well-managed house, and graced with a lovely chatelaine, the landlady's daughter. Few of the lady guests can vie with this charming hostess, whom never I see without remembering Uhland's sad little ballad, and wishing her a brighter fate.

The correspondent feels perfectly at home thereabouts as will be noticed in the growing enthusiasm for Rye:

Although Rye is set down in Osgood's admirable guide-book as the most fashionable watering-place of the New England coast, it has a delightfully home-like air. Perhaps it would be better to call it popular than fashionable. There is not much dressing, even at the hops many of the ladies wearing their hats. In fact these are worn all day by the girls who still cling to crimps, for the salt air is fatal to every curl not natural. Gradually, however, the classic knot and smooth front hair is establishing itself. A few of the bravest have already affected it, and it has the charm of novelty, if nothing else.

If there is one thing more than another thing that "S. M. B." feels keenly about, it is the absence of the masculine element. Listen to the plaint:

We amuse ourselves very much as other summer parties, though we think we have rather a better time than most of them. The male element is wonderfully small. Men shun watering places; a business man let loose is a miserable creature, for he has no resources of self-amusement; or if he has they are of a misanthropic cast. Young men see enough of girls in winter society; they hail eagerly any release from the eternal round of waltzing, dress, and flirtation, which is inseparably connected with women in their minds, and their short vacations are spent in parties of their own sex whence fashion is banished and where "society" is a thing unknown. Still, now and then a party of pleasant gentlemen find their way to such haunts as these, guided doubtless by some magnetism more or less perceptible. While they stay we make the most of them, and it takes a pretty steady-headed fellow not to be flattered to death at a watering place. We have had some morning sermons, morning concerts, and an endless amount of drives and excursions. Then there are plenty of other amusements. The woods and fields teem with exquisite wild flowers, the paths are lined with berry bushes, farms grow luxuriantly by the wayside, and in every picturesque nook a girl sits sketching—for all the New England girls sketch. Fishing, too, is good for those who like it. All they have to do is sail out till three dead pines on a high hill are visible over the Sea View barn, then fish.

Two eyes for the beautiful are evidently possessed by the correspondent, who continues:

The greatest attraction at Rye is its drives, a rare charm for a beach. Within twenty rods of the ocean are delightful country roads, skirted with fragrant pine woods wherein bloom an infinite variety of beautiful wild flowers. Few inland country places have the lovely meadows and grove of this little seaside resort. There is a cultivated look about a New England landscape that is never seen in a country naturally fertile. The farms look as if the farmers had finished all their work—there is nothing incompleted in any part of them. Then the stone fences add picturesqueness to the scenery, and there are plenty of them. The people have to do something with the stones, so they make fences of them. They fence in everything; if there's a tract of ground only a rod square it will have a stone fence four feet high around it.

Strikingly curious must the little family graveyards appear, to have elicited the following:

With a singular perversity they leave their graveyards open, and as each family usually keeps its dead in a corner of the field, the descendants gradually cultivate their ancestors, and so offer no grounds of complaint to the crematonists.

In the nature of a postscript inserted before the close of the correspondence comes:

Colonel Audenreid, of General Sherman's staff, has just left. He is a tall, well-shaped man, a little bald; has handsome hazel eyes, drooping brown mustache, and dances the New York glide waltz. Being considered the handsomest man in the army, and having been the leader of the "swell" germans in Washington for three winters, it seems worth while to so minutely describe him. Moreover, he will be in the neighborhood of Chicago henceforth, as General Sherman is to move to St. Louis.

Dear General Sherman! How we shall miss him in Washington! No matter where or when you met him he always had a pleasant word to say. I have seen him give up his seat in a horse car to a negro woman. All the young people like him, and he likes them. His wife and daughters, being strict Catholics, do not allow round dances at their house, and, as nobody cares for anything else, there is no dancing at his receptions, which is a trial to the General, for he says he likes to see the boys and girls "go scootin' round." He is a warm-hearted, pleasant gentleman, wearing his high honors modestly; one who can ill by spared by any community. Another Rye visitor is Ernest Longfellow, son of the poet, and himself an artist. To a little event in his childhood we owe "the arrow and the song." He came running to his father one day. "Oh, papa!" he cried, "the arrow I shot from my bow the other day, and lost, I have found stuck in the oak tree in the field!" Mr. Longfellow sat a few moments after his boy had left him, and then wrote, on a stray sheet of paper lying by, the poem we all know so well, beginning

"I shot an arrow into the air;
It fell to earth, I know not where."

Mr. Ernest Longfellow is a slender, delicate-looking young man, whom we often meet sketching on the beach at bathing time or through the winding country roads. He is a first-rate fowler, too and can, beat any body at ten-pins.

From which it appears that young Longfellow's arrow was father to his gun.

A due appreciation of music is shown, and the correspondent is none too chary of praise, as the sequel shows:

Our most charming guests are two ladies—one at the Farragut, and one at the Sea View—who sing superbly. One of these, Mrs. Stanton, of New York, has a remarkable range of voice, and contraltos as fine as Miss Cary, and Mrs. Seguin cannot surpass the richness of her lower notes. It is to the other, however, Mrs. Hooper of Boston, that my heart goes out. Of all the charming accomplishments that a woman can possess, the ability to sing an English ballad well is the sweetest and, unhappily, the rarest. I say unhappily, but possibly the rarity of the pleasure makes it more precious. The accompaniment to a ballad must be softly, simply, and correctly played; the voice must be sweet, true, clear—not loud—and scrupulously free from any fancy touches; finally, the words must be distinctly pronounced, and their significance never sacrificed to the music. How many people in society ever hear a ballad well sung? How many ever hear one at all? for girls who pretend to any musical training are mad after pieces that tax the finest professional singers, sung in a language they can neither understand or pronounce, and shockingly accompanied. I wish that everybody who is fond of ballad-singing—fond of listening to sweet words set to still sweeter music—could hear Mrs. Hooper sing "Five O'clock in the morning," "The Sweetest Spot to Me on Earth is Home, Sweet Home," "So Must my Darling Be," "'Tis but a Little Faded Flower," and another, whose name I forget, telling of a storm at sea and the fisherman's wife praying for her husband's safety. Chiming with the low refrain of the woman's prayer, "Miserere Domine," and as if to make it solemnly real, comes the roar of the waves from the beach beating against the rocks. And when at last morning breaks over a peaceful sea, and the white dawlight shines on the sails of the homebound boat, "Laus tibi Domine!" rolls out in a burst of triumphant melody, and I think there are tears in many of the listeners' eyes.

Besides these ladies are others who sing very pleasantly, and occasionally, in the morning, they gather at Weld Hall to practice, whither we go and listen delightedly.

The correspondent refers in a very complimentary way to Dr. Haskett Derby's representation of Mrs. Jarley's wax works, the proceeds of which were donated to Mr. Daniel A. Drown, the blind poet—and says it is suggested that the receipts from the next entertainment be applied to the relief of young Sawyer, the victim of the recent accident. In closing the chatty correspondent relates the following, which should cause holders of Eastern Railroad stock to shed tears:

Speaking of accidents reminds me of a character in the neighborhood. It is a farmer, whose legs were broken by an accident on a well-known New England road. A year or two ago he instituted suit against the company for damages. There he was, a man whose bread was dependent on his daily labor, a hopeless cripple; both legs broken, and doomed to crutches for life, he hobbled into the court room and plead, himself—a miserable, maimed wreck. Well, the company gave him $10,000.

I met that man the other afternoon chasing a refractory cow, and there was never a crutch to be seen, and I think it would please the directors of the railroad to see him climb a stone fence. If his case should be cited as a precedent in similar suits, it would probably militate against the payment of damages.

A Syrian Toilet.

(Syrian Home Life.)

We called yesterday on the daughter of a Mohammedan living in this city (Tripoli.) Though the girl had been married several days, she had never been seen by her husband. He only had gone to the mosque when the ceremony was performed, she taking no part in it. After the ceremony, the bride usually stays at her father's house nine days, during which time she sits in state, decked in her finest dress and jewels, receiving calls from her friends. Then her jo[illegible] is at an end. She must go to to her husband, take off her fine clothes, and become a perfect slave, subject to the will of her cruel master. The parents of this bride were very poor. Her mother was dressed in little better than rags, and was at the tagnua washing clothes. All the women of the bride's company had their hair plaited full of gold coins; these were heirlooms, and so greatly treasured that a woman would almost starve sooner than part with one. The present given by the family to the bride was an elegant pale blue brocade silk dress, and a black silk, embroidered with gold. The former cost $150. The bridegroom's presents were a sumptuous lilac silk, heavily embroidered with gold; earrings of pearl and gold; bracelets as wide as a finger. During the call she wore the bridegroom's presents. The other presents were hung spread out on the wall.

We stopped at a house below, according to custom, and sent word that we were coming. The bride returned answer that she would be most happy to salute us. After waiting about twenty minutes we went up stairs, for she lived on the second floor. She had not quite finished her toilet, and she sat on the floor before a large mirror, surrounded by her finery. As we entered she arose and saluted us, and then returned composedly to her dressing. Of all the strange and ghastly sights her face was the most wonderful, as may well be imagined from the way in which it was prepared.

First, hot wax was spread over the whole face, which, when cool, was peeled off. This was done to remove all the hair from the face. Then whiting was rubbed on till the skin looked like marble. Her eyebrows were painted jet black, her lips and a large red spot on each cheek painted a brilliant red. On these red spots on her forehead and at the corners of her mouth gilt flowers were pasted. Then over the whole powdered sugar had been snapped, which made it sparkle as with "diamond dust." She wore pearl earrings, and around her neck were a string of large amber beads, three strings of roped pearls, and a curious neck-lace which we were privately told was borrowed for the occasion. It was made of gold twenty-five dollar pieces, overlapping each other like scales. The usual head-dress was covered with real and artificial flowers. The finishing touch was put on in the shape of a piece of black wax, heated over the camoon till very hot, made round and flat, and then stuck between the eyes.

—A correspondent of the Worcester Press says that St. Paul's Church in that city is an object of local pride and admiration, not only in the eyes of God, but in the eyes of the community at Worcester. That "not only but" is exquisite.

Grand "Hops."

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH of the City of Portsmouth call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the City to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER 10.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 19. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 20. No person shall use or occupy any building in the compact part of the city for a slaughter-house, or for trying tallow, or for currying leather, or for the deposit of green pelts or skins, unless under such restrictions and regulations as the health officers may impose.

SEC. 22. Any person or persons who shall violate any rule or regulation, or commit any act forbidden in any section of this ordinance, to which no special penalty is annexed, shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty dollars, to be recovered by complaint before the police court of this city.

SEC. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice to the Health Officers.

SEC. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect, forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the Health Officers in the name of the city. m35 d3m

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

LAST CHANCE

FOR

An Easy Fortune!

A postponement of the Fifth Concert of the Public Library of Kentucky has been so generally anticipated, and is so manifestly in the interest of all concerned, that it must meet the approval of all. The day is now absolutely fixed and there will be no vitiation from the programme now announced. A sufficient number of tickets have been sold to have enabled us to have had a large drawing on the 31st July, but a short postponement was considered preferable to a partial drawing. Let it be borne in mind that

THE FIFTH GIFT CONCERT

IS THE LAST WHICH WILL EVER BE GIVEN UNDER THIS CHARTER AND BY THE PRESENT MANAGEMENT.

That it will positively and unequivocally take place as announced on

MONDAY, 30TH NOVEMBER, 1874,

that the music will be the best the country affords, and that

20,000 Cash Gifts

Ancient Libraries.

[Edinburgh Review.]

The question as to the number of books contained in the ancient collections has been much discussed, but with results very little satisfactory. The statements as to the number of volumes in the Ptolemæan Library at Alexandria are very various, ranging from 100,000, at which it is rated by Eusebius, to 700,000, at which it is fixed by Aulus Gellius. Seneca gives the intermediate number, 400,000. The library of Attalus, king of Pergamus, is said by Plutarch to have contained 200,000 volumes. All these statements, however, are of a date long posterior to the time which they regard. Of the libraries of Greece and Rome, hardly anything in the way of contemporary enumeration is preserved. For the former, indeed, there is absolutely nothing on which to found a judgment. Of the latter there are but two—both private collections—the number of which is recorded; the first, that of Tyrannion—a contemporary of Cicero, and mentioned by him in one of his book-hunting letters to his brother Quintius—which, on the perhaps questionable authority of Suidas, is said to have consisted of 30,000 volumes; the other, that of Serenus Sammonicus, already referred to, of 62,000.

The first impression produced by these statements as to the large number of volumes in the ancient libraries will be of incredility, founded partly on the insufficiency of the evidence, partly on the notions which prevail regarding the comparative scarcity of books in ancient times. And unquestionably, as to the first objection, no one who considers how undeserving of implicit belief the most positive allegations as to the extent of the libraries of our own day have proved, when tested by actual enumeration, could think of accepting as conclusive evidence that the Alexandrian Library contained 700,000 volumes, the unsupported assertion of a single foreigner, writing long after the period to which he refers. But in reference to the second ground of incredulity, so much misconception has prevailed, that we think it necessary to say a few words in explanation.

The learned reader need not be reminded of the wide difference between the ancient "volumen" or roll, and the "volume" of the modern book-trade, and how much smaller the amount of literary matter which the former may represent. Any single "book" or "part" of a treatise would anciently have been called "volumen," and would reckon as such in the enumeration of a collection of books. The "Iliad" of Homer, which in a modern library may form but a single volume, would have counted as twenty-four "volumina" at Alexandria. We read of authors leaving behind them works reckoned not by volumes or tens of volumes, but by hundreds. The works of Epicurus, as enumerated with their titles by Diogenes Laertius, amount to 300 volumes. Varro reckons his own works at no less a sum than 490 volumes; and the works of Chrysippus, Epicurus' well-known rival, are said to have reached the incredible total of more than 700 volumes! It is curious—we dare not say significant—that of the many works of these singularly prolific writers hardly anything has come down to our day, with the exception of Varro's treatise "De Re Rustica" and the Herculanean fragments of Epicurus: so that we are unable to speak from positive knowledge of the extent of their so-called "volumina." But their number itself suggests the inference that they must have been very short; and the actual specimens of "volumina" discovered at Herculaneum fully justify the conclusion. Hence it will at once be understood that whereas a single modern volume might easily contain ten, or even more, ancient "volumina," the very largest assemblage of "volumina" assigned as the total of the greatest of the ancient collections would fall far short, in its real literary contents, of the second-rate, or even third-rate, collections of the present day.

English in Foreign Dress.

An English periodical has an amusing article on "Exotic English," from which we select:

Fifty years ago, "Here they spike the English!" was an announcement to be seen in many a Parisian shop-window. How they did "spike" it may be guessed from the manner in which they wrote it, sundry specimens of the Gallic-English current in Paris in 1822 being preserved in the pages of the Mirror of that year. M. Oliver, the Houdin of the day, promised, in his bills, to perform "an infinity of the Ledgerdemains worthy to excite the curiosity of spectators;" such as "the cut and burnt handkerchiefs who shall take up their primitive forms, the watch thrown up et nailed against the wall by a pistol-shot, the enchanted glass wine, the handsome Elisina in her trunk," and some "low automatons who will dance up on a rope and sail do the most difficult tricks;" concluding with "a Pantasmagory disposed in a manner as not to frighten the ladies." At a restaurant in the Palais Royal, "Macaroni not baked sooner ready" was to be obtained; and a hair-dresser in the Rue St. Honore sought to attract the wandering Briton by proclaiming: "Here to cut off hare in English fashion." The proprietor of the Montesquien Baths issued a card notifying all it might concern: "As for the brothes, liquid or any breakfast, and, in one word, all other things relative to the service of the bathes, the Persons will be so good as to direct themselves to the servant bathers, who will satisfy them with the greatest attention. The public is invited not to search to displace the suckets and swan necks, in order to forbear the accidents which may result of is, in not calling the servant bathers to his aid. The servant bathers, in consequence of having no wages, desire the bathers do not forget them." The last clause is plain English enough.

The following story is told in one of the books issued abroad for the use of students in English:

"A lady, which was to dine, chid to her servant that she had not used butter enough. The girl, for the excuse him selves, was bring a little cat on her hand, and told that she came to take him in the crime, finishing to eat the two pounds from butter who remain. The lady took immediately, the cat was put into the balances, it had not weighed theat one an half pound."

A native petitioner for a place in India promised, if his petition were granted, that he and his would cease to pray to the humble Almighty to shower his blessings upon their benefactor's head; and a Punjab school-master proves how admirably he was qualified for teaching the rising generation the language of their rulers, by inditing the following letter to an English gentleman:

"Hon. Sir—I am most anxious to hear you are sick. I pray to God to see you soon at R—— in a state of triumph. The climate is very good and proves unhealthy. No deputy commissioner complains ever for want of climate. If you also come here I think it will agree with your state. A information expectant or reversionary respecting your recovery state is expected, and I shall be thankful to you."

These blunders sound odd indeed; but we doubt not that the people of countries where the English language is not spoken derive quite as much amusement from observing the stumbling efforts of English and Americans to master their forms of expression.

Toombs at the White House.

[Washington cor. Cincinnati Commercial.]

The visit of Mr. Toombs to the President has naturally attracted much attention, and in conversation with some friends we were told how it happened. Mr. Toombs was on a visit to his intimate friend, Augustus Perry, Esq., a merchant of considerable prominence. The morning after the arrival of his guest, Mr. Perry drove with him to see their mutual friend, William Corcoran, Esq. In passing the White House, Perry jocosely remarked:

"Toombs, you had better go in and see Grant."

"Oh, no; I am not a citizen of this country," retorted the fiery Southern General.

Nothing more was said, and they drove around the beautiful Lafayette Square, alive with the chattering of children and chirping of birds, and filled with the fragrance from the hearts of a hundred blossoms, past it all to the quaint, irregular pile of bricks forming the picturesque home of Corcoran, the banker. There they were cordially received, and spent several hours in pleasant chat with the venerable host, who can be the most agreeable and then again the curtest man in Washington. On leaving, the driver, who wished to avoid the cobble stones covering the roadway of H, from Eighteenth street to Vermont avenue, turned his horses and again drove down the avenue. As they were nearing the President's, Toombs said:

"Perry, if I were to go to a foreign country, I'd surely, if practicable, pay my respects to the potentate of that country."

"Why not, then, go see your President?"

The order was given, and the horses were soon reined in front of the Executive Mansion. Alighting, they went in—up the long flight of steps and into the room where so much weary, heart-wearying, soul-killing, patient waiting is done—where they found the usual crowd, some on idle business, some on matters pertaining to life and death. There was a sad-faced woman come there for the pardon of her son, convicted of forgery and sent to the Albany penitentiary—with her is the grandfather of the erring man, who strives in every way known to his rough nature to soothe the distressed mother. The cards of Mr. Perry and General Toombs are taken in, but the fear expressed that his Excellency could see no one till after one o'clock. Scarcely a moment had elapsed when the messenger returned and called:

"The President will see General Toombs and Mr. Perry."

On entering the room, General Grant rose to receive them, and General Toombs said:

"I am not a citizen of this country, General Grant, but being in town, I have called to pay my respects to you as the ruler of this nation."

"Oh, never mind about that, General Toombs," answered Grant, "sit down. I am glad to see you at last, for I hunted very unsuccessfully after you during the war."

The interview lasted nearly two hours, and was characterized by the greatest jollity imaginable. At one time the conversation turned on cotton, and Gen. Toombs was amazed to find that the President knew almost as much on that subject as he did. Gen. Grant has been uniformly kind to all Southern people who have sought favors at his hands, and among the people of that country he has many warm, staunch friends.

Daily Chronicle.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 15, 1874.

The "Mutual Friend."

The statement of Mr. Francis D. Moulton in the Beecher case is almost wholly devoid of interest and empty of results, except that it may have decided Mr. Beecher to consider Mr. Moulton an ally of Theodore Tilton. The reasons for Mr. Moulton's sudden change of base may be sufficient to justify his silence, but the defiant course taken by Mr. Beecher must force him to make his knowledge public in self-defence ere long. Messrs. Beecher and Tilton had both requested Mr. Moulton to speak fully in the matter and he declines to testify, but furnishes copies of the desired letters in his possession. After reading his examination one can hardly refrain from feeling that he is desirous of keeping the originals for the courts and is afraid that they will be destroyed in case the committee obtain them, in which contingency Mr. Tilton's charges might not be susceptible of proof. Either Mr. Moulton is very shrewd or he is sincere in desiring to keep aloof from the controversy.

Terrible Tragedy at Sea.

The Journal Officiel of Paris has received an account of a terrible occurrence at sea, the particulars of which are as follows:

On the 8th of June, the Italian vessel Napoleon Camarero sailed from Macao, with a crew of 40 men, 663 coolies for Callao, and 8,000 packets of fireworks. After a lapse of two days, the interpreter discovered a plot among the emigrants to seize on the ship. The captain immediately ordered one-half of them to be confined in the hold, but the next day those who remained on deck armed themselves with knives, belaying-pins, pieces of wood, in short, anything they could lay their hands on, and attacked the crew, who defended themselves with muskets and revolvers. The coolies then massed themselves on the forecastle and set fire to the vessel, hoping that the crew would set to work at the pumps to extinguish the flames. During that time they had also freed their comrades, and murdered the few sailors they could get hold of. The captain, seeing what they were doing, ordered the boats to be lowered, and left the ship with the remainder of his men. Some sailors who remained on board with the doctor, the magazine man and the interpreter, were unable to prevent the flames from reaching the fireworks, and the ship blew up, scattering the fragments of the mutineers in every direction, under the very eyes of the escaped crew.

Readables.

Mr. Beecher's statement as published contains 40,000 words.

The Shreveport (La.) Times, an organ of the White Leagues, admits that there has been some needless killing of negroes, but adds, significantly, "there has been some red-handed work done in this parish that was necessary, but it was evidently done by cool, determined and just men, who knew just how far to go, and we doubt not, if more of the same kind of work is necessary, it will be done." It is for precisely this "red-handed work" that the White Leagues have been organized, and this frank avowal of the fact by an organ of the movement establishes this point beyond a doubt.

Wolves are so thick in some portions of Michigan that they come out of the woods and stare at people passing by with as much impudence as a sewing machine or lightning rod agent.

The Mobile Register discourses concerning the civil rights bill in a manner to recall to memory the happy days when the Southern press was engaged in the noble work of firing the Southern heart, preparatory to the democratic attempt to knock down the old American idol, Union, and set up in its place a new one, Slavery. It talks fiercely about meeting the bill with cold steel, and promises "the first taste of the point" to "white renegades." Accounts of negro attacks upon bodies of white men, in which the aggressors are repulsed with great slaughter while none of the whites are hurt, should come next in order, judging from the course of events in the past.

The Chicago Tribune says: The young woman or married woman who finds herself besieged by a Plato, especially a white-cravated one, had better betake herself to the wash tub or some other form of labor not conducive to sentiment if she wishes to be safe.

"It may be well," remarks the Norwich Bulletin, "for those who take an interest in such things to watch the course of General Butler in the approaching campaign in Massachusetts. Badly as his tactics have bothered some people heretofore, his new and unaccustomed style, this year, is more perplexing. In a lesser degree, he is earning a reputation which has heretofore distinguished only the President, as the 'silent man.' But Butler's silence is something like the owl's. 'You may be sure he keeps up a heap of thinking.'"

The various Government bureaus are generally adopting a machine which prints all letters instead of writing them, and which can print, it is claimed, much faster than a person can write.

A woman employed in the mill at Lowell, has been in the habit of tying her two children to their beds, in order to keep them from associating with the children who are wicked.

The coinage of money at the mint just now is at a standstill, the time for rendering an annual settlement of the stock on hand having been changed from the end of the calendar year to that of the fiscal.

The early potato crop in the southern part of Harrison County, Ind., is almost an entire failure. This will be hard upon the farmers residing on the border, as they are principally dependent upon that crop for their incomes.

In San Francisco recently, at the funeral of a girl thirteen years old, the pall-bearers were all girls of her age. They were dressed in white, each holding a white band which was attached to the hearse, and they walked at the sides and rear of that vehicle.

On Sunday a hole was discovered in the dam of Scotch Pond, near the manufacturing village of Lee, Mass. The prompt drawing off the water saved a disaster which would have been ten fold worse than the one at Middlefield, as the pond is 200 feet above the village.

Tomatoes were first used in this country as an edible in the year 1819, but they did not come into general use until more than twenty years after that date.

A. T. Stewart has gone to Europe for the sixteenth time and probably the last, as he is now seventy-one years of age.

"Tilton first had the story from one of his children," says Woodhull.

Having eaten nothing for five days a Brooklyn lady died of cholera.

The Connecticut Legislature has voted down a bill to tax church property.

A black whale, or something very like one, has been captured at Rockaway Beach, New York.

The foreign trade of Boston has declined $8,988,959 thus far this year, as compared with last year.

All the available force is to be put at work on the Portland and Ogdensburgh Railroad at the White Mountain Notch, between Bemis' and Fabyan's, and it is hoped that this section of the road will be completed by May of next year. This part of road is the most difficult of the whole line, and when it is finished only a few miles will remain to be built, over a perfectly easy grade, to connect with the Boston, Concord and Montreal road, and give the line a western connection to within a few miles of the Vermont division.

It is announced on good authority—Fernando Wood, no less—that President Grant is to be renominated for a third term by the republicans.

Springfield, Ill., is to be blest on the 26th inst. with the presence of two democratic conventions, viz.: the straight Bourbon (inflation) and the liberal (hard money),—each claiming to be the only true exponent of democratic principles.

Mr. Dan Voorhees, the Tall Sycamore of the Wabash and a leader of the Indiana democracy, demands that the five-twenties be paid in greenbacks. The democratic party seems to have about as many financial policies as it has members.

State News.

A heifer belonging to John Critchett of Barrington, got away from some parties who were leading her recently, and was found after she had been gone sixteen days, fastened in some bushes. She had a ring in her nose, to which a rope was attached, and the knot in the end got caught between two small trees. Fortunately it was near a brook, else she must have perished from thirst.

The Concord Monitor says of Hon. Ellery A. Hibbard: He has not proved an eminent judge, being too hesitating in his decisions for a ready trial justice. Dispensing justice is not his forte.

John Goddell, while walking on the track of the Cheshire Railroad, near Walpole, Wednesday, was struck by a train and severely injured.

Jas. Benjamin Henry of Manchester pleaded guilty to the charge of marrying two Connecticut women within a year, and was held in $800 to appear before the Supreme Court.

It is reported that a Massachusetts company has bought the Sewall's Falls water power, where it is proposed to establish a car factory. As the river is so high, the dam will not be built until next year.

The New Hampshire State Grange meets at Mirror Hall in Manchester, September 8, at 11 A. M., for the election of officers and to act upon the constitutional amendments of the National Grange.

On the 10th, the house of Mr. Calvin Clement, not far from the middle of the town, in Merrimack, was entered and robbed of $75 in money and a watch. Fifty dollars in money was stolen from a drawer and the balance from Mr. Clement's clothes and other places. Mr. Clement was working at haying not far from in sight of the house, and Mrs. Clement was out picking berries. It is thought the theft was committed by some one who was acquainted with the premises.

A severe storm caused great damage at the mountains, Thursday. The roads between Littleton, and the Profile, Fabyan, Twin Mountain and Crawford Houses were literally washed away, and many bridges are gone. The railroad near the Wing road junction is badly washed out. The stages which left the Profile House at eight o'clock found a clear road as far as Franconia. Soon after evidences of a sudden rise in the mountain streams became evident. Brooks which before were trickling rills had become foaming torrents, and growing rapidly larger. Soon a bridge was found to be submerged to the depth of three feet. After some hesitation a successful attempt was made, and both of the six-horse stages were driven safely across. For a few hundred rods the road was again safe, but at a point near where the terrible stage coach accident of last year occurred, at the foot of a hill, about two miles from Bethlehem, it was found that the road had become the bed of a torrent which was hurling huge boulders down like cricket balls and opening a deep chasm which not only prevented further progress by the stage, but made it necessary for the passengers to take to the fields and the hillside. The roads have been repaired and stages are once more running.

A Scandal Seventy Years Ago.

About seventy years ago there lived in this country a very great man. His name was Alexander Hamilton. He had been a distinguished officer of the revolution, and a trusted friend and counselor of the illustrious Washington. On the organization of the Government, Hamilton became a leader of a great political party, and was appointed the first Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. He was the ablest man who ever filled that office. As a party leader at a time of fierce political excitements, Mr. Hamilton was the shining mark of many bitter assaults. His own party was not slow or moderate in its counter attacks. Mr. Jefferson was the target of the Federal or Hamiltonian diatribes. His private life, too, was overhauled, and his every act distorted into something criminal or immoral. There were no limits in this sort of abuse on both sides. At last the Jeffersonians lighted upon a precious piece of scandal against Mr. Hamilton, which did not even need coloring of exaggeration to render it excessively distasteful to his friends and damaging to his reputation.

The story ran thus: A buxom and attractive woman had visited the young and susceptible Secretary of the Treasury, and under pretext of seeking some favor of him, had captivated and seduced him from the paths of duty and morality. An amour of a somewhat extended and complicated character sprung out of the affair, which had gone far enough, however, to expose the character of the woman as an adventuress and blackmailer of the most avaricious nature. Finally a convenient husband was introduced into the drama, an illiterate and vulgar fellow, who attempted the panel game on the great Secretary. Nothing but an office in the Treasury or $60,000 in cash would solace the wounds of his honor and connubial felicity which were inflicted by Hamilton.

The great man resisted and defied the arts and importunities of both the woman and her suppositious husband. Thereupon they sold their valuable scandal to the enemies of Mr. Hamilton, who were not slow in laying the whole affair before the world. The friends of Hamilton denied the story at first, but were quickly silenced by the amazing courage and honesty of his answer.

Freely admitting that he had strayed from the path of duty, and had grievously sinned as father and husband under the wiles and seducing arts of a voluptuous woman, he indignantly repelled all aspersions on his honor as a public official and gentleman. For his sin, of which he had deeply repented, he asked the indulgence of his fellow-citizens, but if he had permitted himself to be misled by any arts or influence to a betrayal of the high trust confided to him, he should feel that he had no right to ask their forgiveness or indulgence.

It is a curious fact in our political and social history that Mr. Hamilton's manly answer completely disarmed the public censure, and he continued until his unhappy death the idol of his party, and the most admired and respected political chieftain of the era.

—As a one-sided biographer or historian, Parton probably has not his equal in the world.

Travelers' Testimony.

Thousands of travelers by land and sea have vouched for the efficacy of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a preventative of the physical disturbances which ordinarily arise from change of climate and the changes of diet, water, etc., incident to a wandering life. Upon system so tuned, invigorated and regulated by this genial vegetable antidote the external causes of debility and disease seem to produce little or no effect. Forearmed with Hostetter's Bitters, the voyager may bid defiance to sea sickness and encounter the chilling fogs of the British Isles, the coast winds of the Antilles, the icy temperature of northern Alaska, or the burning heat of the tropics, with equal impunity. The effect of this admirable medicated stimulant is greatly to increase the vital energy of the system, thereby enabling it to resist and repel the exciting causes of disease.

Local Matters.

City Council.

In the Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, leave was granted to encumber Cabot street.

The use of the State street ward room was granted to the selectmen of ward six.

The city solicitor returned George H. Ham's bill for damages for being injured at the Jones crossing on Islington street, with a note from Manager Hatch of the Eastern Railroad declining to pay the bill.

The committee on Fire Department reported that the cost of a bell, hangings and belfry at the Cabot street school house would be from $800 to $900—$600 for the belfry, $170 for a 500 lb. bell and the balance for the hangings.

The resignation of E. A. Tilton, Major Commanding Independent Battalion, was accepted.

The committee on Fire Department was authorized to bring the water to the salt water reservoir on Wentworth street from the pond by a metallic pipe.

The chairman of the committee on Streets was authorized to advertise for proposals for laying a common sewer in Hanover street between Bridge and Parker streets.

Come On, You!

A. F. Craig, Esq., wishes it distinctly understood that if he has been appointed Coroner for this county he is not aware of it, and if appointed would not accept it or any other office from democratic or republican hands. The democratic editor who originated the report is requested to call at this office and arrange for an immediate duel.

We don't propose to fight the democratic deceiver ourself, but have enlisted a new fighting editor who will take our place. He is six feet ten inches high, measures three feet seven inches across the small of the back, wears No. 18 boots studded with hob nails, and is always accompanied in his walks by a club, bowie knife, revolver, bull-dog and double-barrelled gun. The initial of his front name is Nathaniel, and his last engagement before coming here was as combative editor of a Texas newspaper; but after he had depopulated two counties in the strict line of his duty, one of the other editors made a disparaging remark one morning, upon which he immediately abolished the whole editorial staff, smashed the office and threw it out of the window, and then came North. We always treat him with marked courtesy, and even the devil calls him "mister" in the most respectful manner. He is not in this morning, having gone to the suburbs to secure a three-acre lot for a graveyard; but will attend to any arrangements made during his absence, as soon as he returns.

We are not certain, however, even now, that Mr. Craig's appointment has not been made, as we know that a petition bearing the names of many influential men, republicans and democrats, asking the appointment, was sent to Concord some time ago. Mr. Craig's acceptance of the appointment is quite another matter.

Beer vs. Education.

Messrs Editors: You seem to think it wrong for the democrats to give the ballot to beer-producing aliens who have not been in the State long enough to gain a residence; but I fail to see anything reprehensible in it, and consider the democrats rather entitled to commendation for their efforts at keeping the vote of the State up to its present total. As the democratic legislature decided that an American-born citizen could not gain a residence in this State if he resided in it for the purpose of gaining an education,—being impelled to this action by the natural antagonism existing between enlightment and partisan democracy,—something had to be done to balance the business; and what more proper than to decide that aliens who enter the State to work in breweries should be allowed to vote right off, whether they have been in the State long enough or not, especially when we consider that they will vote the democratic ticket? Beer and learning are very different things; every brewery workman will vote aright, while nine out of ten collegians will vote the republican ticket,—or would have so voted, if they had not been disfranchised. Hence you will readily see that taking the right to vote from educated Americans who think for themselves, necessitated the giving of the franchise to at least an equal number of ignorant aliens who vote as they are ordered to; and any objection to this must be founded on hypercritical squeamishness. BOOKS.

A Found Sheep.

A fat specimen of mutton was observed quietly walking down Congress street a day or two since, "saying nothing to nobody," and paying strict attention to her own business. A procession of one Cochin China hen marching by could hardly have attracted more distinguished consideration. Even the gamins neglected to try their hands at the target so temptingly offered, and Mrs. Sheep, calmly and thoughtfully wended her way eastward "most content and cheerful," winning the admiration of all by her modest demeanor. She had nearly weathered the reservoir on Market Square and seemed safe from interruption, when some of the large sized children who infest the steps of the North Church, seeing an opportunity to obtain a quantity of soup material, broke for the game and soon had the ferocious beast securely bound and thrown down. Then they carted her away to unknown realms, where it is feared nothing but bone and tallow can be found if the owner fails to put in a speedy appearance.

Laconics.

Mrs. Jane L. Patterson, wife of the former pastor of the Universalist Church here, is to occupy that pulpit Sunday forenoon. The church will be closed on the two following Sundays.

E. F. Sise & Co. received a telegram on Friday announcing the death of Capt. James Robertson, whose wife was visiting here. Capt. Robertson died of congestion of the brain at New Orleans.

It is said the sum devoted for the improvement of Richards Avenue by Mrs. Cutts, five years ago, amounts to nearly $15,000.

Messrs. D. Webster Barnabee of this city and John D. Frost of Eliot have been reinstated as Writers in the Construction department at the navy yard.

Major Gen. Hancock and staff, and Quartermaster Ingalls were in town, Friday, and left for Rye Beach. They are to inspect the fortifications in this harbor.

The store of Mr. George Stott, corner of Hanover and Bridge streets, was entered Wednesday evening, and $20 worth of goods were stolen. The thief was evidently familiar with the premises.

George Laskey and Peter Butler plead guilty on Friday to stealing $9.27 from Mr. Alonzo Wise and were held in the sum of $500 to appear at the October court.

Lewis L. DeRochemont has been awarded the contract for hay for the navy yard the current year.

Ship Sea Serpent, 974 tons, which arrived at Hamburg, July 29, has been sold and gone under the Norwegian flag. She was built in this city in 1850, by the late George Raynes, for Grinnell, Minturn & Co., of New York.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 114.

By Uncle Joseph.

One hundred years ago there were 150 incorporated towns in New Hampshire, and a population of 82,000; and then there was not a post office in the province. There was one newspaper, the NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, in Portsmouth. Letters were few and those were sent by private conveyance. With the abundant mail facilities now, it seems almost incredible that at that period there was a total absence of such advantages. In the time of the Revolutionary war, the Provincial Assembly of the Province was called the Provincial Congress. At a session held in Exeter in May, 1775, a committee on rules consisted of the president, Hon. Matthew Thornton of Londonderry, Rev. S. Stearns of Epping, Rev. S. Webster of Temple, Col. Nathaniel Folsom of Exeter, John Wheelock of Hanover, and T. Sparhawk of Parkerfield, now Nelson. It was voted that William Whipple and Samuel Cutts of Portsmouth be added to this committee, and that the committee "report what they think necessary to be done about establishing a post office." This was May 17. This was a strong committee, not only in numbers but in character and talent. It is probable the report was in favor of establishing a post office, for the next day, May 18, 1775, it was "voted that a post office shall be established at Portsmouth and that Samuel Penhallow, Esq., shall be post master, and that he, together with the members from Portsmouth, shall be a committee to agree with a post rider or riders."

Two of the members from Portsmouth have been named. The others were Capt. Wm. Pearson, Capt. Pierce Long and Samuel Sherburne. This was 99 years ago last May. What the post rider or riders did there is no record. Probably they went away to some other town once a week or once in two weeks with the mail. It appears that this was particularly to Exeter, for very soon a post office was established there and in the same month of May, by the Massachusetts Provincial Congress, the route of the post rider from Cambridge to Haverhill being extended to Exeter to meet the post rider from Portsmouth. Portsmouth, then, had the first post office, Exeter the second. It was the day of small things, but a beginning was made. It has become a great and valuable matter.

—A Detroit father keeps his boy in nights by varnishing a chair and sitting him down. It is a novel plan, but awfully tough on the trousers.

—Bayard Taylor, writing from Aberdeen, Scotland, speaks thus of the scene of Shakspeare's famous tragedy: So much of the old moorlands have been reclaimed that Macbeth's witches would now have some difficulty in finding a place to meet. From the Grampians to the Sidlaw hills the eye detects no waste or ragged points; all is cultivated to the highest pitch of smoothness. Passing Birnam on the left and Dunsinane on the right, you come to Glamis, and the castle, surrounded by deep rich groves, hath truly a pleasant seat.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within two feet of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 18. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the course of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding such other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL Arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America, or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and trustworthy practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend my fellow inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND RUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, so easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up Invigorating and Vitalizing the system. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Waltzing at Put-in-Bay.

The Cincinnati Times says: "People may say that a waltz is a waltz, but it is a mistake, as much as to say that a dog is a dog; for there are dogs and dogs, and there are waltzes and waltzes. With one person it is the poetry of motion; with another it is about as awkward a performance as putting yourself upon a level and going through the motion of going up stairs would be. A Kentucky girl is a natural waltzer, and she does it with a charming chic and abandon. An Ohio girl's waltzing is easy, graceful, and "melodious." If she happens to come from Cincinnati and across the Rhine, she swings dreamily round and round in the endless "Dutch waltz." If she comes from Chicago, she throws her hair back, jumps up and cracks her heels together, and carries off her astonished partner as though a simoon had struck him, and knocks over all intervening obstacles in her mad career around and round. If she is from Indiana, she creeps closely and timidly up to her partner, as though she would like to get into his vest pocket, and melt away with ecstacy as the witching strains of the "Blue Danube" sweep through the hall. If she is from Missouri, she crooks her body in the middle like a door hinge, takes her partner by the shoulders, and makes him miserable in trying to hop around her without treading on her No. 9 shoes. If she comes from Michigan, she astonishes her partner by now and then working in a touch of the double-shuffle, or a bit of the pigeon wing, with the waltz step; and if she comes from Arkansas, she throws both arms around his neck, rolls up her eyes, as she floats away, and is heard to murmur: "Oh, hug me, John!"

A Varied Diet For Fowls.

[Poultry World.]

There are no animals more omnivorous than fowls; fish, flesh, herbs and grains being devoured by them with equal relish. We say equal, for though they commonly pounce upon meat with greater avidity than upon grain, this is generally because it affords a rarity, and a flock kept for a while almost entirely upon animal food will show the same great greed for a few handfuls of corn.

Now, those animals accustomed to use a varied diet should not be confined to an unvarying one. There are, indeed, some species which are naturally limited to one or a few kinds of food. Thus, cattle do well enough, although kept month after month on grass alone, and a tiger will thrive with nothing but lean meat upon his bill of fare. But with other animals, as with the human race, for instance, the case is different, for no person can maintain the highest efficiency when confined to one article of food. No matter how fond we may be of a particular dish, we lose relish for it when allowed nothing else for a number of consecutive meals, and the intense craving for variety indicates as its source something more than mere appetite. It gives evidence of real necessities of the system which are consequently varying with the changing circumstances of weather, employment and other conditions.

The fondness for variety shown by fowls is as significant of real needs as we have found it to be in ourselves. In purveying for them, a judicious variety, selected from the three general divisions,—fresh vegetables, grain and animal food,—is at all seasons absolutely necessary for young and old, in order to make them perfectly thrifty. True, they will not starve on hard corn and water,—neither will they pay a profit so kept.

Gen. Von Moltke.

A stranger who arrived at Ragatz to enjoy its healthful springs, was heard at the depot to enquire for a vehicle to bring him to some hotel. He was a gentleman advanced in years, plainly clad—in fact, his clothes discovered an unusual simplicity. On his arm he bore a traveling gown, and his baggage was by no means very extensive. He had been referred to the Ragatz hotel, but, being somewhat absent minded, he mounted the omnibus of the Springs hotel, at which place it left him. The porter scrutinized him closely, assigning him rooms on the third story. Soon a waiter knocked and presented the hotel register, in which the old gentleman signed his name returning him the book. The waiter read the name, when, eyeing the guest at first with surprise and then in doubt, he ran forthwith to the proprietor of the hotel. Having scarcely observed the name of his guest, he ran up stairs, and entering the room with a low bow, stammered some kind of an apology, saying that the saloons of the entire first story were at his disposal. "I thank you, my friend," answered the stranger; "I find myself very comfortable here indeed, and besides, these rooms are—cheaper." Our host retreated, and the stranger, who retained his rooms on the third story, was a person of no less consequence than—General Field Marshal Moltke.

The Beecher Case.

A perusal of the explanation of Mr. Beecher leads us to observe that he does not look upon the charges made by Mr. Tilton as harmless or to be laughed at, as his over-zealous friends were at first desirous for the public to believe. Two striking facts are eliminated from the statement, viz., that Mr. Beecher is bitterly in earnest and that he classes Mr. Moulton with Theodore Tilton, against him. Those inclined to believe him innocent from the first, declare that his explanation is sufficient and a triumphant acquittal should result. As to that, no one has had faith that the Plymouth church committee would do otherwise than cover their pastor's guilt, if guilt should be discovered, for the reason that the church must fall with its leader. The committee ostensibly chosen by Mr. Beecher to judge soon indicated an intention to defend because the committee's interests are identical with Mr. Beecher's.

On the other hand, the people who pronounced Mr. Beecher guilty as soon as the charges came to light, were as firmly of their opinion after his first denial, and regard his second statement as little more credible than the first. Certain newspapers which have eagerly upheld him were prepared for an outburst in his favor when a final statement should be made, reminding the public of a drilled army ready to throw the enemy into confusion by a charge along the whole line.

Mr. Beecher has made a good fight and could have done as well were he guilty. Unfortunately for his own cause, he has found it necessary to throw discredit upon Mrs. Tilton's statements, joining with her husband in declaring that she is irresponsible and unworthy of belief. This throws the unhappy woman's testimony out of the case as completely as if it never had been given, leaving Mr. Tilton's charges rebutted only by Mr. Beecher's denial. In a question of veracity between these two men, the public would greatly prefer to believe Mr. Beecher, whose record of the past is so ennobling and whose fall would be a public calamity. It is for this that the public distrusts Mr. Tilton and hopes his is a case of mistaken jealousy rather than of wilful conspiracy. At the outset, Mr. Tilton declared that the result of the whole matter would be three funerals. Two-thirds of that prediction is fulfilled; Mr. and Mrs. Tilton are sacrificed and the tragedy is all too real to them.

The presence of Mr. Moulton in the case has been from the first an unsatisfactory element. Impartial readers will hardly believe that he could be a conspirator with Mr. Tilton to humble the man who had for years trusted him as a friend. Yet Mr. Beecher in his earnest defence leads to that inference, as if fearing the result of Moulton's "true tale" should that gentleman's motives be unimpugned. Mr. Beecher's defence gains nothing by its bitterness, even as Mr. Tilton's original charges gained nothing from his peculiar views of honor. One thing, however, is particularly noticeable: Mr. Beecher defiantly calls upon his friends and foes to tell all they know in the matter. Mr. Moulton's delicacy (?) need be exercised no farther, and if he knows anything confirmatory of Mr. Tilton's charges, it is his duty to say it. If he can prove Mr. Beecher's innocence his neglect to do so would be criminal. The effect of Mr. Beecher's re-denial of the offence he was charged with will be to inspire his friends with fresh confidence, while those whose suspicions are not dispelled will declare that although not proven the end is not yet. Even now, the question, Do innocent men submit to black-mail, has food for thought in it. Certain it is that Mr. Beecher is the worst abused man of the present generation of Americans, or is guilty of such hypocrisy and crime that causes a shudder to contemplate. With the memory of his great reputation and hitherto unsuspected morality still fresh in the minds of the people, it will be hard to condemn him on no other evidence than that already offered. If Theodore Tilton and Francis D. Moulton have anything more conclusive to offer, the sooner the whole sad matter is disposed of and buried out of sight, the better it will be for the morals of the age.

Mr. Beecher's Explanation.

(N. Y. Times.)

There is no need to ask attention for the evidence of Mr. Becher before the committee of his church. That it will be sure to receive is any case. But we take the liberty of asking for it a careful perusal and deliberate judgment, for it is not a statement to be either accepted or dismissed lightly.

After some introductory remarks, in which he refers to his published statement and renews his absolute denial of all guilty conduct or suggestion toward Mrs. Tilton, Mr. Beecher takes up his narrative of his intercourse with the Tilton family. He points out that it was very intimate; that it became so on Mr. Tilton's urgent invitation that it covered, in some degree, intervals of Mr. Tilton's absence from home, and that it was at those intervals, also, on Mr. Tilton's cordial invitation. He expresses a high appreciation of the simplicity and purity of Mrs. Tilton's character, and he describes as full of innocent pleasure the friendship he formed with her. In 1866, in consequence of bitter attacks by Tilton in the Independent, on Mr. Beecher's political course, there was some coolness between them, but no rupture, and the intimacy was continued until the year 1870. About that time some articles of Mr. Tilton in the Independent on the marriage relation, obtained for him a great deal of severe criticism, which caused Bowen, the proprietor, to contemplate the advisability of removing him. Tilton, at this time, occasionally expressed the feeling that Mr. Beecher did not help him in this trouble as he might, and that Mr. Beecher's friends were at the bottom of the attacks made on him.

In the latter part of 1870 Mr. Beecher was called on by a young woman, a member of Mr. Tilton's household, who asked him to come and see Mrs. Tilton who had left her husband and who was then with her mother. The young woman also stated to Mr. Beecher that Tilton had assailed her virtue. Mr. Beecher, complying with her request, heard from Mrs. Tilton a tale of ill-treatment and bad conduct by her husband, but no word that jealousy of Mr. Beecher was involved in it. He brought his wife to the counsel, and between them they agreed that Mrs. Tilton might better not return to her husband.

On the 27th of December, Bowen came to Mr. Beecher bearing a summons from Mr. Tilton that he (Mr. Beecher) should leave the pulpit and the city of Brooklyn, "for reasons explicitly known to him." Mr. Beecher was amazed, and pronounced Tilton crazy. In the interview that followed, Bowen related to Mr. Beecher many stories of Tilton's immorality, and convinced him of their truth. On the strength of these, and shocked by Tilton's demand for resignation, Mr. Becher advised Bowen to dismiss Tilton from his employ. On thinking this over he felt some remorse for his conduct, and accused himself of having helped the ruin of a friend whom he may have wrongfully believed guilty of immorality, and who had long been loved by him. While in this frame of mind he was visited by Mr. Frank Moulton, who told him that he must come immediately to see Tilton. He went, and when Moulton had shut them up together, Tilton accused Mr. Beecher of having betrayed his friendship, helped on his business ruin, alienated his wife's affections, undertaken to break up his home, and, finally, of having made improper advances to Mrs. Tilton, and Mr. Tilton produced what he alleged to be a copy—the only one existing, the original having been destroyed—of a confession to this effect by Mrs. Tilton. He then tore up this paper, and bade Mr. Beecher to go to Mrs. Tilton, at her home. Mr. Beecher denies that there was any accusation by Mr. Tilton of anything worse than improper advances. Utterly bewildered, he left the house, accompanied by Mr. Moulton; saw Mrs. Tilton, then very ill, in her room; obtained an admission from her that she had accused him to her husband of improper conduct; rebuked her; and demanded and received a written retraction. He then went back to Mr. Moulton's house, said little, and returned to his home. This was on the 30th of December. The next day he was again visited by Moulton, who told him that Tilton knew of the retraction; that it had been itself in its turn retracted by Mrs. Tilton, and that there was no hope of peace or reconciliation but by the surrender of this document. At this interview Mr. Moulton showed Mr. Beecher a pistol, but does not seem to have threatened him with it. Mr. Beecher surrendered the retraction made by Mrs. Tilton. Subsequent to Mr. Moulton's interview and recovery of Mrs. Tilton's retraction, Mr. Beecher says that he was very much confused and excited by the position in which he found himself. He attributed Mrs. Tilton's conduct to undue affection for him. For this he blamed himself and his want of prudence and foresight. "I had a profound feeling," he says, "that I could bear any blame, and take any punishment, if that poor child could only merge from this cloud and be put back into the happiness from which I had been, if not the cause, yet the occasion of withdrawing her."

At this juncture Mr. Moulton came again to see him, and succeeded in persuading him that the accusations against Mr. Tilton, on which he had based his advice as to a separation and as to his dismissal by Bowen, were false. This point was pressed, until, says Mr. Beecher, "I felt convicted of slander in its meanest form." He became the prey of intense remorse:

"My old fellow-worker had been dispossessed of his eminent place and influence, and I had counseled it. His family had well-nigh been broken up and I had advised it. His wife had been long sick and broken in health and body, and I, as I fully believed, had been the cause of all, by continuing that blind heedlessness and friendship which had beguiled her heart, and had roused her husband into a fury of jealousy."

He expressed his feelings in the strongest manner, and Mr. Moulton, who claimed to be seeking an opportunity to bring about a reconciliation, took a memorandum of his language that he might communicate it to Mr. Tilton. This was the origin of what is known as Mr. Beecher's "confession." He signed at the bottom a few words stating that the paper was given in trust to Moulton, but he did not read the paper or hear it read.

We shall not pursue in detail the remainder of Mr. Beecher's remarkable statement. We have heretofore pointed out that the letters quoted by Mr. Tilton as from Mr. Beecher were the only evidence against him, and that they indicated some offense toward Mr. Tilton, and some cause of anguish and remorse on Mr. Beecher's part, that required explanation. Mr. Beecher declares the offense to have been permitting Mrs. Tilton to fall in love with him on the one hand, and on the other the advice—based, as he thought when the letters were written, on error—in favor of a separation and in favor of the dismissal of Tilton by Bowen. Added to this cause of anxiety was subsequently the dread that Mr. Tilton might publicly renew the charge of "improper advances," and ruin him. But Mr. Beecher denies, by implication, that he ever contemplated suicide, and says that his allusions to expected and desired death were based on symptoms of apoplexy and paralysis, which he often had, and which had accustomed him to regard death as an always open door through which to escape from his cares and trouble.

This is Mr. Beecher's explanation. We cannot undertake to analyze it at the late hour at which it has reached us, or to endeavor to point out its strength and its weakness. It does not account for his conduct in a way that men of the world will generally accept as conclusive. It discloses a curious amount of moral cowardice and a great deal of irrational behaviour. It reveals Mr. Beecher's character as entirely different from what it has generally been supposed to be. But we believe the impression will be general that, conceding Mr. Beecher's character to be what he paints it, his story is not inconsistent with innocence.

Mr. Tilton's Comments.

A reporter of the Brooklyn Argus called upon Mr. Tilton and asked him if he had read Mr. Beecher's statement. "Yes," replied Mr. Tilton. "Will you answer it?" asked the reporter. "It is answered already," said Mr. Tilton. "It needs no other answer than the one which was written by Mr. Moulton a week ago, and which for the sake of peace Mr. Moulton withheld from the committee. The suppressed statement of Mr. Moulton must now come forth. All fair-minded men should demand its publication. Mr. Moulton can no longer with self-respect withhold his full statement of all the facts and documents. If ever one man tried faithfully to serve another, Mr. Moulton has tried to serve Mr. Beecher. For four years Frank Moulton, holding the documents in his hands, has compelled me to compromise my case in Mr. Beecher's behalf, and now for Mr. Beecher to turn at last on Mr. Moulton and publicly to bear false witness against the most faithful of friends; to speak evil as he has against one of the truest-hearted men that ever breathed; to denounce a rich, generous and princely man like Frank Moulton as a blackmailer—all this, leaving myself entirely out of the case, shows Mr. Beecher to have been guilty not only of the original criminality with which I charged him, but of a subsequent ingratitude to a friend who rescued him from suicide four years ago, and who, from that time to this, has been his chief shield from public reproach."

Reporter—Will you say anything as to the points of Mr. Beecher's letter?

Mr. Tilton—No, not today. I have read it very hastily. My chief interest in it is its attack on Mr. Moulton, which is base beyond parallel. Mr. Moulton is out of town, and I know not what course he will take; but I know this, that Mr. Moulton has only to tell the plain facts, or what he called in his preliminary speech to the committee, "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." He has only to tell this, just as I suppose he has written it in his full and complete statement, and the result will be to annihilate Mr. Beecher's denials of adultery, and to leave him in the attitude of a desperate man, who to save himself from the truth has resorted to an array of falsehoods, which I cannot characterize by any other word than infamous.

Tilton's suit against Beecher will be commenced this week.

An excursion train on the Trenton Railroad was telescoped, by a collision with a coal train near Eddysville, Pa., Saturday. Five persons were killed and others wounded.

It is stated that the Navy Department declines to grant permission to officers of the Navy on the active list to engage in the service of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. A few weeks since a position quite lucrative and highly complimentary was offered to Captain Shufeldt, and, later, the command of one of the new steamships now at New York, was tendered to Commander Augustus P. Cooke, but in both instances permission to enbark in the service was refused.

There is now being constructed at the Washington Navy Yard a new sloop-of-war to be known as the Nipsic, to take the place of the old vessel of that name now laid up in ordinary at the yard. The design for the vessel was made by Chief Naval Constructor Isaiah Hanscom, of the Bureau of Construction and Repair.

The late General Winfield Scott, says the N. Y. Sun, was a man eminently of a practical turn of mind. He profited by the lessons of experience. He had suffered considerably from detraction and misrepresentation as to conversation which had taken place between himself and certain women when no one else was present. He determined that such a thing should never occur again, and he resolved, as a rule of his life, that he would never again have an interview with a woman without having a third person present as a witness. To this determination, once formed, he adhered with characteristic pertinacity, although, by so doing, he sometimes gave very great offence. We remember one instance in which a very highly cultivated intriguing woman, who held confidental relations to a foreign government, was extremely anxious to have a private talk with the old General, but he stubbornly refused, except in the presence of a third person. Would not General Scott's rule be a good one for clergymen to adopt? It would save them from a world of trouble.

Travelers' Testimony.

Thousands of travelers by land and sea have vouched for the efficacy of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a preventative of the physical disturbances which ordinarily arise from change of climate and the changes of diet, water, etc., incident to a wandering life. Upon systems toned, invigorated and regulated by this genial vegetable antidote the external causes of debility and disease seem to produce little or no effect. Forearmed with Hostetter's Bitters, the voyager may bid defiance to sea sickness and encounter the chilling fogs of the British Isles, the coast winds of the Antilles, the icy temperature of northern Alaska, or the burning heat of the tropics, with equal impunity. The effect of this admirable medicated stimulant is greatly to increase the vital energy of the system, thereby enabling it to resist and repel the exciting causes of disease.

It is thought that young Sawyer may recover the use of both eyes. He is under treatment at the Boston Eye Infirmary.

The trustees of the Proprietors' Cemetery will enlarge the receiving tombs, a very necessary improvement.

The numerous friends of Rev. Dr. William Lamson, formerly of this city, will regret to learn that while spending his summer vacation at East Gloucester, he was stricken with paralysis on the 7th, while in a carriage on the way to Gloucester. He was taken to the residence of a physician, restoratives were promptly applied, and he rallied sufficiently to be taken to his summer home. One arm and side only are affected, and his mind remains clear and strong. There are good grounds to hope for his speedy restoration to health.

The Hamilton camp meeting commences to-morrow and continues nine days. Fare at reduced rates on the Eastern Railroad if tickets are purchased at the station, return tickets free. Trains leave this city at 7.05, 9.10, 11,30 A. M. Leave Asburg Grove for Portsmouth at 8.05 A. M., 1.23, 4.05, 4.25, 6.40 P. M.

The Court street Christian Society has decided to erect a new house of worship next Spring.

State News.

Great Falls hasn't been sued for damages to a circus company on account of bad roads. It cost the town $18.75 to prevent the suit.

In East Sullivan, Thursday, the tannery of J. M. Grout was burned. Loss about $20,000; insured for $12,000, divided among several companies. Included in the loss was a large stock of finished leather. This establishment afforded the principal business of the village.

On Friday, the nominations of Judges Ladd, Foster and Frink were confirmed. Hon. Edmund L. Cushing of Charlestown was nominated for Chief Justice vice Bell, declined, Hon. Isaac W. Smith of Manchester, Associate Justice, vice Faulkner, declined, and Hon. Edward D. Rand of Lisbon, vice Hibbard, declined. There is another vacancy to fill, Associate Justice Frink having resigned.

The Free Negro in the South.

[Porte Crayon, in Harper's for September.]

Since his emancipation the negro has been a surprising success. He has passed from the slavery of centuries to free citizenship without a crime, and indeed we may say without a serious error. It is true that he amiably shared with his deliverers in the passing hallucinations of red breeches, rolling drums, and freedmen's bureaus; it is true that in politics he shows himself equally gullible and incompetent with the masses of his white brethren, and endures being victimized by politicians with the meekness of a free-born democrat; yet in all these sudden and tremendous changes he has exhibited a capacity for self-sustenance which has gratified as it has surprised his most sanguine well-wishers.

While his educated white brother is still muddling in politics, or vainly dreaming of some legislative protection against the "want that cometh like an armed man," the negro has quietly shouldered his hoe, and resumed the practice of all those little arts which he had acquired in his passage through the valley of humiliation. Though Freedom found him naked and penniless, she also found him untrammeled by traditions of luxury and pride. Though ignorant and unlettered, he was still essential to domestic civilization in the South, and on his race the white man had been accustomed to lean from the cradle to the grave. The puling baby must have a nurse, and who can be found to undertake it but Dinah? The land must be tilled, and who can hold a plow like Big Barney? And when a dance is proposed, what French or Teutonic music can stir the heart or put life and mettle in the heels" like the rythmic lilt of Nace Coleman's fiddle? Or, in case of a wedding, who can make cake equal to aunt Sarah's, or who serve at a state dinner with more zeal (and less discretion) than Milly and Peterson? And then some time or another there is a grave to be dug— But why follow the subject farther? The world down here would have to stop turning on its axis without the negro. The possession of all these simple and hitherto despised occupations has assured him a living, with some ready money to spare, and has left him master of the situation. The old ship is sinking, and Latin, Greek, belles-lettres, philosophy, and statesmanship are going down with it. The freedman alone knows how to swim.

The relations still existing between the ex-slave and his late lord (aside from politics) are in the general most friendly. It exhibits the black man devoid of rancor, treasuring up kindness, and oblivious of injuries. It suggests, too, that after all, the oppression was not so grievous and unmitigated as some have supposed, and the readiness with which the evil has been forgotten and the good remembered is highly creditable to both parties.

Tale of a Cat.

The Seaside Gazette tells the following: "Quite a catastrophe might have happened on the Monohansett, Saturday morning, but didn't as the sequel will show. A New Bedford cat was exiled to Edgartown in the hope that she would not again return to the main land and to the steward was entrusted a basket containg the unhappy pussy. When the boat reached Edgartown, Friday night, the basket was opened and the cat left to go ashore. She, however, knew better and jumped overboard, being seen no more until the boat reached New Bedford, when the engineer had occasion to open the paddlebox. There, close beside the buckets, sat Tabby, wet, but safe. It seems that she, probably in a fit of homesickness had climbed up into her dangerous seat, and had survived the terrible noise and washing of the wheel as it churned thirty miles of salt water. We venture the assertion that that cat will hereafter be the pet of the officers and crew of 'The Monie.'"

How Women Dress in Paris.

"I don't see one handsomely dressed lady here," said a lady from Michigan who accompanied us to see "L'Ami des Femmes." Dresses of low-priced black silk, black merino, brown and gray woolen stuffs, dark bonnets, and even dark gloves—these composed the toilets of the majority of the women in the audience. Certainly the rules regulating the vexed question of dress are admirable here, and furnish one more instance of how they manage these things better in France. No need of Vineland Bloomer's mad-meetings and hygienic gymnastic trousers among women who wear black alpacas cut clear of the ground, all the year round, and bonnets, boots, and gloves of equal simplicity and durability. I wish from the bottom of my heart that this healthful feeling could but take possession of the minds of those women who trail hundreds of dollars through the mud of Broadway in the mistaken idea that they are following the Paris fashions.

—Chiropodists say that owing to the introduction of wide-toed shoes the corn crop will be much less than usual this fall.

—"Black Eagle," the last of the Iroquois warriors, is no more, having been run over while in a state of helpless intoxication by a travelling circus wagon.

—A girl just entering her teens writes home to her mother from the country, "The cows march into the barn, and go right to their places, just as the scholars go to their right seats in our school."

—A distinguished professor, residing not a thousand miles from Andover, recently on an excursion to Europe, being in Edinburgh one wet Sunday, and desiring to go to church, hired a cab. On reaching the church door he tended a shilling to cabby, the legal fare, and was somewhat surprised to hear the cabman say, "Twa shullen, sir." The professor fixing his eye upon the extortioner, demanded why he charged two shillings, and the cabman dryly answered, "We wush to discourage traveling on the Sawbath as much as possible, sir." The fare was paid.

—The lady telegraph-operator at Moawequa, Ill., telegraphed that the passenger train due there at 9:15 had "left on time." After performing this duty, she immediately boarded the cars and eloped with a nice young man who parted his hair in the middle and wore a pink mustache. They rode gayly to Pana, where the nuptial knot was drawn in a lovely bow-knot, and the happy pair returned on the next train. The newly made bride alighted from the cars and telegraphed the up-train "gone," thus making a bridal tour without missing a call.

—The rocks named Pons Augusti by the Romans, and known in later days as the Iron Gates, which have for ages obstructed the stream of the Danube about the point where that river enters the Turkish dominions, are now about to be removed at the joint expense of the Turkish and Austrian governments. The perfection to which the art of engineering has reached, combined with the immense power of modern explodents, has rendered that possible which defied the Romans, great as was their skill in mechanical operations. The cost is fixed at a low sum, $360,000.

—A lovely manner of avoiding sea-sickness has lately been put in practice by an English traveller. He was on board of a steamer crossing the British Channel between Dover and Calais. On deck, right opposite our Briton, was seated a beautiful French actress who was going to London, where she had an engagement for a theatre. The Englishman was keeping his eye riveted on the face of the lady, whose patience being exhausted, said to the islander, "Why are you looking so persistently at me?" The gentleman answered, with an exquisite politeness, "Madame, it is said that to avoid sea-sickness, one must rest his eye upon a single point, and not stop a moment to look at the sea. You are the point which I have chosen."

—This story is told of Rev. Mr. Herrick, once settled at Worthington, Mass.: He collected his own salary, for which every voter in the town was assessed, and calling on Mr. D., the blacksmith, one day, he said: "I have a small bill against you." "And for what?" "For preaching," "For preaching?" said Mr. D. "I have heard none of your preaching." "The fault is your own," said Mr. Herrick. "The doors have been open, and you might have come in." Not long after, as Mr. Herrick was one day passing the blacksmith shop, Mr. D., hailing him, said, "I have a small bill against you." "And for what?" said Mr. Herrick. "For shoeing your horse," replied Mr. D. "For shoeing my horse? I have no horse shod here," said Mr. Herrick. "The fault is your own," replied Mr. D. "The doors have been open, and you might have come in." Mr. Herrick paid the bill, and passed on.

Atmospheric Telegraphy.

An interesting exhibition of telegraphic machines worked exclusively by air was held in London lately by Mr. Guttaris, the inventor. A number of different instruments were on view, but the motive power in every instance was excited by the impulse given to a column of air at one end being transmitted instantaneously to the other end of the column, and taking effect upon certain mechanical arrangements so as to produce such results as might be required. The impulse is produced at one end of a tube by the operator, and performs the mechanical work at the other end either by ringing a bell or turning a needle round a dial. Very many contrivances of telegraphing by air have been invented, but Mr. Guttaris claims for his invention a superiority over others in the fact that a complete message can be dispatched by its means. Moreover, a fatal defect in other inventions of a like character has arisen from the fact that each air tube could convey only one signal in one direction, so that a telegraphic alphabet would require twenty-six tubes for transmission, and the same number for reply. This difficulty Mr. Guttaris has completely got rid of, his instruments being only worked by a single tube, along which the air is impelled in each direction. The rapidity and precision can be made equal to the electric telegraph, the conducting tube being able to be laid under or over cover in the same manner as in the ordinary telegraph. Attached to each machine is a bell and a dial, and the message is transmitted by the moving of a small lever which drives the air through a pipe to the other operator. As the lever is moved up and down the dial which stands where the message is destined for registers whatever the words may be. Each dial is supplied with a needle, and as each spurt of air presses against the works of the machine the needle is moved away exactly the number of times that the lever is pressed. Each instrument cap either receive or send a message. The mechanism is not likely to become disarranged; but it appears that the invention will not transmit messages any great distance. By the aid of compressed air the inventor has succeeded in conveying a message ten miles; but without compressed air the present limit is 400 yards. The instruments exhibited were designed for intercommunication between large coffee houses, offices, hotels, and vessels.

Household Recipes.

Watermelon Rind Pickle.—Peel the outer rind from ten pounds of the melon. Put the pieces, cut in such fashion as you may fancy, into your preserving-kettle well covered with water. Let them boil a few minutes. Then lay in dishes to drain and cool. Pour out of the kettle in which you parboiled the fruit, and return to it the rind as soon as cooled. Cover with vinegar and three pounds of sugar, seasoned to your taste with mace, cloves, and allspice. Let it boil a short time till tender. For three or four mornings successively pour off the vinegar, bring it to boiling heat and pour over the pickles, when it will be ready for use.

Spiced Fruit.—Among the delicacies of the table are spiced currants, eaten instead of currant jelly, with meats. Any other acid fruit, as apples, and peaches, are very nice put up in this manner. To seven pounds of fruit add three pounds of sugar, one pint of vinegar, and a tablespoonful of every kind of spice,—cloves, cinnamon, allspice, and nutmeg.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood-root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, greatly stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. A "stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their application in form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

PASSED AT THE

FIRST SESSION OF THE FORTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

[GENERAL NATURE—NO. 44.

AN ACT making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-five, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the support of the Army for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-five, as follows:

For the expenses of the Commanding General's Office, five thousand dollars.

For expenses of recruiting and transportation of recruits, one hundred and five thousand dollars. And no money appropriated by this act shall be paid for recruiting the Army beyond the number of twenty-five thousand enlisted men, including Indian scouts. Nothing, however, in this act shall be construed to diminish the Signal Service, which shall be maintained as now organized under the authority of the Secretary of War.

For contingent expenses of the Adjutant-General's Department at the headquarters of military divisions and departments, three thousand dollars.

For expenses of the Signal Service of the Army, purchase, equipment, and repair of electric field-telegraphs and signal-equipments, twelve thousand five hundred dollars.

For pay of the army, and for allowances to officers of the Army for transportation of themselves and their baggage when traveling on duty without troops, escorts, or supplies, and for compensation of witnesses, while on court-martial service; for traveling expenses of paymasters' clerks; for payment of postage on letters and packages, one-cent of telegrams received and sent by officers of the Army on public business, eleven million four hundred thousand dollars: Provided, That only actual traveling expenses shall be allowed to any person holding employment or appointment under the United States, and all allowances for mileages and transportation in excess of the amount actually paid are hereby declared illegal; and no credit shall be allowed to any of the disbursing officers of the United States for payment or allowances in violation of this provision.

For subsistence of regular troops, engineers, and Indian scouts, two million four hundred and nine thousand dollars.

For regular supplies of the Quartermaster's Department, to wit: For the regular supplies of the Quartermaster's Department, consisting of stoves for heating and cooking; of fuel for officers, enlisted men, guards, hospitals, store-houses, and offices; of forage in kind for the horses, mules, and oxen of the Quartermaster's Department, at the several posts and stations, and with the armies in the field; for the horses of the several regiments of cavalry, the batteries of artillery, and such companies of infantry and scouts as may be mounted, and for the authorized number of officers' horses, including bedding for the animals; of straw for soldiers' bedding; and of stationery, including blank books for the Quartermaster's Department, certificates for discharged soldiers, blank forms for the Pay and Quartermaster's Departments, and for printing of division and department orders and reports, four million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars: Provided, That three hundred thousand dollars thus appropriated may be applied by the Commissary-General of Subsistence prior to the first day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, to the purchase of subsistence supplies in kind, and the posts supplied through the Upper Missouri, and for other distant posts.

For incidental expenses, to wit: For postage and telegrams or dispatches; extra pay to soldiers employed under the direction of the Quartermaster's Department, in the erection of barracks, quarters, store-houses, and hospitals; in the construction of roads and other constant labor; for periods of not less than ten days, under the acts of March second, eighteen hundred and nineteen, and August fourth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, including those employed as clerks at division and department headquarters; expenses of expresses to and from the frontier posts and stations in the field; of escorts to paymasters and other disbursing officers, and to trains where military escorts cannot be furnished; expenses of the interment of officers killed in action, or who die when on duty in the field, or at posts on the frontiers, or when traveling on orders, and of non-commissioned officers and soldiers; authorized office-furniture; hire of laborers in the Quartermaster's Department, including the hire of interpreters, spies, and guides for the Army; compensation of clerks to officers of the Quartermaster's Department; compensation of forage and wagon masters authorized by the act of July fifth, eighteen hundred and thirty-eight; for the apprehension of deserters, and the expense incident to their pursuit; and for the following expenditures required for the several regiments of cavalry, the batteries of light artillery, and such companies of infantry and scouts as may be mounted, to wit, hire of veterinary surgeons, medicine for horses and mules, picket-ropes, and for shoeing the horses of the corps named; also, generally, the proper and authorized expenses for the movement and operations of the Army not expressly assigned to any other department, one million two hundred thousand dollars.

For purchase of horses for the cavalry and artillery, and for the Indian scouts, and for such infantry as may be mounted, three hundred thousand dollars.

For transportation of the Army, including baggage of the troops when moving either by land or water; of clothing, camp and garrison equipage from depots of Philadelphia and Jeffersonville to the several posts and army-depots, and from those depots to the troops in the field; of horse equipments and of subsistence-stores from the places of purchase, and from the places of delivery under contract to such places as the circumstances of the service may require them to be sent; of ordnance, ordnance-stores, and small-arms from the founderies and armories to the arsenals, fortifications, frontier-posts, and army depots; freights, wharfage, tolls, and ferriages; the purchase and hire of horses, mules, oxen, and harness, and the purchase and repair of wagons, carts, and drays, and of ships and other sea-going vessels and boats required for the transportation of supplies and for garrison-purposes; for drayage, and cartage at the several posts; hire of teamsters, transportation of funds for the pay and other disbursing departments; the expense of sailing public transports on the various rivers, the Gulf of Mexico, and the Atlantic and Pacific; for procuring water at such posts as from their situation require it to be brought from a distance; and for clearing roads, and for removing obstructions from roads, harbors, and rivers to the extent which may be required for the actual operations of the troops in the field, four million dollars.

That no part of the money appropriated by this act shall be paid to any railroad company for the transportation of any property or troops of the United States over any railroad which, in whole or in part, was constructed by the aid of a grant of public land on the condition that such railroad should be "a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States free from toll or other charge," or upon any other conditions for the use of such road, for such transportation; nor shall any allowance be made out of any money appropriated by this act for the transportation of officers of the Army over any such road when on duty and under orders as a military officer of the United States. The Worcester Gazette regards Beecher as "a persecuted saint."

The Supreme Court of Minnesota has decided that the conditions of a railroad pass professing to exempt the carrier from responsibility for injury to person or property of the person gratuitously carried do not so discharge the carrier. A leading reason is a matter of public policy, the concern which the State has in the safety of its citizens.

Somebody having mentioned the name of General Sherman in connection with the Presidency, that plain-spoken officer hastens to say that he thinks he would make a very bad President, and that as a politician he is not a success. He is wholly satisfied with his present office, and knows he would not be with the Presidency. He does not think he is enough of a democrat to be wanted by that party. He prefers to be let alone, and says he is disposed to mind his own business.

If "a man is known by the company he keeps;" if "birds of a feather flock together;" and if Theodore Tilton is a foul conspirator, his wife not to be believed, and Francis Moulton a mean-spirited blackmailer—

Marshal Bazaine has arrived at Cologne. He declares that only his wife and brother-in-law assisted him to escape.

A severe drought is reported from the southern States, causing a general injury to the cotton and corn crops. A number of deaths are reported in New Orleans from excessive heat.

The north side of the public square in Canton, Mass., was burned on Sunday. Loss $100,000.

Dana Colby has been arrested on suspicion of assaulting Mary Tymon of Boston. He is held in $10,000 for examination. The girl has had frequent converse with Colby since her recovery, and he has been very kind and attentive to her, giving her a diamond ring, promising to marry her when she recovers so as to leave the institution, also to give her silk and other dresses, and showing other marks of affection.

State News.

The Manchester Dispatch is bothered over the fact that the driver of the locomotive "Governor Weston" calls the machine "she."

A man named George Leduc, while asleep upon the flat roof of his house, at Manchester on Wednesday night, fell to the sidewalk, and received severe injuries.

Despatches from the White Mountains say that, in spite of the heavy rains and reported wash-outs, the roads are in excellent condition.

Harris H. Johnson of Pittsburg recently shot Edward A. Shoff in the breast with a pistol. The wound is not dangerous. Johnson was arrested and lodged in Colebrook jail.

On Saturday morning last, an Irish woman and her son, in attempting to drive across the railroad track at the station in Dover, were thrown from their wagon by a collision with the locomotive. Beyond breaking the wagon, cutting the boy's head and shaking the lady, there appeared to be no damage done.

The elevator in Sawyers' mills, at Franklin, gave way in the fifth story on Thursday while loaded with cloth, with J. F. Firth and Arthur Lambert on it. Firth jumped and was severely hurt in the breast. Lambert stuck, and landed all right.

A young man named Allen Craig was found with his throat cut, in Keene, Saturday night, and died soon after. One McLaughlin, a former companion of Craig, was found not far off insensible from drink, and there is scarcely a doubt that he committed the deed while both were intoxicated.

The number of visitors to the White Mountains this year is nearly as large as last year, but they do not stay so long.

The excitement concerning the drowning of George Lucy in Nottingham is rapidly subsiding. The coroner's jury has closed hearing and rendered a verdict of accidental drowning, and the Messrs. Prescott, who were temporarily detained, have been released.

Sydney Felch of Weare was drowned at Henniker on Saturday night by falling from a boat. He was in company with Harvey and Ira Felch, fishing, being provided with liquor. All were more or less intoxicated. Several large bruises indicate foul play.

The Wolfeboro' Accident.

[Foster's Democrat.]

They had been in but a short time, wading and half swimming about in water not over three and a half or four feet deep; all of a sudden Miss Pierce pitched forward and began struggling and sinking gradually in deeper water. The young Coe ladies rushed toward her and tried to seize her garments only to find themselves precipitated into a large hole having a frightful depth. George Demond at the same time sprang toward Miss Pierce, while Mr. Pierce endeavored to rescue the two girls nearest to him. He does not claim to be much of a swimmer, and how he saved both or either he cannot imagine. The girls were desperately frightened, struggled to disadvantage, and a strong current of some character seemed to be drawing them toward the centre of the opening. When he had reached the bank with them he was greatly exhausted and the rescued girls were insensible, all having been under water many seconds. He turned to see about the others, but none were in sight. Demond had either been seized with cramp or disabled by the exertions of Miss Pierce, and the brave lad Foltz, who attempted the rescue of these two as they disappeared, could not swim, and speedily met his fate. The aunt, though in full sight, was powerless to aid. She says that the drowned did not rise to the surface after sinking.

The cause of this terrible affliction was one of those large holes often found in the shores of lakes and rivers, not over ten or a dozen feet in diameter, and in this case about twelve or fourteen feet deep. They had bathed in the locality previously, but a net-work of partly decomposed leaves and fibrous matter had so obscured the dangerous place that it was only revealed to them when Miss Pierce fell in. The Coe girls saw that the submarine pit was deep before they jumped, but to save from danger one to whom they were so deeply attached they recklessly risked their lives. The boat belonging to the camp was a long distance off at the time, the water on the shore near them being too rough to keep it safely there when not in use. To that Mr. Pierce ran, and taking it, was able to communicate with some young fellows in a sail boat. One of this party named Green, a good swimmer, and capital diver, as soon as possible dove down and brought up, after several trials, the three bodies. Twenty minutes had elapsed but hope that they might be resuscitated stimulated all present to the utmost endeavor. Two physicians were speedily summoned, and not till all possible remedies and restoratives had been tried for a period of three hours, at the camp and at the nearest house, were efforts in this direction abandoned. The event casts a gloom over the whole village, and called forth the warmest sympathies of ladies and gentlemen passing their vacation time in that neighborhood.

The Duty of Temperance Men.

[Cor. Wolfeboro' News.]

The great peril to the cause of temperance lies in the division of its friends. For the want of union we are likely to lose in this State, so far as laws are concerned, all the advantages we have heretofore gained. The democratic party made license a part of their platform and passed a license bill to a third reading in the legislature, but owing to a quarrel in the party about the union of the Nashua and Lowell Railroad, it failed to pass on the final vote; but their papers now claim that it will be put thro' another year. The republican party, following the example of Massachusetts and Maine, adopted prohibition as a part of their platform and in the legislature sustained the principle with remarkable unanimity for a political party. In the two former States, under precisely similar circumstances, the prohibitioinsts proper, united with the republican party. Why did they not do so in this State and thus save and strengthen the law? I think there is no good reason why they should not. By placing itself on such high, moral ground the republican party had a claim on the good wishes and support of all good temperance men, especially so when it was known the party would lose many who loved liquor more than party. If it is said in reply the republicans did not properly enforce the law, then I answer in the language of Senator Wadleigh: "it is not the duty of any party to enforce the laws—that is not what parties are organized for. It is no more the duty of a republican than it is that of a prohibitionist or a democrat. But, says the prohibitionist, the grand juries won't indict. Well, what then? Is it the fault of the republican party? No. The juries are not drawn from any party. They represent all parties but more particularly the people. If they do not execute the law the republican party should not be held responsible."

The Rochester Courier affirms that the leading prohibitionists took no special means to defeat the license bill in the legislature, and did not seem to care what become of the law; here in Concord I have the best authority for saying that no man who voted the prohibition ticket had anything to do with the large number of prosecutions here the past year, and a Manchester paper says this is the condition of things throughout the State. This has a bad look and needs an explanation if any can be given. Can it be that the prohibition leaders are more anxious to secure the balance of power in this State and secure political position than they are to enforce the law? I should be sorry to believe so, but it has that look.

The question of prohibition and license was fairly presented to the people last March and by reason of a division of the prohibition forces license nearly won. Another year, if the same course is pursued, license will probably win. As it is out of the question that the republican party, with its 33,000 votes and all its newspapers can go over to a 2,000 party with one small paper, the responsibility, if prohibition fails, must rest with the latter, as there was and doubtless is a prohibition majority in the State. Is it not then the obvious duty of all honest temperance men to take a common sense practical view of things, and support the only party that can save the present prohibitory law? So at least thinks your correspondent.

A Naked Bride.

[Montpelier (Vt.) Argus.]

By a strange perversion of legal principles it was supposed by our ancestors that whosoever married a widow who was an administratrix upon the estate of her deceased husband, represented insolvent, and should thereby possess himself of any property or thing purchased by the deceased husband, would become an executor de son tort, and would thereby make himself liable to answer for the goods of his predecessor. Major Moses Joy became enamored of Mrs. Hannah Ward, widow of William Ward, who died in 1788, leaving an insolvent estate, of which Mrs. Ward was administratrix. To avoid the unpleasant penalties of the law, on the morning of her marriage with Major Joy, Mrs. Ward placed herself in a closet, with a tire-woman, who stripped her of all her clothing, and when in a perfectly nude state she thrust her fair, round arm through a diamond hole in the door of the closet, the gallant Major clasped the hand of the buxom widow, and was married in due form by the jolliest parson in Vermont. At the close of the ceremony the tire-woman dressed the bride in a complete wardrobe which the Major had provided and caused to be deposited in the closet at the commencement of the ceremony. She came out elegantly dressed in silk, satin, and lace; and there was kissing all around.

—A man bought a horse. It was the first one he ever owned. He saw in a newspaper that a side window in a stable makes a horse's eye weak on that side; a window in front hurts his eyes by the glare; a window behind makes him squint-eyed; a window on a diagonal line makes him shy when he travels; a stable without a window makes him blind. He sold the horse.

Travelers' Testimony.

Thousands of people by land and sea have vouched for the efficacy of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a preventative of the physical disturbances which ordinarily arise from change of climate and the changes of diet, water, etc., incident to a wandering life. Upon systems toned, invigorated and regulated by this genial vegetable antidote the external causes of debility and disease seem to produce little or no effect. Forewarned with Hostetter's Bitters, the voyager may bid defiance to sea sickness and encounter the chilling fogs of the British Isles, the coast winds of the Antilles, the hot temperature of northern climes, the burning heat of the tropics, with equal impunity. The effect of this admirable medicated stimulant is greatly to increase the vital energy of the system, thereby enabling it to resist and repel the exciting causes of disease.

Local Matters.

Decided.

Two interesting cases have been acted upon in the supreme judicial court. The first one was that of Edwin T. Rice, executor, vs. Ichabod Goodwin et al. The late Arabella Rice of Portsmouth gave in her will $20,000 to trustees, to be appointed by her executor, to establish a public library in Kittery, Me. In her codicil she gave $10,000 for the same purpose. Some of the heirs at law raised the question whether this $30,000 legacy was not void, as there was no party in esse to take it at the death of the testatrix. The executor appointed trustees according to the will, and then applied to the court to settle the question raised by some of the heirs at law. The court confirmed the doings of the executor, and held the bequests valid. William H. Y. Hackett appeared for the executor, William H. Hackett for the trustees and for the town of Kittery, Me., and Charles W. Woodman for objecting heirs at law.

The second case arose out of the will of Miss Rice, also. It was that of Edwin I. Rice, executor, vs. Boston Port and Seaman's Aid Society. The question was whether Arabella Rice had given $10,000 or $5000 to the defendants. In her will, drawn by Mr. Shaw of Boston, among other bequests, she gave "$5000 each to five societies in Boston, including the Seaman's Aid Society." In a codicil, drawn by herself more than a year after the will was drawn, she gave $5000 each to seven societies in Boston, naming them in a list in the same manner she had named the five societies in the will. The court held that the last-named $5000 was not a cumulative legacy, and that the Seaman's Aid Society was entitled to $5000 only. William H. Y. Hackett for the executor; H. W. Paine and Robert M. Thompson for the society.

Laconics.

A son of Portsmouth resident in the South for seven years after the close of the rebellion writes home: "I don't know of anything more high-handed that the carpet-baggers ever did in Alabama than the democratic reconstruction of your city government. And they did not have the excuse of self-preservation that the carpet-baggers had. You ought to give them a tremendous thrashing in the city election."

For really first-class and enjoyable excursions commend us to those managed by Col. J. C. Butler, who semi-occasionally drops down on the already crowded Appledore House with several hundred lively followers bent on having a good time. To-day is one of those auspicious occasions. There'll be music and dancing, for the Naval Band goes along, and a moonlight trip home. Tickets 75 cents.

The steam tug Clara Bateman and schooner Union Flag have been engaged by Messrs. Smart and Russell to sail inside the course to be taken by the yachts in the coming race. About 600 passengers can be accommodated. This will afford the best opportunity to view the races.

Robinson's circus is coming Sept. 3d.

Capt. William Robinson, the genial commander of steamer Major, was overwhelmingly surprised on Saturday evening. First, the lady guests of the Oceanic presented him with a pair of marine glasses, then Mr. John R. Poor placed at his disposal a massive gold ring with masonic emblems, and the gentlemen guests followed with a purse of $50; next, he was invited on board the steamer A. D. Bache, where Lieut. Smith loaded down the astonished captain with an elegant meerschaum pipe, the other officers following suit with a large bag of smoking tobacco. Capt. Robinson thought his friends had all conspired against him and had done their utmost, but on leaving the steamer a nice pocket-book was handed him, the gift of unknown friends.

About four o'clock, Monday morning, the members of the family of Mr. Adams Lutz at Kittery Foreside were awakened by a neighbor who saved them from a horrible death, the house in which they were asleep being in full blaze. The oldest child, a girl of eleven years, very nearly perished, her father being severely burned in rescuing her. The house was new last year and was worth about $2800. It was insured in the North British Co. for $2000. The furniture, which was nearly all destroyed, was insured for $600 in the Westchester Co. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Mr. John S. Treat applies for the contract for furnishing gravestones for our fighting editor's private cemetery. The latter gentleman wants it understood that he does nothing in the dark; he hasn't procured a lot to suit him yet, all the three-acre lots in this vicinity being too small; but when he finds one big enough he will advertise for proposals for stone-ware, so as to give everybody a fair chance.

A correspondent of the Norfolk (Va.) Landmark furnishes that paper with some "incontrovertible facts" concerning the various navy yards, proving that the Norfolk yard is the only one worth anything to the country. The correspondent uses up this naval station as follows: "The harbor of this yard is not convenient nor accessible. The climate precludes work at certain seasons of the year, and it is located far away from all description of materials, except a certain kind of timber of little use for ship-building. The last Naval Board on Yards and Docks report the harbor unsafe, and the Secretary of the Navy, in his report of 1869, says: 'In consequence of the very exposed position of the navy yard, it was thought by the department necessary to mount a few guns on Seavey's Island for the better protection of the harbor.'"

Barnum's Roman Hippodrome will leave Boston on the 22d inst., and will be exhibited at no other place in New England. The manager announces that arrangements have been made with the different railroads running into Boston, for daily excursions, at reduced rates. Hundreds in this city are desirous of witnessing the mammoth entertainment, and will be glad to hear that low-priced excursion tickets are to be issued.

Saturday night, about half-past ten o'clock, Mr. Frank Bush, of the firm of Bent & Bush, Boston, was taken suddenly ill of heart disease in the Oceanic Hotel at Star Island, while looking at the dancers, and died in two hours after.

The train to Boston on the Eastern road, Sunday afternoon, had nine full cars.

Col. A. M. Eastman of Portland has a dispatch from London to the effect that the Faraday and Ambassador would commence to lay the deep sea cable of the Direct Ocean Telegraph Company, between Ireland and Newfoundland, Aug. 25th.

Miss Annie W. Guilford of Lynn is now studying with Miss Nilsson's master, Monsieur Warteri, preparatory to her appearance at the Italian opera at Paris. It will be remembered that Miss Guilford made a successful debut at Leghorn last season.

The managers of the Eastern Railroad put themselves to considerable trouble on Saturday afternoon in order to save some of their passengers an annoyance. Just as the 3:15 P. M. train left Boston for the seashore and the mountains, six or eight Saratoga trunks, doubtless containing wardrobes for some of the evening hops, were wheeled down the platform, but too late to be placed on board. Notice was given to Mr. Field, and with little delay Manager Hatch procured an engine and sent it with the baggage after the express, which was overtaken at Ipswich after a very rapid run.

Jeff Davis was at Rye Beach, Sunday.

Mrs. George Vandenhoff is keeping a first class boarding school for boys in New York.

A Ship Saved by her Steam Engine.

[Traveller.]

The famous clipper ship North American, of Boston, Captain Tucker, from Liverpool for Hong Kong, China, with 2200 tons of coal on board, struck a sunken rock in the Straits of Gasper in July and immediately sprung a leak. Having a steam engine on board it was at once applied to the pumps and kept her free, leaving the crew to work the ship. Capt. Tucker succeeded in getting her off without throwing an ounce of cargo overboard, and brought her into Singapore, where she was docked. On examination it was found that she had knocked off her forefoot and 40 feet of the keel forward, opening the garboard seams as far aft as the foremast. Captain Tucker telegraphs that nothing but her pumps, worked as they were by the steam engine, could have saved the ship. At last accounts, early in this month, she had been repaired and would proceed without delay to Hong Kong.

Judge Doe for Congress.

[Nashua Telegraph.]

In proposing Hon. Charles Doe as the next republican candidate for Congress in the First district, the Portsmouth CHRONICLE gives voice to a feeling which has been general among the republicans in considering the contingency of his release from judicial duties. There can be no doubt that Judge Doe's accession to the New England delegation in Congress would do much to preserve its reputation for ability and learning, at a time too when the retirement of several of the most distinguished members from Massachusetts seriously threatens to impair its influence in the councils of the nation. Without wishing to intermeddle in the least with the affairs of the First district, we are satisfied on our present information, that the republicans of that district would "take a bond of fate" by nominating Judge Doe, if the matter can be amicably arranged.

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the power of an ailment, and easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Element, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," chiefly by Toning up Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent. Infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

CHAPTER 10.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 12. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe; after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

IN AID OF THE PUBLIC LIBRARY OF KENTUCKY.

DAY FIXED

AND A

FULL DRAWING ASSURED

ON

Monday, 30th November, 1874.

LAST CHANCE

FOR

An Easy Fortune!

A postponement of the Fifth Concert of the Public Library of Kentucky has been so generally anticipated, and is so manifestly in the interest of all concerned, that it must meet the approval of all. The day is now absolutely fixed and there will be no variation from the programme now announced. A sufficient number of tickets have been sold to be confident of having a large drawing on the 31st July, but a short postponement was considered preferable to a partial drawing. Let it be borne in mind that

THE FIFTH GIFT CONCERT

IS THE LAST WHICH WILL EVER BE GIVEN UNDER THIS CHARTER AND BY THE PRESENT MANAGEMENT.

That it will positively and unequivocally take place as announced on

MONDAY, 30TH NOVEMBER, 1874,

that the music will be the best the country affords, and that

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA. DEBILITY. DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

JURUBEBA

ARE YOU

Weak, Nervous, or Debilitated?

Are you so languid that any exertion requires more of an effort than you feel capable of making?

Then try JURUBEBA, the wonderful TONIC and INVIGORATOR, which acts so beneficially on the secretive organs, and so powerfully upon the vital forces.

It is no alcoholic appetizer, which stimulates for a short time, only to let the sufferer fall to a lower depth of misery, but it is a vegetable tonic acting directly on the liver and spleen.

It regulates the Bowels, quiets the nerves, and gives such a healthy tone to the whole system as to soon make the invalid feel like a new person.

Its operation is not violent, but it is characterized by great gentleness; the patient experiences no sudden change, no marked results, but gradually his troubles

"Fold their tents like the Arabs,
And silently steal away."

The Pitching Horse.

[Galveston News.]

The pitching horse is an exotic in the East.

Texas is his country, his habitat, his home. On her prairies only grow the juicy grasses that nourish the pitching propensity in perennial vigor. He has never yet formed a taste for corn and oats. To see him quietly feeding and laying up material for future usefulness, you wouldn't dream of his wonderful capabilities.

He has a sluggish, hang-dog look. I say hang-dog for the sake of euphony—He never knew how to hang a dog. I have seen him kick one into sausages, but he didn't hang 'em up afterward. He had good reasons for it, I have no doubt, but he didn't hang them at the time.

There is no music in his soul. He has pitch enough, but lacks tone. He indulges in none of those sweet courtesies and domestic endearments which characterize the Arab barb when confined in the stalls of the booksellers.

He can be bought for twenty dollars without any trouble, but it is dangerous to buy him any cheaper. Sanguine gentlemen who attempt it are generally raised by willing hands out of the mire and perplexities of this life, and transformed into post oak acorns. The transformation is interesting to a disciple of Pythagoras, but, to the party chiefly concerned, the elevation is lacking in the elements of true grandeur.

It is no trouble, though, to borrow one. You can borrow one to ride a week, a month, six months—if you should live that long.

When I first came to Texas, I negotiated, with difficulty, the loan of a spotted animal named Downy, being assured by his master that he was as gentle as a milch cow. This was a figurative expression, which it would have been well for me if I had called on him to explain. But it seemed so absurd for a human being in boots to require a gentler steed than a milch cow that I refrained.

He did look gentle. His ears hung loosely about a very unintellectual forehead, his legs were built even from the ground up, and his fetlocks were four inches long.

These marks were sure evidence of a lamb-like spirit when found in the horse of my native land.

I mounted him without hesitation, and I dismounted in the same way.

As soon as I got comfortably seated in the saddle, he straightened his ears and drew a long breath. I did not know what this meant, but I found out afterwards. He did not mean to let me ride him without a vigorous protest.

If he had only taken the trouble to inform me in any language that I understood what he wanted, I would have saved him some exertion.

But half the trouble in the world is occasioned by people not understanding each other.

He went up like a balloon. He came down like an aerolite. I started to say like a thunderbolt, but saw that would not do. There is some elasticity about a thunderbolt, but Downy's legs were as stiff as the manners of an English tourist in Texas.

I tried to dismount, but before I could get my right foot out of the stirrup he went up again. When he came down this time the jar was awful beyond description.

I do not know what it is to be struck by lightning, but I do not dread it now like I used to. There might be something new in the filling up, but the general outlines of the feeling would be familiar to me.

The jar did not seem to hurt Downy, for he kept going up and coming down faster than I could count. And every time he struck the ground, he bellowed like a bull.

This was the only point of resemblance that, from first to last, I discovered between him and a milch cow. It was not striking, to be sure—but as a corroborative, to a limited extent, of my friend's testimony, it was, on the whole, gratifying to my feelings.

My first thought was that the great want of Texas was railroads. My next, that the animal was demented.

I then wondered how I ever could have been fool enough to get on him anyhow; and finally resolved that if ever I got down alive, I would first kill Downy and then his master—if I could get the drop on him.

By this time blood was streaming from my nose, mouth, ears and eyes. Meantime, the man for whose blood I was thirsting was surveying me with curiosity, but without emotion. He was used to it. So was Downy. I was the only one of the party for whom the proceedings possessed the charm of novelty.

I would have been thrown sooner had it not been for my saddle—a genuine Texas saddle.

The Texas saddle is a wonderful structure which has grown out of the necessities of the country. A rider with even a moderate degree of coolness can not be thrown out of it even by a horse with an immoderate degree of pitch.

At last Downy stopped for breath. I felt it to be the supreme moment, and with admirable presence of mind attempted to roll off sideways. He discovered my intention and frustrated it. He wanted to discharge me himself.

Rising straight on his hind legs he threw me on his back in rear of the saddle. Then bringing down his head and raising his heels at the same instant, he launched me into space with a velocity hardly surpassed by the comet of 1853.

I had barely time to regret my departure from the earth, before I found myself regretting that I had ever got back to it.

I struck at full length on the wreck of an old stone chimney. Then for five minutes I slid around on my back, and gathered grass with both hands.

I don't know why I did this. I had no use for the grass myself, and was certainly not in the humor to save hay for Downy.

He was cropping grass, too, but he had a use for it, and he did it, besides, in a cooler, more dispassionate way.

His owner came up promptly, and said that if it would be any alleviation to my feelings, he would shoot Downy on the spot. I started to say yes—hesitated—reflected.

At last Christian charity got the better of passion. "No," I said, "let him live. I'll buy him and make a present of him to my mother-in-law."

And then closed my eyes, and went into hospital for six weeks.

Readables.

Timothy H. Hubbard, an influential and well-known lawyer in York county, Me., died at his residence in North Berwick, on Sunday.

Mr. Frank Moulton denies the charge of blackmail in Mr. Beecher's statement. He says that he has decided on his future course, and that no other person knows what his plans are, but he intimates that he will in time have plenty of work for the interviewers. It is stated that he strongly opposed the revival of the scandal by Mr. Tilton at the time of the publication of the letter to Dr. Bacon.

Two United States Treasury clerks have been detailed to convey the first instalment of the five per cent. bonds to the syndicate in London.

Foreign advices state that the recognition of the Spanish republic has been officially promulgated by England, France and Austria. The republican General Blanco has relieved Vittoria.

"Passion's perils," a play founded on the Beecher-Tilton affair, has been squelched at the Howard Atheneum, Boston, by the Aldermanic committee on license, as being immoral.

The Beecher investigating committee are not expected to report this week.

State News.

The twenty-second annual festival of the Cheshire county musical convention began at Keene Monday.

Rev. Abel Fletcher, for many years past a well-known school teacher in many towns in Hillsborough county, died on Friday, aged about seventy years.

Mr. T. Harvey Fay of Boston has lately painted an excellent portrait of Hon. Peter C. Brooks of Boston, who has given the same to Phillips Exeter Academy. It is pronounced by those who have seen it as remarkably fine and lifelike. Mr. Brooks was a pupil at this institution in about 1815, and liberally contributed towards the erection of the present building, its library, portrait gallery, etc.

The Ticket Clerk.

"Fast Life on the American Highway," by Joseph Taylor, contains some lively sketches of railroad men and railroad travel. One of its good ones is that of "The Depot Ticket Clerk."

The duty of the ticket clerk is to answer questions and sell tickets.

He answers more questions than he sells tickets, for almost everybody who buys a ticket has at least three or four questions to ask.

Travelers seem to think the ticket is "mighty dear," unless two or three pieces of information are thrown into the bargain.

There is for some reason a sort of natural animosity between the ticket purchaser and the ticket clerk; and it is certain he could never carry on this occupation if he were not in an inclosure.

Perhaps it is being barred in, so that he could not be got at, even if any one wanted to get at him in the worst way, has a tendency to arouse the feeling I mention; at all events, it exists, and if he were not fenced in he would need to be a courageous fellow.

The apartment he occupies has generally only a small hole for communication between himself and the public outside.

This hole is big enough to admit a man's head.

His head is all the ticket clerk has to do with; he does not require to see the remainder of his proportions.

He will sell a ticket to a man with one leg as readily as to a man with two.

He will not make any reduction on account of a man not being "all there."

A man who has been pared off a good deal by occasionally getting too near buzz saws thought he was entitled to half fare, as only about half of him was left over; but the ticket clerk would make no allowance as long as he had his head on.

Passengers are not carried by weight, if they were I don't see how the business could possibly be done, weights vary so much from time to time, in both sexes.

"Look here, young man," says a rough kind of a fellow through the hole, "how do the prices run in these times to D——"

"Fifty-two cents," replied the clerk with the greatest urbanity.

"That's pretty dear! I'll give you fifty."

"Can't take less than fifty-two."

"You don't mean to say you want the two odd cents?"

"Yes, sir. Fifty-two cents is my tariff. Will you take the ticket?"

"Yes."

Ticket clerk stamps the ticket and the fifty-two cents are slowly handed over.

"Well, you air the meanest cuss I've met to-day!" says the individual, thrusting his hand through the hole. "You're a miserable skin-flint! If I had you out here for five minutes, I'd knock the spots off you—I'd put a head on you!"

As the man appears to be capable of knocking the spots off him, also of putting a head on him, the ticket clerk glances at the door to make sure it is bolted, and with a ghastly smile surveys his secure position.

Fussy old gentleman: "Look here young man, what time does the next train call?"

"5:45, sir."

"5:45!" rejoins the querist, in astonishment. "I thought it was quarter to six. How you do change!"

"Look here, mister, you didn't give me enough money. I handed you a ten dollar bill; you must have taken it up, and I want five dollars more."

Ticket clerk looks at his cash, and finds that he has not taken a ten dollar bill that day so far. He replies:

"You must be mistaken, sir; I gave you your proper money."

"Wa'al I say you didn't; do you want to cheat me?"

"No sir, I merely say I gave you the money."

"And I merely say you are a thundering liar, and if I had you outside this hole, I'd bust your snout!"

Ticket clerk instinctively feels that organ is in its proper place, and the conductor's "all aboard!" attracts the pugnacious traveller to the cars.

This is the kind of individuals who send such precious effusions as the following to the general superintendent:

"Sir—Your ticket clerk at — is a thief; he robd me of a five dollar bill and when I taxt him with his villainy he aboused me in the worst way. You had better discharge him rite away.

A REGULAR TRAVELLER ON YER ROUT."

Personal Decorations in Sotuh Sea Islands.

[W. H. Rideing, in Harper's for September.]

The Solomon and Santa Cruz groups are almost the only islands in the South Sea where the natives decorate themselves. In Samoa the women make very pretty necklaces and head-dresses from flowers; but neither they nor their husbands devote any time to the design and manufacture of less simple articles of personal adornment. At Ulaka, one of the Solomon Islands, the natives ornament their arms, legs, fingers, necks, and noses, often with the best of taste, and keep a large stock of trinkets on hand for sale. The ingenuity and variety of the materials and designs are astonishing. Rings of tortoise-shell are inserted in the cartilage of their nostrils; bands of white shells are worn across the forehead to protect the eyes, and similar bands, sometimes made out of human or sharks' teeth, around the neck. Shells of every color, plaited cocoa-nut fibre, seeds, dyed grass and leaves, the feathers of birds, and coral are wrought into novel and occasionally artistic patterns. Some necklaces are made out of boars' tusks, set with the tortoise-shell figures of birds, and others of black rings made from seeds, and varied with white and red shell-work. Ornaments are also made for the waist and the knee. The workmanship is one of the most skillful and patient kind, and a high price is put upon it. We have no information of the agricultural development of the island, which is of coral formation; but the natives appear to give all their time to the manufacture of these ornaments. They are puny in stature, and excitable in disposition. Their teeth are black from chewing the betel-nut. When they are assured that strangers have not come for labor, they are inclined to be friendly, although they are reputed to be faithless and malicious. The largest island of this group is San Christoval, which is hilly and well wooded. The inhabitants are keen huntsmen and capital traveling companions. Their sight is remarkably good, and they discover birds hidden in the trees which other persons might look for in vain. They are cannibals, and preserve the bones of their victims in a public place. Twenty or thirty human skulls may be seen dangling at one time from the roof of a canoe-house, and near by are several human jaws, from which the teeth have been torn for use in trinkets. Some queer customers reside at San Christoval. The king shows to all white visitors a certificate, written in English, that he is "an old bore" and "an old knave," and that "the less you have to do with him the better."

British Navy Drill.

"An article on ocean warfare in the current number of the Edinburg Review should effect," says the Pall Mall Gazette, "a double service for our naval officers in showing them not only what ought to be more studied, but what may well be much less cared for by them. No one who reads the essay will charge the writer with being any thing but a warm friend of the service he addresses; but he enters none the less a strong protest against the misdirection of its present studies into a mere imitation of those proper to the army, to the neglect of what is urgently needed for maintaining our supremacy at sea. While questions (he says) of naval tactics and other branches of naval science are generally disregarded, the abilities of zealous officers and men are directed to mastering the details of those military manœuvres which are proper enough for the infantry of the British army.

A 'naval review' has come, he states in another place, to mean, in the popular language of seaports, not a review of ships, but a battalion of sailors armed with infantry weapons. And he adds his opinion that the labor bestowed in attaining proficiency in these exercises, would, if properly directed, considerably raise the efficiency of our fleets. The fact is that the precedent of the Crimean war, where sailors were found especially useful in the heavy batteries before Sebastopol, has been copied in the Indian mutiny and our other successive campaigns, until a naval brigade has become a recognized portion of our land forces in any expedition. In that to Ocomassie we reached the climax of absurdity in this direction by leaving the Twenty-third Fusiliers out of the advance in order to push on the contingent from the coast squadron. Meanwhile, the development of naval tactics is alarmingly neglected, according to the Edinburgh Review writer. And we quite agree with his conclusion that those who insist on able-bodied seamen spending their time in learning how to 'march past in double companies' are bound first to show that there is nothing left to teach our officers and men about their ships or the management of them."

—Success in life is very apt to make us forget the time when we were not much. It is just so with a frog on a jump; he can't remember when he was a tadpole, but other folks can.

—A rival to the ruined piles of Sardis, about which Oriental travellers love to talk, has been found in Sardis, Miss., where James H. Piles, the colored Chancellor, is in jail for larceny.

—Marshall Goodpaster of Bath county, Ky., has recorded his judgment that three stabs with a penknife is an equivalent for sixty cents, which George Baird owed him for repairing a gun.

—Thistles are growing thriftily in the streets of Victoria, and the papers are clamoring for the enforcement of the ordinance against noxious weeds. They say in effect: "Thistle never do."

—A wicked little boy in a Denver Sunday school was asked by his teacher if he had learned anything during the past week. "Oh yes," said he. "What is it you have learned?" "Never to lead a deuce when you've got an ace back of it," was the reply.

—A Kalamazoo Judge went to a neighboring town to see a man, and telegraphed back to his wife: "Have found Garland; won't be home in a week." When the dispatch reached her it read: "Have found girl, and won't be home in a week." Here let us draw a veil.

—A four-year-old recently went to a blacksmith's to see his father's horse shod, and watched closely the work of shoeing until the blacksmith commenced paring the horse's hoofs, when, thinking this was wrong, he said earnestly, "My pa don't want this horse made any smaller."

Travelers' Testimony.

Thousands of travelers by land and sea have vouched for the efficacy of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a preventative of the physical disturbances which ordinarily arise from change of climate and the changes of diet, water, etc., incident to a wandering life. Upon systems toned, invigorated and regulated by this genial vegetable antidote the external causes of debility and disease seem to produce little or no effect. Forearmed with Hostetter's Bitters, the voyager may bid defiance to sea sickness and encounter the chilling fogs of the British Isles, the coast winds of the Antilles, the icy temperature of northern Alaska, or the burning heat of the tropics, with equal impunity. The effect of this admirable medicated stimulant is greatly to increase the vital energy of the system, thereby enabling it to resist and repel the exciting causes of disease.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary merit. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

Local Matters.

A Fine Vessel.

Persons interested in vessels and admiring fine ones will be well repaid by inspecting the three-masted schooner M. B. Millen, Capt. J. E. Montgomery, now lying at Rollin's wharf, loading with pressed hay for a Southern port. This vessel, in her model, materials and construction, merits more than a passing notice, and we give the following particulars concerning her, hastily gathered from a personal inspection and from data furnished by the captain and Mr. Wadley of Georgia, one of the owners.

She was built in Chelsea, Mass., by Peirce & Montgomery; was modelled by Mr. George Peirce (formerly of this city), and put together under his personal supervision, for Messrs. Wadley & Co. of Georgia, for their lumber trade; and was inspected while being built by Capt. Eben Hows of Boston, Agent of the French Lloyds, by whom she is given the highest rating accorded schooners.

Her length between perpendiculars is 134.7 feet, beam 32.2 feet, and depth of hold 10.9 feet; tonnage (new measurement) 336.28. All the timber of the vessel (except the masts, which are of white pine, and the topmasts, booms and gaffs, which are of spruce,) was cut and got out to specified dimensions at Wadley & Co.'s mills, near Herndon, Ga., and we believe she is the first vessel ever built entirely of materials furnished by that State. She was launched July 30th, and christened by Miss Sadie O. Wadley, daughter of one of the owners, who named the schooner in honor of Major M. B. Millin, of the firm of Millen & Wadley, lumber and commission merchants at Savannah, from which port she hails. She is expected to carry about 300,000 feet of yellow pine lumber, and would probably get away in good style with 350,000 feet of Northern white pine; needs no ballast, sailed like a witch on her passage down here from Boston, and will draw about thirteen feet of water when deep loaded.

The frame is entirely of Georgia white oak, spaced 28 inches, two floors to each frame, molded with a long and a short end so as to make a lap of 3 ft. 9 in., all sided 12 in. and molded 18 in. on keel; futtocks —one 7.5 ft., sided 12 in., two 8 ft., sided 12 in., top sided 10 in.; frames molded 6.5 in. to gunwale; keelsons—two heights each 14x14 in., one rider 12x12 in., locked and bolted around stanchions and secured to keelsons; ceiling—six strakes 8x13, one 7.5x13, three 7x13, four 6x13, all scarfed, bolted with 7-8ths iron, and edge-bolted; beams yellow pine, 11x14 in., space 5.5 feet from centre to centre; hanging knees 8 to 10 in. thick and 21 in. through throat; deck knees 7 in. thick, thoroughly bolted; main-deck planking yellow pine, 3.5x3.5 inches, fastened with galvanized spikes; waterways yellow pine, 6 ft. scarfs, 11x12 in.; plank-sheer 5.5x15 in.; strake under rail, outside and inside, 4x10 in., jogged on to stanchions one inch and bolted through and through; rail 5.5x15 inches, tenoned on heads of stanchions and bolted to them and to thick strakes inside and out; two garboard strakes 7x14 in., locust trunnelled, bolted, and edge-bolted through keel; bottom planking 3 1-4 to 4 inches around bilge, wales 4.5x7 in., copper fastened. The poop and forecastle decks and tops of houses are of white pine, 3x3 inches.

Masts white pine, 85, 86 and 87 ft. long, one of 25 in. and two of 26 in. diameter; bowsprit yellow pine, 36 ft. long, 24 in. square; jibboom yellow pine, 51 ft. long, 14 in. diameter; sails, best Woodbury No. 1 cotton duck; standing rigging, hemp; running rigging, Manila.

She is fitted with Collins & Woodward's patent steering apparatus, the neatest and most compact contrivance we have yet seen, and also with the "Ocean pump" of the same makers, probably as effective a hand-working pump as has yet been invented. She carries 1000 gallons of fresh water under decks, in six wooden tanks; has two hatches, each 9x10 feet, and two bow ports each 30 in. square, fitted with slips and rollers for the lumber business. The quarters for the crew are found in a deck-house just abaft the foremast; the cabin, which is very neat and convenient, containing excellent accommodations for the captain and two mates, and also pantry, stewards' room, bath room, closets, etc.

The M. B. Millen is as fine a schooner of her size as ever entered or left this port, and Mr. Peirce could safely rest his reputation as a ship-builder upon this one specimen of his handiwork. Carrying a very large cargo on a moderate draught of water, requiring no ballast and needing but a small crew, she must prove profitable to her owners; and if she does not prove a racer for sailing, and a first-class sea-boat as well, her looks belie her greatly.

Kittery.

Things are very quiet in this town, and there is very little to write about. Crops are more forward than might have been expected, considering the coldness of the season, Indian corn being the most backward of all; but corn needs warm nights to drive it along, and warm nights are what we have not had many of this summer. Apples and pears promise well for a yield fully up to the average.

Although our town is one of the quietest anywhere to be found,—except when there is "a big discharge on the yard," when anathematizing largely prevails,—yet small improvements are constantly being made. Love lane was once the narrowest, most crooked and hilly, most shaded and secluded, and most popular lovers' walk in these parts; it is still as narrow, crooked and hilly as ever, but its glory has in a great measure departed, a large part of its bordering forest having been turned into lumber and cord-wood, and houses built and house lots laid out along its lower end, causing the lovers to seek fresh fields and pastures new. Probably within thirty years the lane will be widened, straightened, levelled and built on throughout its entire length.

Our town is lighted with gas,—I mean kerosene. Dr. Wentworth has two lamps in front of his residence, and they are always lighted at night, as is the one at the entrance to Shannon's stable yard; and cynics assert that all the others are lighted on moonlit nights, which I think is a slander,—in fact I know it is, as one or two of them are never lighted at all. The reason for this little irregularity in enlightenment is that we try to pattern after the old Athenians (was it the old Athenians? it was the old somebody, anyway,) who kept their city clean by each keeping clean the space in front of his own premises; only in our case we try to light by having each man trim and light the lamp in front of his own house. This plan works about as well as could be expected.

The dilapidated and dangerous plank walk on the road to the "lower foreside" was removed some time ago, and the abyss over which it was laid filled up with gravel, making the road much wider and lessening the risk of broken legs to individuals and suits for damages against the town. Around "the cove" at the lower foreside a plank walk, one plank wide, has been laid. The walking at this point was always execrable in bad weather, and the new walk, primitive though it may be, is a great improvement. Rumor has it that when a lady and gentleman meet on this walk, the gentleman goes to roost on the rail which prevents people tumbling into the cove on dark nights, and stops there till the lady passes, when he resumes the even tenor of his way. But even this is much better than for both gentleman and lady to go splashing through mud ankle deep, as formerly, and the roadbed is so narrow that a wider walk would hardly answer.

We have an occasional mild scandal, even in this highly moral town; but your readers do not want anything of that kind to read,—if they do, let them purchase the Beecher-Tilton literature of a month past. Thank Providence the people of Kittery are not as those of other places, sinners.

Rum is quiet; in fact, it is not to be procured in Kittery, so far as I know, though awfully "hard" cider is plentiful, and does as well as rum in some cases. Rum seems to have knocked things over to some extent in New Hampshire, and your New Hampshire rum not unfrequently knocks over some of our Kittery boys who enter into a conflict with it; and there are traditions that even marines have been seen coming from the direction of the bridge with more of a deck-load than they could safely carry. But they can't buy rum in Kittery, except for medicinal, mechanical or religious purposes.

K. M.

Laconics.

Foxes, in addition to a large number of seaside visitors, are making havoc among the chickens at Rye.

The Manchester Knights Templar already muster seventy-five recruits bent on having a good time at the Shoals next Wednesday.

There is to be a grand ball at the Sea View House, Rye Beach, Friday evening. Music by the Marine Band.

Col. Butler's excursion to the Shoals, Tuesday, crowded the steamer Appledore quite full enough for comfort on her first trip, the boat looking finely as she steamed down the river, gaily dressed with flags, the Marine Band at the same time giving some of their excellent music. Another large party went out on the boat in the evening.

Cane and Fan Flirtations.

We will first chat about the cane, and this article of dress is exceedingly useful and fashionable at the summer capital. When Monsieur throws his cane around the fingers of his left hand, the action indicates, "I wish to converse with you." The lady now opens her fan and holds it to the left side of her face; this implies, "All right, I wish the same." Monsieur throws his cane around the fingers of his right hand; this reads, "I like you." The lady quickly opens and closes her fan, should she return the compliment; but if not, she strikes her closed fan against the right side of her face. When a gentleman holds his cane directly in front of him, he says my heart is thine. The lady replies by spreading her fan if she gives him her heart; if not, she unfolds her fan only half way. When Monsieur holds his cane with both hands across his shoulders, he says, look at me. The lady who so desires to do will hold her fan in her right hand, open it, and lay it across her left hand; but should she prefer to look elsewhere than at her adorer, she simply turns her head away, and leisurely fans herself. By this method flirting becomes a study, and is carried on so quietly that even on the crowded piazzas at the Ocean Hotel you are not observed. It is clever to know all those tricks in love's romance.

A Western Casabianca.

[Editor's Drawer, in Harper's for September.]

A friend sends us the following: It reminds one of Casabianca, but two points of difference may be noticed: Casabianca would not take water, but the Washington youngster did; Casabianca got "blowed up," this one did not.

There is nowadays a good deal of complaint about the want of obedience to parental authority on the part of the rising generation, especially on the part of the boys. We heard of a case the other day which proves that there are noble exceptions to the average "boy of the period." A young son of one of the principal examiners in the Patent-office at Washington went to pass his school vacation at an uncle's in Kentucky, near the Ohio River. There was but one restriction on the scope of the boy's amusements. Horses, dogs, rifles, shot-guns, etc., freely allowed as companions of his amusements; but as his cousins were as fond of the water as so many ducks, he was requested to shun the boat which the cousins were wont to use in their aquatic excursions. He promised faithfully, like the dutiful lad he is, and departed rejoicing. A recent letter to his father graphically describes various excursions and the "good times" he had enjoyed, among the very last one in which the cousins had desired to visit the Ohio shore. "They went over in the boat," writes the boy, "but I remembered your wishes in that respect, and so swam the river!" It is understood that the next mail announced to the youngster that the embargo upon the boat had been removed.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN

HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all cruptions, lessens and destroys dandruff and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it invigorates the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 18. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Cordial he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. The day is now absolutely fixed and there will be no variation from the programme now announced. A sufficient number of tickets have been sold to have enabled us to have a large drawing on the 31st July, but a short postponement was considered preferable to a partial drawing. IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Great Vitalizing Agent, iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and wasted, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint and Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form or energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, imparting strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

She That Was a Hitchins.

It was a stifling morning in dog-days. Nature seemed just ready to faint, and so did Mrs. Mosely, when from her chamber window she spied Patience Hitchins sighing on the door-step. It was bad enough that oppressive day to discover mould in the cake-chest and a blight on the cherrytrees; but to see the mould and blight, embodied in Miss Patience, crossing one's threshold, was a great deal worse; and Mrs. Mosely was heard by her kitten to say that she "should give up."

On second thought, however, she did no such thing; but possessing herself of the camphor bottle and a touching look of resignation, descended to find her guest seated on the lower stair, wearily fanning herself with her pocket handkerchief, which it was Miss Hitchins' habit to hoist as a signal of distress when suffering from an "attack." She laid it now across her chest, and nutely folded her hands above it while waiting for her breath to overtake her. Sitting bolt upright against the balusters, with her veil over her face, she looked, in her striped gown, not unlike the dignified flower known as "Jack-in-the-pulpit," if a mature maiden of forty might be likened to any of the floral creation.

It may be, with her closed eyes, she seemed to Daniel Kilgore like the Sleeping Beauty of his dreams, for he gazed at her through the door-way, with mouth agape, for a full minute before he remembered to ask Mrs. Mosely where he should set out "that ere rhubarb."

"Oh, wherever you can find room," she said, too intent on reviving Miss Patience to pay much heed to her hired man, who stood watching her as she removed her visitor's bonnet and sprinkled her face with camphor.

"She doesn't seem to come to. Shan't I lay her on the lounge?" said he, compassionately, advancing toward Miss Patience with arms extended.

"No! No!" cried Miss Hitchins, "coming to" precipitately, and waving him back frantically with her black-mitted hands. "It's gone now! It's my heart!"

Daniel looked as aghast as though she had made a tender confession, while Miss Patience, rocking back and forth in her own arms, proceeded to pity herself audibly.

"This is nothing to the turns I have sometimes. There are hours upon hours when I am so distressed I don't know whether I'm in this world or the next. But I'm better than I deserve to be, and I feel to be thankful that I am as well as what I am."

"You don't say so!" ejaculated Daniel, rather awkwardly.

"Not that it would matter much if I was to die, being a lone woman so," sighed Miss Patience.

"Perhaps it would be as well to plant those roots before the sun gets hotter," suggested Mrs. Mosely, opportunely; and Daniel retreated, his honest face aglow with sympathy.

"She looks pindlin,' that's a fact," thought he, tenderly stroking a wilted rhubarb leaf; "seems to need chirking up. I wonder who she is, and why she isn't somebody!" For Daniel's bachelor instincts assured him at the first that Miss Hitchins was a spinster.

Had he lived long at Quigsby, he would have known also that she was a homeless orphan, with a crushing legacy of hypochondria, spending her life in an eternal round of visiting. She settled down like a dreary fog in the various homes into which she came; yet every body spoke well of her for her kind heart was brimful of sympathy for the rest of humanity as for herself.

She and Mrs. Mosely coming down the gravel walk presently found Daniel seated on the wheel-barrow musing.

"I'm studying out a place for that rhubarb," he explained, briskly, his eyes on Patience.

Now it is not to be supposed for a moment that Daniel was indulging in a figure of speech, in which "rhubarb" stood for "Miss Hitchins;" but it is nevertheless certain that at the very moment of their approach he was thinking, "I wish I had a home to take that poor creature to;" for, by her own statement, Patience was a "lone woman," and Daniel's heart always softened toward such.

In many respects that organ was like a winter "Baldwin;" it was sound at the core, it was always aglow, repeated bruises only made it more mellow. Consequently Daniel "dropped into" love, as readily as Silas Wegg dropped into poetry, and it had long been his earnest desire to "settle down," as he expressed it, carrying out the poetic figure in which he spoke of himself in his bachelor life, as a "bird on a wing."

But unfortunately, ladies were not fascinated by Daniel. "He was well enough," they said; but they all wanted to let well enough alone; and besides, he really couldn't afford to light the hymeneal torch now, with fuel so dear, and such a tax on matches! It is a melancholy fact that Daniel's very susceptibility had been the cause of his poverty. It must be confessed that his irascible old father had never believed in love—or if he ever had, Daniel's mother had shaken his faith—and he had no patience with his son's incurable heartburn. But his raillery, scolding, and down-right anger were alike in vain. Daniel wrote love sonnets under his father's very eyes, and drained his own purse in paying the travelling expenses of his marriage proposals, with a persistency which is beyond all praise, when we consider the disheartening refusals which never failed to come by return mail.

This State of affairs could not last always. As Daniel grew softer, his father grew harder, till one fatal night, exasperated beyond measure at the then object of his son's affection—a country milliner who couldn't make bread—he willed his snug little farm to a widowed sister, vowing that not a cent of his property should be used for the support of "that doll with blows in her bunnet!" It was a harsh and cruel act; but the old man was rendered spiteful by a week of sleepless nights, in which Daniel had given vent to his tumultuous emotions in practicing "Ossian's Serenade," and "The Lone, Starry Hours," on a cracked flute.

Soon after Daniel was disinherited, the milliner discovered that she "had not known her own mind," and, the month following, Mr. Kilgore the elder settled his last remaining obligation—the debt of nature—leaving his only son bruised in heart and bereft of fortune. For a few days Daniel's flute wailed forth the most doleful tunes, among which could be distinguished, "I'll hang my harp on the willow-tree," and, "As on some lonely building's top;" but gradually it glided into livelier airs, till finally, taking up the ecstatic eulogy of "Squire Jones's Daughter," it thus proclaimed its owner's restoration to his usual health and spirits.

Then, hearing that work was plenty here, Daniel came to Quigsby, and thus Mrs. Mosely secured a gardener, and the village clocks a regulator; for, being gifted with ingenuity, Daniel, on rainy days, picked up an occasional sixpence in putting broken jewelry in order, or in repairing old umbrellas.

So it fell out that evening that he was seated on the porch-steps at Miss Patience's feet, mending her large square breast-pin (which looked like an old-fashioned tombstone,) while she solemnly knitted away at a black stocking.

"You broke this kind of curious," remarked Daniel, polishing the monumental slab on the cuff of his left sleeve.

"I didn't break it," sighed Miss Patience, as if it were a regret to her. "When I was stopping at the Widow Getchell's, her grandchild was possessed to play with that pin, and when I was having one of my sinking spells he got it and pounded it with a flat-iron."

"Widow Getchell, at Shy Corner? Why, she's my aunt, and she's living on my father's farm! Do you know her?"

"Just as well as I do Mrs. Mosely," said Miss Patience. "I've just been making her a little visit. She hadn't fairly got settled after moving, so I took right hold and helped her, and I remember I brought on that spell by looking over her wool and paper rags. She felt awfully about my pin, and brought along this yarn I'm knitting, and would make me take it."

"I want to know!" said Daniel, who always adopted either the interrogative or exclamatory style in conversation.

"Yes, your aunt is an awful kind woman," pursued Miss Patience, pausing at the seam-needle. "I know when I felt a little better, and begun to wind the yarn on an old letter I got out of the rags, she took the ball, and would finish it for me, because I looked 'just gone,' she said."

Daniel was so touched by his aunt's kindness that he pressed the melancholy brooch into Miss Hitchins' hand, begging her "not to mention the trouble."

This was the first of many happy evenings spent by him on the old porch at Miss Patience's feet. Never before were Mrs. Mosely's tools in so fine a condition; for in the twilight of Miss Patience's smile the jovial Daniel fitted rake-teeth and whittled hoe-handles with astonishing ardor; and as the dews grew heavy, and the bats were flitting, he would possess himself of the gradually-diminishing black ball, and slowly unwind it, while Miss Patience, guarded from the dampness by a heavy shawl, sat slowly knit.

For Daniel was in love again, and he knew it. He had often had the sensation before, and was used to it, and yet each time it thrilled him with fresh rapture. There seemed to be an Artesian well of hope in his breast, which protected his spirits from drought; and in spite of his numerous rejections, he was firm in the faith that his gushing affection would yet find a return. And why not in Miss Patience? was she not "a lone woman," timid and feeble, needing masculine support? But, alas! this very reasoning made him pause: for how could he and Patience both live on what was just enough for him? It was all very well in poetry to speak of sharing one's crust with another; but in the prose of everyday life Daniel knew that a whole slice of bread was not too much for his digestion. And then there were medicines, the pills and powders, the camphor and ammonia, which were a part of Miss Patience's daily diet, and surrounded her with an atmosphere peculiar to herself. Strong, cheery man that he was, her weakness and melancholy made her very attractive to him; but how could he afford the luxury of a sick wife, or even of a well one, now that his father had cut him off without even the traditional shilling?

These thoughts possessed him one evening as he unwound Miss Patience's yarn upon the porch. She was toeing off the second stocking as he reeled the last thread into her lap, and smoothed out the wrinkled paper on which it had been wound.

"Jerusalem!" said he, after inspecting it a moment, Miss Patience impaled her finished stockings on the four needles, and rose with offended dignity.

"Moses in the bulrushes! Beg pardon, Miss Hitchins, but as true as my name is Daniel Kilgore this is my father's handwriting. Just listen:

'I, Ebenezer Kilgore, of sound mind, do, on my death-bed, bequeath to my only son Daniel all the property whereof I may die possessed, provided that said Daniel does not marry Hester Ann Rogers.

Should he marry the bonnet-girl afterward, this will shall be null and void, otherwise it shall remain in full force.'

And here are witnesses, and there is the date, three months later than that of the other will. Jerusalem!" and, pausing for want of breath, Daniel turned toward Miss Hitchins, who stood, trembling behind her needles like a thorn-bush agitated by the wind.

"Of all things!" she gasped, sinking down upon the door-step. "And that is what came out of those rags in the attic which Mrs. Getchell said had'nt been picked over since she moved into the house. Oh! I'm all of a flutter!"

"Can't I kind o' steady you?" said Daniel, tenderly, crooking his elbow into an awkward resemblance to a photographer's head-rester. But the prudish Patience moved away, and leaned her bewildered head against the senseless door-post.

"You ought to have the best right to your own father's property, I'm sure, and I am glad you've got what belongs to you; but, dear, dear, dear, what'll Mrs. Getchell think? I've as good as taken the bread out of her mouth, and she was like an aunt to me!"

"That's pleasant, do let me be your aunt," pleaded Daniel, smoothing Miss Patience's sleek locks so clumsily that her back comb fell, and with it the neat little knob of hair it fastened.

"Oh, my head! my head!" cried Miss Hitchins, starting up in frantic haste. "I must go in. I'm going to have one of my spells!"

"Don't yet," urged Daniel securing her hands in his—a measure suggested by prudence as well as sentiment, for the needles seemed fairly alive with excitement—"I want to know one thing first. Are you at liberty, disposed, and will you—"

"Oh, my heart! Oh, I've such a palpitation!" gasped Miss Patience.

"Thank Fortune!" cried Daniel, ecstatically, disentombing her face, which she had buried in the black stockings. "I was coming to that directly! It's just what I want you to have. I've suffered with it all my life!"

Coming into the kitchen a few minutes later, "to set the bread to rise," good Mrs. Mosely stood transfixed with astonishment at sight of Daniel stanching Miss Patience's ready flow of tears with his red bandana; and when he followed this audacious act by bodily pillowing her camphorated head on his shoulder, the bewildered matron was again heard to say that she "should give up."

Hester Ann Rogers, "the bonnet girl" aforesaid, said the same a week later, when she was commissioned to make Miss Patience's bridal hat. Out of spite she gave it a very melancholy effect, but it suited the wearer all the better for that.

On her wedding-day, Miss Hitchins cast aside her brown striped dress for one of lighter hue, and in the fresh glory of a green veil, the "Jack-in-the-pulpit" was transformed into the "mourning bride." Of course she had enough regard for appearances to weep during the ceremony; but it was not in human nature to remain long tearful in the sunshine of Daniel's presence; for if ever perfect satisfaction was seen in this world, it beamed from his face that day. This satisfaction was greatly increased by the fact that Mrs. Getchell was present at the wedding, and greeted her new niece most warmly—even congratulating her on the discovery of the will, and declaring that she herself was too old to have the care of a farm. Mrs. Mosely made the cake—which, to the gratification of the bride, was a little heavy—but she protests that there is not the least truth in the report that she made the match.

A Washington dispatch to the New York Herald says the Treasury department has on record a great deal of evidence concerning the Beecher-Tilton affair, procured in the course of an examination by Jayne into the affairs of the firm of which Frank D Moulton is a member; and that Jayne is the most important witness who could be called. It is further said that the Treasury officials were aware from the first what the course of the examination would be, and wonder an explosion did not take place long ago.

Barnum's balloon with three men in it burst 250 feet in the air while they were trying to descend at Long Island, Boston harbor, Tuesday afternoon. The balloon did not collapse, but descended rapidly. When about twelve feet from the ground Mr. Donaldson, who appeared perfectly cool, jumped out, and the basket being thus relieved of his weight, struck the ground comparatively easy. The occupants were considerably shaken up, and by an almost marvellous chance escaped severe injuries.

A desperate shooting affray occurred recently on the Tennessee side of the Mississippi River, near Point Pleasant, in which Albert Nall and a young man named Frenham were killed and George Darnell mortally wounded, and two brothers named Coe seriously wounded. The affray grew out of a rivalry, which culminated in a law suit between Captains Coe and Nall who ran competing ferry boats.

At Lowell, Mass., recently, the superintendent of police saw two men fighting and ordered them to stop it, whereupon one of the combatants hit him in the eye. The officer attempted to arrest the ruffian, when a number of people came out of the nearest house to rescue the prisoner, among them two women, one of whom had left her three-days-old infant in bed while she brandished a kitchen poker, while the other was within a few days of her confinement. The captive got away, but the officer captured another man,—one of the rescuers. All the parties in this war, except the officer, are Irish.

We are no believers in "fussing" about our health, yet there are some simple rules which we may, with much advantage, convert into habits. One of them is this: when breathing air that is dusty, or ill-smelling, or otherwise impure, draw the breath slowly through the nostrils. In this way the dust or other impurities are in part arrested in the moist and narrow nasal passges, and are prevented from being thrown upon the lungs. When we breathe through the mouth they are carried directly thither. Many would lengthen their lives by resolutely breathing through the nostrils.

A correspondent of the Boston Globe says that on the farm owned and occupied by Edward Pendergast, in Newmarket, there is quite a curiosity. It is a pretty large stone, and circling right around it, as regularly as if planted by rule, are twelve beech trees growing as close to the stone as they can be. These trees are of moderate size, but are old, for Mr. Pendergast's grandmother, Mrs. Smart, owned the same farm, and in her day she used to say they had been the same size as long as she could recollect, and so said the oldest inhabitant there; therefore it is not known whether some one planted them or squirrels hid their winter's beechnuts there and so they sprung up into trees, probably this latter. Being just twelve of them, they are called the Twelve Apostles.

Old Orchard Beach.

SACO, ME., Aug. 17.

This Beach is said to be ten miles long; there are fifteen hotels, including the Old Orchard House, Ocean House, Atlantic, Central, Sea Shore, and St. Cloud. Sunday was a great day here; camp meeting was going on this week, it is reported that there were 10,000 people on the grounds. The camp is about half a mile from the beach, and has many pretty buildings on it. It is well supplied with water forced up to a high hill on which is built a large reservoir, and from this, pipes are carried all round the grounds. Trains are bringing in people every half hour. Amusements are carried on in a grove close to the beach and about a mile from the camp ground. All style of cars are used to convey passengers. It puts one in mind of a Fair more than a Camp Meeting or Beach. H.

A Faux Pax.

[Nashua Telegraph.]

The abortive judicial appointments made by the Governor and Council show how much easier it is to destroy than to rebuild. Overthrowing the Courts and setting the judges adrift is serious business even when required by constitutional revision, but when it is done for "purely political reasons," it is trifling with the highest interests of the State. There was no warrant for it either in necessity or sagacity. It It was a recurrence to a long exploded practice of maintaining a partisan judiciary, something which all thoughtful men long ago condemned and all enlightened States outgrew. A change for the better might have been made in some direction perhaps, but it is clear that such change should only have been made to fulfill the requirements of the constitution and enable every citizen "to obtain right and justice freely, without being obliged to purchase it; completely, and without any denial; promptly, and without any delay."

Mischief in the Air.

We cannot analyze the aerial poisons that produce epidemic and endemic diseases; but the valuable discoveries which have been made in vegetable pharmacy enables us to counteract their malific influence. The most powerful known antidote to every species of malaria is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a pure botanical medicine, in which the finest antiseptics, tonics, alteratives and stimulants of the vegetable kingdom are skillfully and effectively combined. At seasons of the year when the atmosphere is surcharged with miasma, and whenever the specific virus of any infectious disease is supposed to be present in the air, this famous corrective should be taken regularly as a protective. All who choose to observe this precaution may bid defiance to intermittent and remittent fevers, and in fact to all disorders generated by foul exhalations of impure water.

The following are the courses for the various classes:

Course for First Class: From the judges' boat to buoy off Kitts' Rocks, southeast of Whale's Back, leaving the buoy on the starboard hand, thence to Boon Island, leaving it on the starboard, thence leaving Appledore or Hog Island on the port, back to the judges' boat.

Course for Second Class: From the judges' boat to red buoy off Kitts' Rocks, southeast of Whale's Back, leaving the buoy on the starboard hand, thence to Murray's Rocks buoy, leaving it on the starboard, thence to the judges' boat.

Course for Third Class: From the judges' boat to a stake boat northwest of Appledore, leaving it on the starboard; thence, passing between Duck Island and Appledore to stake boat east of Smutty Nose, leaving it on the starboard; thence, to stake boat southwest of White Island, leaving it on the starboard, thence to judges boat.

Gerrish's island offers a fine vantage ground from which to view two of the races, as the competing yachts have to round Kitts' rock buoy, and the first class vessels have afterwards to round Boon island, which will take them along the shore of Gerrish's island; and if the day is clear the yachts will be in sight from there throughout the entire course. Steamer Clara Bateman and schooner Union Flag will take passengers, and sail inside the course, giving the best chance for seeing all the races, to those not fearing mal de mer. The vessels will leave the Gas Co.'s wharf at 11 o'clock; tickits $1.

Laconics.

Mr. Edward P. Sherburne is mentioned for principal of the Haven school. Mr. Sherburne is an energetic and capable young man, has had considerable experience in teaching, and if appointed will doubtless give good satisfaction.

A court martial has been convened at the navy yard for the trial of George Allen, a private in the Marine corps. Lieut. William Wallace is Judge Advocate, and the members of the court are Capt. J. H. Higbee, president, Capt. R. W. Huntington, 1st Lieut. I. H. Washburne, and 2d Lieuts. E. T. Bradford and B. R. Russell.

Mr. Holmes of Boston, formerly of Greenland, is building a fine dwelling on the site of the house formerly occupied by Dr. A. P. Stevens.

Dearborn S. F. E. Co., No 1. have voted to do escort duty on the occasion of the reception by the Kearsarge boys of the Eben Simpsons of Biddeford, Sept. 3.

The old rattletrap building on Hanover street so long notorious as the "House of Blazes," and so long an eyesore and nuisance to the respectable residents in its neighborhood, has been torn down and removed by Mr. Wm. H. Allen to make room for a large livery stable he intends erecting.

The Dover Democrat says Sarah E. True of Epping, nine years old, has picked and sold $10 worth of blueberries this summer, which she has deposited in the Portsmouth Trust and Guarantee Company.

On Monday a civilized bear made considerable sport for children small and large, by his antics in the streets. An inebriated individual, said to belong in Dover, approached the bear's exhibitor on State street when there were but a few small gamins near, and enquired earnestly and confidentially, "Say, old feller—hic—will your bear — hic — eat mothers-in-law?" Later in the day a span of horses attached to a beach carriage, while on Cabot street, took fright at bruin and ran away, completely shattering the vehicle and hurting themselves somewhat, and throwing out two ladies, but fortunately without seriously injuring either. The bear man, on seeing the accident, concluded Portsmouth would never encourage natural history, and left at once.

An order is issued by the Secretary of the Navy abolishing the office of executive officer of the navy yards and providing for assignment to each yard of an officer not above the rank of commander, who will be senior aid to the commandant. It also provides that there shall be attached to each navy yard a captain of the yard, who shall be senior to all other line officers in the yard, and in the absence of the commanding officer act as commandant.

There are already about three hundred persons dwelling in their cottages on Hedding camp ground, East Epping, some families having been there several weeks. Among others from this city are John E. Giddings, Rev. A. C. Hardy, and S. W. Clarke, with their families, Mrs. S. Philbrick and Miss E. Parry, all of whom have very pretty and convenient cottages. New cottages are going up rapidly,—more doing in that line apparently than for several years before. These camp ground resorts are becoming more and more popular every year, not only with those who have not the means to go to "the mountains" or other fashionable resorts, but also with those who have the means, but had rather take their rest in the "abandon" they can enjoy in their "cottage homes." The time is filled up with reading, writing, croqueting, lounging under the trees, blueberrying, etc.; and much time is taken and enjoyment found in getting up the meals, which are eaten with a zest seldom experienced by the patrons of fashionable hotels, even if the bill of fare is not so extensive and the other bills not so frightful.

The most successful of Col. J. C. Butler's Shoals excursions was that of Tuesday, the day being all that could be wished. About 400 persons went out in the morning and afternoon. The party tripped the "light fantastic" in the spacious dance hall, the band gave two concerts and all returned about 10:30 P. M., more than delighted. We hear the next excursion will be to Wolfeboro'. Go ahead, Colonel!

The Times brings out the name of Mr. Joseph Parry as a suitable democratic candidate for Mayor. There are many worse men in this city than Mr. Parry.

A Great Natural Curiosity.

[Providence Daily Journal.]

For the past day or two there has been in this city a colored man who presents himself a queer physiological freak. He is thirty-four years of age, thick set, of medium height, of fair intelligence, and was born in Manchester, England. He gains a livelihood by exhibiting himself to physicians. His abdomen is naturally full, but at will, without the use of his hands, he gives it a wave-like motion and it gradually sinks in as if being wound up, till it apparently rests close against against the back bone, and he presents the appearance of a man with no abdomen, and then in the same manner he rolls it out to its original form. He then drops from under his ribs a duplicate set of ribs, with a breast bone, when the original ribs and the duplicates can be felt and counted, and the whole front of the body is, as it were, iron-clad. Or, at will, he apparently drops his heart from its natural position some twelve inches, puts it back and sends it to the right side of the body opposite its natural position, puts it back and sends it to the lower part of the body on the right side, thus putting it in four different positions.

During these changes the sounds of the heart can be distinctly heard in either of these new positions, and not where they usually are heard. It seems to be necessary however, that after each change it should go back where it belongs before being sent to a new quarter. He also has the power to stop the beating of his heart at will from five to ten seconds at a time, the pulse stopping at the same time. He seems also to have considerable strength, easily bending by a blow on the arm a heavy iron cane which he carries. Several of our prominent physicians have examined him, from one of whom we have obtained these facts, and pronounce him to be the greatest curiosity in physiology they have ever seen or heard of.

—A summer boarder at Falmouth lost no time in seeing the porter on learning that his wife had set out his boots for the bootblack. He had slipped his fat pocket-book into one of them for greater safety.

—In a Chicago library a book on "self culture" never got a reader. The librarian had it rebound and rechristened it "A young man on his muscle," and anxious readers had to wait for weeks before they could get it.

—A western farmer complains that a hook and ladder company has been organized in his neighborhood. He states that the ladder is used after night for climbing into his chicken house, after which the hooking is done.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in recommending inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their application in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

JOHN TAGGART."

LAST CHANCE

A postponement of the Fifth Concert of the Public Library of Kentucky has been so generally anticipated, and is so manifestly in the interest of all concerned, that it must meet the approval of all. The day is now absolutely fixed and there will be no variation from the programme now announced. A sufficient number of tickets have been sold to have enabled us to have made a large drawing on the 31st July, but a short postponement was considered preferable to a partial drawing. Let it be borne in mind that

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of any aliment, as easily digested, assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills" simply by Toning up. Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and wasts, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy, cures by Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

How I Was Sold.

You may remember that I lectured lately for the young gentlemen of the Clayonian Society? During the afternoon of that day I was talking with one of the young gentlemen referred to, and he said he had an uncle who, from some cause or other, seemed to have grown prematurely bereft of all emotion, and with tears in his eyes, this young man said: "Oh, if I could only see him laugh once more? Oh, if I could only see him weep?" I was touched. I could never withstand distress; "Bring him to my lecture. I'll start him for you." "Oh, if you could but do it. If you could do it our family would bless you for evermore; for he is very dear to us. Oh, my benefactor, can you make him laugh? Can you bring soothing tears to those parched orbs?"

I was profoundly moved. I said: "My son, bring the old party round. I have got some good jokes in my lecture that will make him laugh if there is any laugh in him; and if they miss fire, I have got some others that will make him cry or kill him, one or the other."

Then the young man wept on my neck, and presently spread out both hands on my head and looked up toward heaven, mumbling something reverently; and then went after his uncle. He placed him in full view in the second row of benches, that night, and I began on him. I tried him on mild jokes—then with severe ones; I closed him with bad jokes, and riddled him with good ones; I fired old, stale jokes into him, and peppered him fore and aft with red-hot new ones. I warmed up to my work and assaulted him on the right and left, in front and behind; I fumed, and charged, and ranted, till I was hoarse and sick, and frantic and furious; but I never moved him once—I never started a smile nor a tear! Never a ghost of a smile, and never a suspicion of moisture! I was astounded. I closed the lecture at last with one despairing shriek—with one wild burst of humor—and hurled a joke of supernatural atrocity full at him! Then I sat down bewildered and exhausted.

The president of the society came up and bathed my head with cold water, and said: "What made you carry on so toward the last?"

I said, "I was trying to make that confounded old idiot laugh, in the second row."

And he said: "Well, you were wasting your breath; because he is deaf and dumb, and as blind as a badger."

Now, was that any way for that old man's nephew to impose on a stranger and an orphan like me.

Through the Devil's Canon.

[Observer.]

So much has already been written about the wonders of California, that one is naturally tempted to turn away from anything which bears upon the subject, and yet to those who are really intending to visit the Golden State, the following sketch may not be without interest. We start from Calistoga, a party of twelve, in a large open wagon with six horses, and the world renowned Mr. Foss to drive them. Before mounting the box, where two, by special request, are already seated, he fills every pocket with small green apples and stones, to throw at the leaders, if they grow lazy in climbing the mountains, since they are too far away for the whip lash to reach them. Drawing up the reins, and telling us that before he had learned to drive six-in-hand he never could see the use of having so many fingers, and with a cry of Hip! Hip! to the horses, a crack of the whip, away we rush. For a short distance we pass over a level country, the road shaded on either side by the sweeping oak, with its branches trailing upon the ground, the dark-leaved oak tree, and occasionally a low, broad spreading madrona.

Presently we commence the ascent of the steepest mountain one can possibly imagine, in the side of which the road is cut, so that upon one land we have a tremendous precipise, and on the other a high bank. The curves are so close together that when the wagon is rounding one, the horses are passing the next, and so short that sometimes the leaders walk to the very edge of the precipice, and involuntarily we place our hands before our eyes to shut out the horrible sight of our plunge into the valley below. With a sharp, quick turn they carry us safely around and we breathe again. When we have toiled slowly to the top of the mountain, Foss places his foot on the brake and, uttering his shrill cry, starts the horses in a full gallop down the other side, while we, poor trembling creatures, hold on to anything, thinking every moment that wagon, horses, people, everything will be tumbled into one heap and dashed to pieces on the rocks beneath. Foss has evidently reduced driving to a science and manages his horses beautifully, and so we travel on listening to his quaint stories of those whom he has driven over the road at different times, told only as he can tell them, forgetting that every moment brings us nearer to the geysers. Suddenly we perceive a smell of sulphur and hear in the distance a roar as if we were approaching a rapid river. A shrill, penetrating whistle rises above all, and we are told it is the Devil welcoming us to his home in the mountains.

Arriving at the hotel, we rest for a short time, and then donning the old clothes we have brought for the purpose,—as the sulphur and alum rain everything they touch—

we take our alpen stocks and start for our walk through the Devil's Canon. A small stream of water rises a short distance above the canon, which at its source is icy cold and perfectly clear, and yet before it has passed through, has become discolored by contact with the different minerals and almost scalding hot. The steam rises in every direction, and we step carefully upon the largest stones, fearing our feet may sink into the hot, soft earth, which burns even through our heavy boots. We place our sticks in the ground to keep our footing, and in drawing them out again find that little streams of steam follow them. Sulphur abounds in large quantites, some of which we attempt to carry away with us, but find it too hot to be taken into our hands with comfort. With difficulty, and almost sickened by the dreadful odors, we reach what is called the Devil's kitchen, where a stream of steam issues from the earth with a singing, hissing sound like that of a boiling kettle. Then a roaring, boiling, foaming sound greets our ears, and the guide cautions us, for we are near the Witches' Cauldron, the depth of which no one has ever yet been able to fathom. We gain the edge and look down into the immense seething pool, so black and angry that we draw back shuddering, almost afraid to trust ourselves too near the treacherous brink. We stop here to rest, and the guide, placing a half dozen eggs in an old oyster can, which has evidently been used many times for the purpose, drops it into the water, and in four minutes we have eggs as nicely boiled as one could possibly desire. Again we start on our journey, keeping close to our guide as the earth grows hotter, and we stop to examine a black liquid which oozes from the rocks and has been named the Devil's Ink, and may really be used, a faint substitute for that very necessary article. The rocks seem almost to crumble at the touch, and everything is literally covered with sulphur, alum, magnesia, and Tartaric acid or Epsom salts, each of which our guide insists upon our tasting. Even the trout which abound in the neighboring stream are so impregnated with sulphur that they cannot be eaten.

Finally we search the Steamboat Geyser, out of which the steam issues so hot that one dares not approach very near, but as the earth shakes, groans and puffs in a most uncomfortable manner, we are not sorry. Very near this geyser is seen what is supposed to be the crater of an extinct volcano, and as we stand about listening to the guide's account of the supposed eruptions in the days that are gone, the earth gives a slight shake, as if to remind us that it would be an easy matter to give us an exhibition of its latent powers, and we hurry on. The whistle which greeted us on our approach to the geysers, grows louder, and when we have seen it, proves to be only a tin whistle placed over a jet of steam, the force of which causes it to make a shrieking sound which is heard for miles. Our walk is at an end, and although we would not have missed seeing everything for worlds, we congratulate each other that we are again upon terra firma, and in the evening as we sit on the piazza of the hotel and watch the moon shedding its silvery light upon the clouds of vapor that rise slowly from the canon to meet it, we can almost imagine we see little imps dancing about the Witches' Cauldron in the moonlight, and making night hideous with their shrieks and weird songs.

Mr. Edward Downing, a leather merchant of Boston, was robbed of $2000 at the Merchants' National Bank on State street in that city, on the 19th.

Five persons were drowned by the upsetting of a pleasure boat in Peekskill Bay, N. Y., on the 19th. The boat was run down by an excursion barge.

Hugh Muldoon was instantly killed at Lowell, Mass., on the 19th, while at work on a street sewer, by a large stone falling on his head.

The Louisville Courier-Journal thinks the whole Beecher-Tilton crowd have entirely too much genius. It says: "The ways of these people are inscrutable and incomprehensible. The ordinary tests of evidence all fail when applied here. The play of Hamlet with the part of Hamlet left out, it is generally supposed, would be rather flat. But what would the play be if there were half a dozen Hamlets, or, indeed, nothing but Hamlets? In the Plymouth drama no one can take part unles he or she is a genius. They are all so far above the common run that they must all meet the not unusual fate of genius—want of appreciation.

The brush fires in Ontario, Canada, are still raging, and the village of Washington has been more than half destroyed. Serious forest fires continue on Long Island. The business centre of the town of Shelbina, Mo., was recently destroyed by fire, causing a loss of over $50,000, and other fires are reported. Alarming forest fires are reported from Michigan.

Robert Casteberg was arrested Monday night on the 11 o'clock train from Boston to Albany, on a despatch from Providence sent by a New York detective, charging him with the larceny of $15,000 worth of diamonds belonging to parties in New York.

The new locomotive intended for the Martha's Vineyard Railroad lies in about ten feet of water at Wood's Hole. It was standing at the edge of the wharf there ready for shipment, when two freight cars were switched off at unusual speed, striking the machine with such force as to throw it into the dock. The engine was headed up the wharf and was detached from the tender. The tender went overboard as quick as a flash, while the engine went over at a slower rate of speed. The cry of "look out! look out!" of the brakeman from the fast approaching cars gave the men who were at work on the engine barely time enough to escape being carrried over with it.

A bold attempt was made Tuesday night, the 18th, to rob the National Bank of Ansonia, Conn. Five masked burglars surprised and overpowered John Buckley, the watchman, while he was eating his lunch in the boiler-room of a factory adjoining the bank, and after chaining him to a steam pipe took the keys of the bank from his pocket and entered at the rear door. A small orifice in the stone vault was made by nitro-glycerine, but the safe could not be reached and the burglars left at four o'clock on a hand-car, going down the Naugatuck road and taking the 5:30 A. M. train to New York. There was only about $8000 in the safe at the time. A number of jimmies were found near the bank, and a bottle of nitro-glycerine.

The Beecher-Tilton imbroglio draws no nearer its conclusion very fast. Moulton and Tilton will make more "statements;" the examining committee of Plymouth church will exonerate Beecher; and Morris & Pearsall, Tilton's lawyers, have given Beecher formal notice of the commencement of a law suit, in answer to which Sherman & Sterling, Beecher's lawyers, request the immediate service of papers. All hands seem to be up in arms and eager for the fray. Bowen, in the Independent, defends Beecher and throws a brick at the "blamelessly pure" Woodhull of Tilton, who first stirred up the scandal in the interests of a pure morality and an enlightened "social republic."

It is reported that General Custer's expedition was attacked by 4000 Indians and that the latter were repulsed.

Recent earthquake shocks are reported from Grenada, Trinidad, Demarara and Berlice.

Advices from China indicate the probability of a war with Japan.

Secretary Fish pronounces the recent reports of the intended cession by Spain of the island of Porto Rico to Germany as without the shadow of foundation in fact, and as inventions of the most absurd character.

The second day's races at Springfield, Mass., were attended by fifteen or eighteen thousand peopel. Goldsmith Maid won the free-to-all purse and trotted the second heat in 2:16.

A serious disturbance between the whites and blacks in Chicot county, Arkansas, is reported, and both parties are arming.

The Americans won the international cricket match at Halifax.

The loss by the flood at Austin, Nevada, August 18, caused by a cloud-burst, will amount to over $100,000. The people were warned in time by a messenger on horseback, and escaped to the hills. The deluge was about ten feet deep as it rushed down the canon. No lives were lost.

Southern Notes.

[Portland Press.]

The frequency of murder and assassination is so remarkable in Kentucky as to lead a contemporary to remark that it is fashionable in that section to die with boots on. In speaking of the alarming prevalence of murder in that State, the Louisville Courier-Journal says that in "the dark and bloody days of the early settlers there was not a tithe of the murder done which has disgraced the soil of Kentucky the past year. Every coward and bully goes armed. Every case of manslaughter goes unpunished. Every case of shooting with intent to kill passes by as an amusing episode, provided there is no funeral. Red-handed murderers roam at large among respectable people and occupy places of trust." "In a word," says this paper, "there is no security for life because there is no law for those who take it in Kentucky." And yet democracy has had its full sway in that state for a generation.

The difference between the so-called justice which is meted out to white and colored offenders, is strongly contrasted by several accounts furnished in a single issue of a paper a few days since. In Martinsburg, West Virginia, a negro was taken from jail while solemnly protesting his innocence, and strung up by a mob of white men. In Augusta, Ga., on the same day, a drunken negro who shot a railroad employee was taken to jail. Sunday three hundred "respectable" citizens took the culprit from prison and shot him on the parade ground. Still, on the same day, at Kingston, Tenn., a negro was approached by a white man on horseback, who after accosting him, shot him dead without provocation. This assassin then went his way, for it was not necessary for him to escape as no pursuit was attempted, and no action is likely to be taken to bring the murderer to punishment. The Dr. Smith who caused the trouble at Austin, Miss., by shooting a colored girl, was released from prison by his white friends because they heard a desire expressed by negroes to lynch him. The fact is, colored men are strung up or shot every week in the South, without any pretence of a trial, while white assassins can with impunity indulge in the luxury of shooting a "nigger."

Cats in Old Times.

An article on the "Cats of Antiquity," in the Transatlantic Magazine, is full of learning and quite amusing. The writer tells us that the Egyptian cat was of a larger and a wilder breed. "However, a a cat of some kind this animal was; we have statues and medals and pictures showing his form. We have his mummy and mummy cases, all cat-like; and finally, the Egyptians called him 'Maou.' It was very considerate to give him his own cry for a cognomen." As to the Roman cats, we learn that Pliny speaks of cats, and so does Palladius, a writer of the times of the Roman decadence; and from the latter we learn that they were useful in clearing granaries of mice. All thanks to the man for his information, although we could have guessed as much. Of modern cats the writer says: "The catamount of North America is not a cat, but a much larger animal, and of a different species. The wild cat of Europe is but the tame cat in a savage state. The Manx cat not only differs from the common breed in having no tail, but his hind legs are longer, his head larger, and his intelligence higher. Possibly the spinal nervous force which was formerly absorbed by his caudal extremity has ascended into his brain and reinforced its action. The suggestion is thrown out for the benefit of those philosophers who insist that man's first step in improvement was in getting rid of his tail. If this reasoning is correct, we may expect something great of the Japanese pussy, which is also tailless.

Hay, Fine and Coarse.

Producers are sometimes puzzled to know why buyers ask for coarse, well matured hay in preference to the more tender and in reality more nutritious kinds. The Live Stock Journal thus enlightens them: "City men feed hay for a different purpose than the farmer. The farmer feeds it for its nutriment as a principal food, while the city man regards grain as the cheapest food, and only gives sufficient hay to make bulk in the stomach, and for the purpose of health. Coarse well-matured timothy serves this purpose better than the early cut and fine grasses. They don't desire hay that will tempt horses to eat too much of it. Straw would answer this purpose if cut and mixed with grain, about as well. But farmers should be content with this practice of the city customer, for it enables them to sell their poor hay for the best price, and to retain the best quality for home consumption."

—Mrs. Sartoris is coming back for a short visit, and every woman in the country is anxious to know how many of those dresses she has had made over.

Mischief in the Air.

We cannot analyze the aerial poisons that produce epidemic and endemic diseases; but the valuable discoveries which have been made in vegetable pharmacy enables us to counteract their malific influence. The most powerful known antidote to every species of malaria is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a pure botanical medicine, in which the finest antiseptics, tonics, alteratives and stimulants of the vegetable kingdom are skillfully and effectively combined. At seasons of the year when the atmosphere is surcharged with miasma, and whenever the specific virus of any infectious disease is supposed to be persent in the air, this famous corrective should be taken regularly as a protective. All who choose to observe this precaution may bid defiance to intermittent and remittent fevers, and in fact to all disorders generated by foul exhalations of impure water.

Local Matters.

The Ocean Yacht Race

Came off as announced, on Thursday, the boats being started nearly on time. The day was warm and muggy, rain falling in the morning. The trains from Dover, Boston, Concord and the east brought hundreds of spectators to the scene, and as the weather began to brighten every means of conveyance was improved to get a glimpse of the race. Steamer Major made an extra morning trip to the Shoals, returning to take out her regular passengers at 11 A. M. Steamer Appledore went out crowded, and was accompanied by U. S. S. Speedwell with the navy yard authorities and invited guests. Tug Clara Bateman followed, having schooner Union Flag with a large party on board. Other and smaller schooners were also chartered, and with the many sail and row boats made a lively scene in the river and harbor. Large parties rendezvoused at Gerrish's and Wood islands and improved the waiting moments by getting up the most delicious of fish chowders and cunner fries. The beaches also had their full quotas of spectators, a favorite resort being "The Wentworth" and vicinity. Excursion parties from Boston, Salem and Newburyport cruised about the Shoals, there being about two thousand people assembled there. About twice as many must have seen the race. At Gerrish's island, where Messrs. G. M. Goodrich, G. W. Heaton, Jos. R. Curtis and others have been in camp for several weeks, bunting was displayed in profusion and a young cannon belched forth its welcomes as yacht after yacht rounded the buoy at Kitt's rock and darted eastward. Seen from this point the scene was an inspiring one. Just before the boom of the preparation gun was heard from the Shoals (which were befogged,) the wind was blowing freshly from the southeast and several Portsmouth sail-boats heavily loaded and bound for the Shoals began to take in water and were obliged to put back for the islands, their occupants being drenched to the skin. The second gun was heard at twenty minutes before one o'clock and still the fog obscured the vision. Suddenly, however, the wind lulled, the fog lifted and the Shoals were plainly seen. But of far greater interest was the long-stretching line of yachts just visible. A few minutes and then they came more boldly into view, the first gaining perceptibly on its neighbors and flying every stitch of available canvas, the others struggling for second place with great pertinacity. Gracefully came the leader around Kitt's rock buoy, a good three minutes ahead; then followed a schooner and sloop swooping along as if life and death depended on their movements. Mile after mile they were nearly side by side, until as they passed on the sun came out to render their rivalry more conspicuous. The sloop took second place long before Boon island was reached and the schooner dropped astern.

But while we were eagerly watching the constantly recurring trials of speed as boat after boat majestically rounded the buoy at Kitts' rock, overlooking the little island between us and the contestants as they swiftly skimmed past it, and as the sun lighted up the sails in the distance till the whole looked like a vast panorama, along came trooping the boats entered for the second race, for so admirable were the arrangements that the signal guns followed each other like clock-work and while we were watching the first-class yachts the second class were well under way. And there they were miles away, huddled up as if each was straining every nerve for the desired advantage. The crowds on the island burst forth into cheers as they crowd sail for the lead. The enthusiastic Curtis, the terror of the ladies on account of the celerity of his gunnery, rams down another charge, the equally agile assistant at the halliards dips the signal flags and the cannon repeats itself as the agile sloops go dancing by. And now as if especially favored, ten miles away the fog clears, and the third-class yachts are seen following each other around Appledore, their outlines distinct even without the use of the glass. A steamer has followed the second class yachts and halts to see them round the buoy. Far to the eastward still heading for Boon island are seen the white sails of the larger craft; south-easterly go the sloops bound for Murray's rock buoy, gliding along as if by magic. The latter reach their second turn first, three go around in a clump and finally all are on the homeward track. Now or never must victory be gained. Those who lost distance at first may here regain it. Boon island has been reached and rounded and some thirty odd yachts are now on the same tack. Do you think it worth seeing? Are you repaid for your trouble? But there is something to be added. Around Appledore, Smutty-nose, Star and White islands come the yachts engaged in the third race, and as thoughts of that chowder and hot coffee chase away the dissolving view of the races so successfully begun and so nearly ended, we imagine the impatient comments of the thousands waiting at the finish, the many queries as to whether this yacht or that leads and whether the allowance will give victory to any one of its rivals. We return home leaving for other searchers for information the dry details of the start, the finish, the time, the judgment and the awards.

A grand hop at the Oceanic, in the evening, wound up the affair.

Laconics.

The grand ball at the Sea View House, Rye Beach, comes off this (Friday) evening, and if the weather is favorable a large number of Mr. Lougee's friends will be present from this city. Military and dance music by Harlow's Marine Band.

On Saturday evening the "celebrated Texas Minstrels" will give one of their magnificent entertainments, just such an one as they have given with immense enthusiasm before the "crowned heads" of Europe, at the Farragut House, Rye Beach. Free list entirely suspended! Tickets fifty cents, reserved seats seventy-five cents. A. Ranger is the manager of this excellent company; and Mr. E. M. Bezzler, whose fame is widespread in this country, handles the funds,—he has handled the funds of a good many associations before this one. Mr. D. O. Wright (unknown) is their secretary.

On Sunday morning a special camp-meeting train will run over the Eastern Railroad to Wolfeboro', returning in the afternoon,—fare for the round trip $1.90. See advertisement.

The Congressional naval committee was joined in Boston, Wednesday, by Secretary Robeson and Commodore Howell of this navy yard, the whole party taking a trip to Minot's Ledge Light in the afternoon. At noon of Thursday the party sailed on the Despatch for this port, arriving in the evening.

Mr. B. F. Webster has got the work on Miss Morgan's young ladies' seminary well advanced, and the large building looks very much handsomer than we at one time supposed it ever would, and gives quite a metropolitan air to the rapidly-growing part of the city where it is situated. A picket fence has been put up around the seminary grounds, either to keep the young ladies in or the young fellows out, we don't know which,—perhaps both. The building is most judiciously "cut up" inside, being perfectly adapted for its destined use while there is not a bit of room wasted. Now if somebody would only fix up Richards avenue so that it would look half-way decent, and somebody else would only do something toward availing the city of Mr. Elwyn's generous offer of land for a public mall, what a nice place those young ladies would have to complete their education in.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brawny, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions disease of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Surf-Bathing.

The Post says that the numerous cases of drowning among surf-bathers, which are reported as happening at about the same time at several of the more popular seaside resorts, must throw a hush of dread over even the most daring of those who have enjoyed the luxury of salt water baths during the season. The drowning of the leader of the Mansion House band at Long Branch, of a young lady, and the policeman who attempted her rescue at Coney Island, of a Boston gentleman at Cape Elizabeth, and the instances of other accidents which would have resulted fatally had it not been for more effective exertions than those of the almost victims, show that sea bathing is not always the harmless amusement that one might infer from hearing it talked about a hundred miles inland. There can be no rules made that can strictly regulate sea-bathing, but the pastime can be kept safe and healthful provided bathers will study the element and correctly measure their natatory powers. No one need be deterred by this sudden accumulation and multiplicity of accidents from dipping in the ocean waves, but the warning against recklessness and over-confidence is loud and unmistakable.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH of the City of Portsmouth call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the City to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER 10.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 8. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 19. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 20. No person shall use or occupy any building in the compact part of the city for a slaughter-house, or for trying tallow, or for currying leather, or for the deposit of green pelts or skins, unless under such restrictions and regulations as the health officers may impose.

SEC. 22. Any person or persons who shall violate any rule or regulation, or commit any act forbidden in any section of this ordinance, to which no special penalty is annexed, shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty dollars, to be recovered by complaint before the police court of this city.

SEC. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice to the Health Officers.

SEC. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the Small Pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect, forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the Health Officers in the name of the city. m25 d3m

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

NO. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, add legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to base the character of a tonic, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Dreadful Nervous Debility and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in be glass.

HATHAWAY SHIRTS,

—A FEW MORE OF THOSE—

CELEBRATED HATHAWAY SHIRTS,

Cut Low in the Neck, at

William P. Walker's, jy3 tt No. 8 Market Square.

Daily Chronicle.

A Masonic Goat.

[Sonoma (Cal.) Democrat.]

In a small village, not a thousand miles from this place, a certain divine, whose church is strongly opposed to secret societies, announced, a few weeks ago, that he would deliver a discourse against Free-masonry. The appointment was for Saturday night, and a large audience came out to hear him. Just as the speaker began to warm up with his subject, a lot of boys went up to the door, and opening it shoved in an old billy goat, and locked the door on the out-side. Now this old goat was a notorious fellow. The boys about town had teased and "fooled" with him so much that he was "always on the fight." When thrust into the large company that composed the audience of the reverend speaker, he was not at all abashed, but began looking around for a foeman worthy of his horns. Soon he discovered the speaker gesticulating in the further end of the room, and with a few preliminary nods, to assure himself that his neck was in good working order, he made for him on the double quick.

It was if the ghost of the traditional Masonic goat was after him. Dodging around the pulpit the lecturer managed to elude Billy's well-aimed butts. Down among the audience they came, the pursued and the pursuer. Women and children mounted the benches, and such a scene of confusion and such an uproar is not often seen in a solemn assembly. In the meantime the boys were firing a volley of stones at the end of the building. By a strategic movement the goat was caught and tied to a bench, and the congregation quieted down. The speaker resumed his subject. Billy stood quietly for a while, but when one of the boys, who knew his tricks, made a motion at him, Billy bleated out a defiance and tried to burst his bonds, creating about as much confusion as before. When the door was opened all were glad to get out, except Billy, who felt that he had not got half a show.

Memories of Temple Bar.

As the Temple Bar threatens to fall to pieces of its own accord if it is not soon removed, the London papers are recalling some of the historical associations connected with that famous structure. The London Daily News says:

Although a structure designed by Sir Christopher Wren, and not actually erected till 1670, can scarcely be called an antiquarian curiosity, still the old gateway was connected in an interesting fashion with many historic scenes and venerable customs. Above all, it formed the ancient entrance into the City of London proper; the present archway inheriting the traditions of the ruder devices of former days, when the City of London was separated from the City of Westminster by posts, rails, and a chain. On the occasion of a royal visit, the Lord Mayor of London is accustomed to shut himself up as did that Sir William Wastle whose defiance of Cromwell's soldiers has earned him immortality in children's rhymes and games. Temple Bar is formally closed. The royal processsion has to wait outside until the citizens of London are summoned by herald to afford it free passage; and then, when the gates are thrown open, the Lord Mayor advances to offer the sword of the city to his sovereign, who, of course, is pleased to restore it to his custody. When last her Majesty paused at Temple Bar to receive an address of loyal welcome from the Chief Magistrate of the city, the solemnity of the occasion was not a little marred by the difficulty experienced by His Lordship in descending from and remounting his horse. Indeed, no one can look dignified in getting upon a chair in order to vault on horseback. But then the Lord Mayor wore the robes of office such as were worn in former times; and at no point in the world's history could even the most agile of men have leaped gracefully into the saddle if he were encumbered by voluminous and rather grandmotherly-looking skirts. Doubtless Cromwell paid little attention to the troubles of the Lord Mayor in respect of his clothes when the Lord Protector was received at Temple Bar with all the orthodox ceremonies; and Queen Anne, when she came to thank Heaven for the Duke of Marlborough's victories, probably regarded the performance at Temple Bar as a curious old ceremony, pretty much as we should regard it now. There was less grotesqueness, however, about another of the customs connected with Temple Bar—the sticking up there of the heads of executed traitors and rebels. That was a grisly sight for honest citizens to see, as they came out for a walk into the fields of an evening; yet they did not scruple to hire spying-glasses to have a better view.

Trained Birds.

The Baltimore American gives the following account of a troop of trained Java sparrows and paroquets now exhibiting in the streets of that city: "When a suitable place is found, a circular table is opened and the birds are all turned loose upon it; they manifest no fear at the crowd, and do not offer to escape. The performance consists of ringing bells, trundling small wheelbarrows, slack wire walking, firing off pistols, dancing, swinging each other in small swings, an excellent imitation of a trapeze performance, and a number of other equally interesting tricks. The most wonderful part of the performance, however, is done by the paroquet. The bird walks to the centre of the table, and, after bowing to the crowd, seats himself in a small chair near a bell. To the clapper of the bell there is attached a small cord, and anyone in the crowd is allowed to ask the bird to strike any number of times upon the bell. If asked to strike ten times, he leaves the chair, seizes the bell-rope, and pulls it ten times, after which he bows and returns to his seat. This was repeated a great many times, and, with one exception the bird made no mistake. The bird will strike twenty-seven times, but after that he refuses; and his owner states that he has worked nearly a year to get this bird to strike up to thirty, but it appears that his memory gives out at that point, and it is unable to count further. A collection is, of course, taken up after each exhibition."

Letter From New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20, 1874.

The discussions over the great scandal still hold sway here, though occupying less of the space of the daily press. The case is left in a favorable position for people to believe as they want to. There is no novel so striking in incidents and persons as this case has developed. While the overwhelming sentiment of the press here favors Beecher, there is one point in the case fearfully against him. It is irreconcilable with Mrs. Tilton's reverence for the church and its ministers, that she should put in writing a confession of adulterous intercourse with one falsely, or that, if it was extorted from her by her husband, Beecher, or anybody else who knew it, would tolerate him for a moment. It would be so base conduct for a Five Points panel thief that his associates would cut his company to save their respectability and standing. It is easy to see, but for this, that a great, generous and magnanimous nature, like Beecher's, could do as he has done if he had advised separation for Mrs. Tilton and had informed Bowen that Tilton was behaving badly and would bring the Independent he was editing into difficulty, if Tilton had gone to him in his troubles for assistance; and how he would be pained that his advice was causing impending pecuniary ruin and a blighted home. But it is impossible to conceive how he would do anything of the kind for a man who came to force it from him, with a false accusation supported by an extorted confession, or how he could be pained by advising separation from such a villain, while if the accusation had foundation in fact, and Tilton for the sake of his own family and the family and friends of Beecher, had condoned with his wife, and saved the consequences of exposure, the conduct of all the parties becomes consistent. My inclination is to believe against my judgment.

THE POLITICAL ELEMENTS

here in the city are complicated beyond explanation. In State politics there is a mixed muddle, which now bids fair to end with Dix again the republican candidate, and Church as the opposition nominee. The temperance people will oppose Dix, but that will not greatly hurt him. The Custom House republicans, led by Cornell and Laflin, would prefer some other man. They want to make Conkling a Presidential candidate and Dix who is thought a rival they want more in the shade. The Herald, assisted by some antiquated Virginia F. F. V's, by letters with local press comments, copied in the Washington papers, has created a serious feeling in some quarters that there is a systematic movement to bring out General Grant for a third term, and that all these southern letters copied in Washington are feelers of the public pulse. The Courier-Journal of Louisville, last winter gave currency to the same idea for the purpose of fomenting jealousies and divisions among aspirants; and much of the financial discussions have the same purpose.

In regard to the

it is too early for anybody to have any very well settled opinion. The best informed, and those most likely to have definite views and purposes, have but a vague and shadowy outline of the measures and line of policy on which parties will divide in the election. I mean of course the new measures which are pushing themselves upon public attention, as the old measures become historical. In fact there are so many disorganizing questions and diverse personal interests that it would be hazardous to predict the policy or action of a controlling number of States. The list of Presidential aspirants is already large, and will grow indefinitely the coming year. The successes South are just now swelling the hopes of the democracy, and as there is no man South who can be the democratic candidate, having the most of the democratic votes, the South will want to select the candidate. There is quite another element wanting to occupy more advanced ground than suits the Bourbons of the party, and who will smash the machine, if they can't have some influence in running it. With one element Thurman is too cold, intellectual and Bourbonish; Hendricks too long on the stocks, with the eastern money power against him. The debts and general poverty of the South make them averse to the specie paying Seymourite wing. A split among the democracy is more, likely than a close combination of all its conflicting elements. There are some who look to Judge Davis as the coming man for the opposition. But for the opposition of the free traders, and the free trade quadrilateral press, he would have been nominated at Cincinnati at the last election, and been a dangerous competitor. In defeating him, they precipitated a combination which nominated Greeley and killed their movement. Davis was rejected at his flood-tide and won't work well again on an ebb. Sherman, who has had some attention of late, is too eccentric and uncertain to train well.

There are many possible Republican candidates, among whom at present stands most prominent in the East and Morton and Washburne in the West. Each has peculiar elements of strength, and the vibrations of the coming year will see the friends of each many times elated and depressed. Washburn has the advantage Buchanan had, of being out of the country, while the Kilkenny game helps to clear the field for him. Gen. Garfield at one time had friends who counted upon him as the coming man among republicans. His location, moderate views on tariff and finance, his good character, great industry and fair ability, with an army connection, made him in their eyes, more than a possible candidate, before he was wrecked on Credit Mobelier and paving contracts. They are now looking for some one else to fill their bill of requirements, and seem to be centering upon the Secretary of the Treasury. The Washington correspondent of the Tribune, and one or two short Tribune editorials allude to the feelers which have been put out within a few weeks. They claim his action when his State was in a position of neutrality but really staying the advance of the Union forces, gave him a record of patriotism but few prominent men had an opportunity to make. His army record would be greatly to his advantage. His official standing at the Bar, and his selection and nomination as Attorney General, fix him as one of the able lawyers of the country. His executive ability in the Treasury so far as manifested counts in his favor. His frank manners and commanding personal appearance and ability gave him a favorable standing with the financial men of this metropolis, while making the recent loan. He also has the advantage of freedom from antagonisms with those republicans who have decided on finance and other questions. He certainly has many points in his favor and is likely to become a formidable candidate for the nomination, under good training.

I intended to say something on

George C. Harding, editor and proprietor of the Indianapolis Herald, shot Colonel Moritz, a prominent merchant. The occasion of the shooting was the alleged improper intimacy of Moritz with the daughter of Harding, as a result of which she is supposed to have taken poison, as she died suddenly. Harding is under $10,000 bail to await the result of Moritz's wounds. The public feeling is very strongly in sympathy with Harding.

The information in the hands of the United States Attorney General, from the South, leads him to entertain the greatest anxiety and apprehension in regard to the future of that portion of the country, and to believe that the past disturbances are but the beginning of a general conflict of the races.

Francis D. Moulton's statement was published on Friday and is very important.

It has just been discovered that Hon. J. J. Parker was in 1870 voted for and elected as Secretary of State in Alabama on ballots printed John J. Parker, whereas his name is Jabez Jackman Parker; and, therefore, technically speaking, his colored competitor was elected to the position, but no one was sharp enough to find it out at the time.

The body of Asa Smith (the young man from St. Louis who was drowned at Biddeford Pool a few weeks since) was found Monday morning by Ivory Smart and James Bruel, two boys sixteen years of age. When found the body was wedged in between the rocks about one hundred rods from where Mr. Smith went in bathing. The fish had commenced working on it and the flesh had been eaten from the fingers, with the exception of that one on which remained the diamond ring. The reward offered for the finding of the body will fall into hands where it will do considerable good. Young Smart, some months since, lost a portion of his arm by the premature discharge of a gun.

Medill's Conclusions About Whiskey.

[Chicago Tribune.]

Whiskey is the devil that makes the mischief wherever it is tolerated, whether in America, England, Ireland or Scotland. There are 200,000,000 of people in Europe, outside of Great Britain and Russia, who drink nothing stronger than wine or beer; and, among all that vast mass, outnumbering the population of the United States five times, there is less drunkenness, and fewer arrests made on charges of "drunk and disorderly," than in the single city of Chicago, which contains not one five-hundreth of their population. This is an absolute fact—a naked truth—which it would be well for both liquor advocates and prohibitionists to turn over in their minds, digest well, and draw rational conclusions therefrom. A crusade against whiskey as a beverage would be a legitimate and beneficent war, which, if crowned with success by the extirpation of the accursed fluid from the entire Union, would be a most inestimable public blessing. As a temperance measure the tax on whiskey should be quadrupled, while that on light wine should be reduced one fourth of existing imposts.

California Customs.

Frederick Jackson, of San Francisco, recently brought a suit for divorce against his wife, and after its commencement the lady went to his house and carried off their child, about three years old, conveying it to the house of G. E. P. Hunt, with whom her relations appear to be intimate. Previous to these proceedings, however, Mr. Hunt wrote to Mr. Jackson the following letter, which has been produced in court as part of the documents in the case:

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4, 1874.

Friend Fred: I suppose you will be greatly surprised to receive this letter from me, and still more surprised to hear what I want. I want your Bessie. My wife is going to get a divorce from me on the ground of adultery, which was committed one year ago, and if you will only free Bessie I want to make her my lawful wife. I love her dearly, she loves me, and we can be happy together. I will pay the expenses of the suit. If you really love her, you would rather see her happy than as she is. My wife and myself have never got along happily together, and I never loved her as I love Bessie Jackson. From yours, truly,

GEO. E. P. HUNT.

P. S.—Bessie is not at my house now, on account of talk. Please answer. Address steamer Caroline, care of C. A. Hooper & Co.

The child being brought into court on a writ of habeas corpus, its custody was temporarily given to Mr. Jackson's father.

Mischief in the Air.

We cannot analyze the aerial poisons that produce epidemic and endemic diseases; but the valuable discoveries which have been made in vegetable pharmacy enables us to counteract their malific influence. The most powerful known antidote to every species of malaria is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a pure botanical medicine, in which the finest antiseptics, tonics, alteratives and stimulants of the vegetable kingdom are skillfully and effectively combined. At seasons of the year when the atmosphere is surcharged with miasma, and whenever the specific virus of any infectious disease is supposed to be present in the air, this famous corrective should be taken regularly as a protective. All who choose to observe this precaution may bid defiance to intermittent and remittent fevers, and in fact to all disorders generated by foul exhalations of impure water.

Resisting the Evil One.

[New Orleans Times.]

At a camp-meeting not long ago, a man clad in a thin linen suit seated himself on one of the rickety benches beside a fat man who occupied a full one-third of the concern. When the services were ended the fat man arose, and the gentleman in thin linen suddenly began twisting about in a surprising manner, while his countenance was significant of mortal anguish. His actions attracted the attention of some of the brethren, and one of them, a solemn-visaged individual, who looked as though he had just swallowed a pill, approached the writhing body, and laid his hand on the man's shoulder, and said: "Brother, if you are resisting the promptings of the Evil One, strive manfully, and you will triumph at last. Remember Joseph wrestled with the angel, and—" "I dunno but he did," interrupted the agonized man; "but if Jacob had the seat of his trowsers and a little of his meat caught in a condemned crack, he wouldn't feel like raslin' with an angel or any other critter!"

The Sequel.

We are indebted to Mr. S. W. Harding of the New York Spirit of the Times for a report of the supplementary yacht race which came off on Friday. Some dissatisfaction having been shown on Thursday evening, in regard to the course gone over, it was decided to have another race for the remaining prizes, which resulted as follows:

The winner for second class keels was the "Saxon." Time, 1h., 29m., 30sec. In the race for third class yachts, the centre-board boat "Fannie" won in 1h., 15m., 45s., the keel boat "Sunbeam" going in 1h., 29m., 50s. Four boats contested, starting as follows:

Fannie	9	41	10
Sunbeam	9	39	10
Mabel	9	36	20
Olive	9	36	45

Fannie	10	56	55

At Kittery, they will be joined by Dirigo Encampment and Riverside Lodge of that town. The Naval Band will accompany them. There are to be fifty organizations and seventeen bands in the procession at Portland. A clam-bake at Little Diamond island and a grand ball at the City Hall are the principal festivities. The Portsmouth organizations will probably return on the morning train of Wednesday, arriving here at 4.10.

The Journal opens the ball for the renomination and re-election of "all the present faithful officials." 'Tis well.

The cable of the former company is to be laid from a point south of Valentia to Conception Bay, N. F. "Wholesome competition will speedily reduce the tariff of charges, and the world at large will reap the benefit." The new cable, the shore end of which was lately laid at Rye, is superior to any previously laid across the Atlantic, and its general electrical condition, when finally tested, was found to be most satisfactory.

The Boston Globe's description of the yacht race is complete, filling nearly two columns. It is unnecessary to say that it is the best account published.

Yacht Vindex, winner of the first prize for first-class yachts in the Oceanic races, was sailed by Pilot Nelson Goodrich of this city, who not only received a very satisfactory pecuniary "remembrance" for his services but was also the recipient of a very complimentary letter of acknowledgement from the President of the New York Yacht Club, of which body the Vindex's owner is a member.

To accommodate those persons who may desire to go from this city to the camp meeting at Alton Bay next week,—and turn an honest penny at the same time,—the Eastern Railroad managers will run a special train over the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad every day, leaving this city at ten minutes past 7 o'clock in the morning and arriving at Dover in time to connect with the 8 o'clock train over the Cocheco road to Alton Bay, where passengers will arrive at 9 o'clock. Returning, the special train will leave Dover at 6:10 P. M., arriving here at about 7 o'clock. Half-fare only will be charged. If desired, passengers can reach the camp ground at noon by taking the regular 10 o'clock train to Dover.

On Sunday a trip from Dover to this city by rail, and from this city to the Shoals, Boon Island and York Beach per steamer "Mojor," can be made, the steamer returning in time for the 5:30 P. M. train for Dover. Tickets for the round trip, $1.

Another Naval War.

Considerable excitement was occasioned in nautical circles on Lake Winnepesaukee by the seizure on Thursday of four small steamers, for alleged violation of the United States inspection laws, the penalty for which is a fine of $500. As near as we can ascertain the facts are as follows: The large lake steamers, the Mount Washington, Lady of the Lake, and James Bell, have all complied with the requirements of the law, by having hulls, boilers, etc., duly inspected; but the smaller ones, viz: the Mayflower, Capt. Swett, of Wolfeboro', the Winnepesaukee, Capt. Lamprey, of Moultonboro', the Ossipee, Capt. Hall, of Melvin Village, and the Morning Star, a steam launch owned by Mr. John W. Avery of South Wolfeboro', have never been inspected at all. The last named four are ostensibly for towing only, but at certain seasons they carry large numbers of passengers, picnic and excursion parties, etc. The matter having been brought to the notice of Collector Howard, that officer has promptly proceeded against the four steamers by libel in the U. S. District Court, resulting in their seizure on Thursday, as before stated, by the U. S. Marshal for this district. Possibly the attached steamers may be perfectly safe, and possibly the government may have no authority to enforce its inspection laws on a body of water entirely in a single State; but it is safe to say that if any one of the uninspected steamers had been blown up by a defective boiler the Collector also would have been blown up by the public for not attending to the duties of his position. We believe legal questions which have never before been brought before the courts will come up in connection with this seizure, but however the courts may decide the Collector is right in his action. If the national inspection laws do not apply to steamers on the lake it should be known, that the State may take proper measures for the protection of the public.
